Army Flier Dies as 'Chute Fails in D. C. Crash; 1 Hurt

Capt. Wendell Brookley Victim of Tragedy at Bolling Field.

Capt. Estabrook In Grave Condition

Saves Life by Staying in Ship That Fell With Broken "Prop."

One Army captain was killed and another seriously injured when the plane in which they were making a practice flight crashed at the southern end of Bolling Field late yesterday.

Capt. Wendell H. Brookley died when his parachute failed to open as he "bailed out" little more than 100 feet from the ground.

Capt. Merrick G. Estabrook, jr., fell with the ship. He suffered a broken leg and head injuries. After being given first aid at the field hospital, he was taken to Walter Reed Hospital, where it was said his condition was serious.

Both officers were attached to the office of Maj. Gen. Benjamin Foulois, Chief of the Army Air Corps, and both lived in Chevy Chase. They were fliers with many years of experience.

Propeller Breaks.

With Capt. Brookley piloting and Capt. Estabrook riding as an observer, the two fliers had just completed a flight to the Middletown (Pa.) Air Depot.

Taking off a second time, they were still flying low when a part of the propeller of the open, two-seated plane broke off. The remaining portion of the propeller, out of balance, tore the motor from the plane as it fell.

Capt. Brookley was dead when he was picked up. He had pulled the rip cord of his parachute, but there had not been sufficient altitude for it to open.

The plane crashed in an inaccessible part of the field, where grading had not been completed, and it was impossible for ambulances to get near the wrecked plane. A police rescue squad assisted soldiers in removing Estabrook from the wreckage and in carrying him and the body of Brookley to ambulances.

A part of the broken propeller was picked up several yards back of the spot at which the plane crashed.

Both fliers served in the World War.

Capt. Brookley was born March 31, 1896, at Juniata, Nebr. He enlisted in the aviation section of the Signal

Sheriff Shot In Court Room

Assailant Hurls Bomb, Which Fails to Work, at Brother's Trial.

Springfield, Mass., Feb. 28 (AP).—Sheriff David J. Manning was shot in the thigh late today in the Hampden County Superior Court police said, by John Kaminski, who also hurled a bomb, the percussion cap of which exploded. The shooting and the explosion occurred just after a jury trying Kaminski's brother, Alexander, and Paul Wargo, of Wallingford, Conn., for murder had left the room.

The contents of the bomb, held in a bottle-like container, did not explode. Because the shooting and the bomb-throwing came almost simultaneously, police did not learn what had caused Manning's wound until he reached a hospital.

From police headquarters across the street from the courthouse, scores of officers rushed to join deputy sheriffs in overcoming Kaminski. The latter charged Manning with "framing" his brother.

Kaminski wore a steel vest and was within 3 feet of Manning when he fired. On him were found two pistols, two knives and two packages.

The defendants were being tried for the murder of Merritt W. Hayden, a jail guard, during an escape last October.

Chestertown Food Cut Off by Storm

Snow Blocks Eastern Shore Traffic Lanes.

Chestertown, Md., Feb. 28 (Spl.). Snowdrifts of 5 to 10 feet deep were blown across the Eastern Shore highway at Cecilton, between here and Elkton, early today, tying up all motor traffic.

Mail trucks from Elkton south are snowbound and trucks bringing provisions to stores are held up, causing a food shortage here. Provisions are dwindling in local grocery and meat stores.

Motor traffic south to Easton also is halted and county roads in upper Eastern Shore counties are blocked. Farmers can not bring milk to shipping centers for the Philadelphia market. School buses from rural districts also have stopped.

Big Riding Hall At Fort Myer Razed by Fire

D. C. Apparatus Called; Blaze Visible for Ten Miles.

A roaring fire last night destroyed the Third Cavalry riding hall at Fort Myer, Va., and menaced the entire Army post as District, Arlington County and military fire apparatus battled the flames.

Breaking out shortly after 8 p. m., the fire gained rapid headway. Flames were visible all over downtown Washington. Calls flooded newspaper offices, asking whereabouts of the blaze.

First reports attributed the fire to overheated furnaces. There were no persons or horses in the expansive structure, first advices said.

Stables 100 feet away from the hall were protected by apparatus. Several carpenter and mechanical shops were menaced by flames.

The wooden grandstands inside the big structure served as tinder for the blaze and as they burned the fire attacked more substantial parts of the building.

The riding hall has been the scene of numerous shows attended by official and social Washington. It is approximately 225 feet long, 75 feet high and about 100 feet wide.

Red glare of the flames brought sightseers from all over Arlington County and many from the District. Fort Myer is situated on a promontory overlooking the Capital, and as the fire reached its peak, the reflection could be seen for at least 10 miles.

2 Members to Resign From Spanish Cabinet

Madrid, Feb. 28 (AP).—Reorganization of the cabinet was considered tonight by Premier Alejandro Lerroux after announcement was made that two ministers planned to resign.

The two ministers, Diego Martinez Barrios, heading the department of the interior and once premier, and Gomez Lara, minister of the treasury, threatened to quit when the largest minority supporting party, the Catholic agragrian bloc of 117 Deputies, decided to oppose government policies.

Black Watch Hero Dies of Pneumonia

Baron Sempill, 71, Was Wounded at Loos.

Fintray House, Aberdeenshire, Feb. 28 (AP).—Baron Sempill, 71, died of pneumonia today. He had never fully recovered from the spine wounds he received in France at the Battle of Loos, September 25, 1915, when he was colonel in command of the Eighth Battalion of the famous Black Watch.

His son, Col. William Francis Forbes-Sempill, master of Sempill, succeeds to the title as nineteenth Baron of Sempill.

The late baron's anxiety for this son, who was injured in an automobile accident in Chicago last year, told severely upon his health.

Pu Yi Is Sworn As Emperor Of Manchukuo

(Copyright, 1934, by United Press.)

Hsinking, Manchukuo (Thursday), March 1 (U.P.).—Henry Pu Yi, once Emperor of all China, and for a quarter of a century a pawn in the warfare and politics of the Orient, today became the first Emperor of Manchukuo, a state carved out of historic old Manchuria.

While Japanese and Manchukuo troops guarded the streets and imperial buildings of the ancient capital of Hsinking, the 29-year-old Pu Yi touched the seal of state and took his regal oath by "heavenly command."

The weather was 17 degrees below zero. But so important was the coronation in the eyes of the nations that foreign newspapermen and officials thronged Hsinking to mingle with thousands of Manchukuo-Chinese, Mongols, White Russians and Japanese, who lined the streets from the royal palace to Shuntien (Light of Heaven) Square, where the monarch of 30,000,000 subjects took his oath before Shang-Ti, supreme being of the Manchu faith.

The coronation ceremonies were traditionally impressive, yet in ac-

Bank Robber Slain, Two Captured by Possemen

Plattsmouth, Nebr., Feb. 28 (AP).—One bank robber was killed and two suspects were captured 20 minutes later by a posse as Deputy Sheriff J. E. Lancester late today frustrated an attempt to rob the Plattsmouth State Bank.

The two captured men gave their names as John R. Langston and John C. Saslowski, both privates at Fort Crook, several miles north of here.

Shanghai, Feb. 28 (AP).—Paul Crawley, an American who recently completed a prison term on McNeil Island following his conviction in the United States Court in Shanghai for smuggling opium from China to America, was refused entrance to China today.

Democrats' Move Perils Pay Return

"Assassinated" Bill to Be Sent Back to Senate Today.

Parley to Consider Amendments Is Called Off.

A possibility that Government employes may not get any of the 15 per cent reduction in pay restored either this year or in the next fiscal year loomed last night after House Democratic leaders mapped their plans for defeating the amendments to the independent offices appropriations bill attached by the Senate.

In a surprise move, Majority Leader Byrns called off a conference of Democrats last night just as the House adjourned for the day. Speaker Rainey then explained that the entire bill, which he declared the Senate had "assassinated," would be returned today to the House Appropriations Committee.

Representative Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, chairman of the subcommittee to which the bill will be referred, said the measure would be allowed to lie idle for the time being and that it was possible that a resolution continuing the current year's appropriations might be put through the House, if it did not appear likely that a bill could be passed which would be signed by the President.

Veto Held Certain.

Democratic leaders were unanimous in the prediction that the President would veto the bill in its present form, although Speaker Rainey and Byrns expressed the belief that a new measure ultimately would be reported to the House.

Speaker Rainey vehemently denounced the action of the Senate in adding $354,432,124 to the bill passed by the House, asserting that it had so emasculated the measure that it is no longer recognizable.

Administration leaders admitted that the huge additions, in the form of veterans' benefits, are responsible for the procedure agreed upon yesterday.

Were it only a matter of adjusting the difference on pay restoration, Woodrum said, the matter would be relatively simple and could be settled in conference. He indicated that the House committee would readily agree to the riginal Senate proposal of restoring 5 per cent as of February 1 and 5 per cent July 1, leaving the remaining 5 per cent restoration up to the President. As it passed the Senate, the bill restores 5 per cent as of February 1 and the remaining 10 per cent July 1.

Roosevelt for House Plan.

Mr. Roosevelt has rather clearly indicated his willingnes to accept the former plan, which would provide an additional 5 per cent to his original plan of returning only 5 per cent on July, Woodrum said, and he said he felt confident that an agreement could have ben reached had not the veterans' amendments made this course appear impossible.

Woodrum said that when the House convenes today he would make a motion to send the independent offices bill with the Senate amendments to conference. A single objection, however, will enable the speaker to return the bill to the Appropriations Committee.

Prettyman Will Take Oath About March 15

E. Barrett Prettyman will take the oath of office as corporation counsel about March 15, it was decided yesterday by the District Commissioners. The new District official has to clear up some business at the Internal Revenue Bureau before he can begin his new task.

The appointment of Prettyman has yet to receive the approval of President Roosevelt, as required by the economy law. Approval is expected within a few days.

11 Years Absence Did Not Stop Pay Checks

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—Criminal action against a former court stenographer who, it is charged, was absent from duty for 11 years, was recommended in a report submitted to the district attorney today.

The report charged that Herman Blume was not only absent from duty at the Second District Municipal Court but that during that time he collected his pay checks and hired a substitute to do his job for less money.

Carnera-Loughran Bout Is Postponed

Rain that fell throughout the day forced the postponement last night of the Primo Carnera-Tommy Loughran world heavyweight championship fight at Miami, Fla.

Madison Square Garden officials announced that the bout would be staged tonight, weather permitting. Weather forecasts, however, held out the probability of more rain today and tonight, in which case, Garden officials indicated the match would be rescheduled for Monday.

U. S. Relief To Stay, Plan Of Roosevelt

Needy Are Divided Into 3 Major Groups for Rehabilitation.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Dividing the unemployment problem into three distinct categories, President Roosevelt yesterday divulged his program to continue Federal relief after demobilization of the Civil Works Administration this spring.

With the $950,000,000 already authorized by Congress and such part of the additional $2,000,000,000 set up in his budget for next year as may be needed, he projected an entirely new plan to substitute for present Government relief.

On the whole, it was apparent he expects to spend less from the Treasury, but hopes to obtain perhaps more in the way of actual human rehabilitation by calling on local government for a greater share in the program and stringent weeding out of relief rolls.

Three Groups Listed.

From the rich experience of the last nine months—in which more millions have been expended on relief than ever before in history—the President said the Administration has learned unemployment must be fought "on more than one front."

Hence, demobilization of the CWA will continue as scheduled while Harry L. Hopkins and the Federal Relief Adminsirtration prepare to institute this new, far-reaching program which will attempt to meet "the peculiar needs of three separate and distinct groups in need through no fault of their own."

These the President listed as (1) distressed families in rural areas, (2) stranded populations," those living in communities whose single industry has played out, as miners in abandoned coal fields; (3) unemployed in cities and their suburbs.

Farm Program.

As to the first category, President Roosevelt in a White House statement recognized the farm destitute as constituting a problem "quite distinct and apart from that of the industrial unemployed." Toward its solution he proposed, roughly:

That direct relief be converted to "an opportunity to obtain and maintain self-support in an accustomed environment;" that relief funds go to providing adequate farm homes, seed and stock—the latter to be limited to strictly their own use and not to add to farm surpluses, and that agricultural agencies, from the Department of Agriculture down, cooperate to this general end.

This was regarded as frank admission the direct relief and CWA program as it applied to farm communities was misdirected, although the haste with which the CWA had

Death Is Decreed For 2 Kidnapers

"Torture Bandits" Found Guilty in California.

Los Angeles, Feb. 28 (U.P.).—Death sentences were decreed today for Harry Brocks and William Tanner, accused "torture bandits," by a jury which found them guilty under the new California law fixing kidnaping as a capital crime.

It was the first verdict of its kind since the statute, inspired by the Lindbergh case, became effective a few months ago.

The jury, deliberating less than five hours, convicted Brooks and Tanner on charges of kidnaping Henry Boskin, an attorney, and robbing him of $1,700.

Pennsylvania Coldest In Nation—32 Below

Clarksburg, W. Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.). The Central West Virginia and Western Pennsylvania area today was the coldest spot in the United States.

Smashing all records for 36 years the Government thermometer here dipped to 23 below zero, while in Somerset, Pa., it went to 32 below.

These two readings were the lowest reported by Government weather observers in the United States, although several outlying points in this section recorded slightly lower marks.

No Gain Is Reported In Bishop's Condition

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—There was no improvement today in the condition of the Right Rev. Andrew J. Brennan, Bishop of Richmond, who is ill in St. Vincent's Hospital here. Dr. W. B. Martin said the bishop rested fairly well last night, though in a coma. Several of the bishop's relatives from Pennsylvania arrived today. The Rev. Leo A. Gill, chancellor of the diocese and secretary to the bishop, spent last night at the patient's bedside.

The bishop is suffering from complications arising from a recent attack of the grip.

Mrs. Pinchot Charges Lax NRA Enforcement, Says Codes Are Ignored

Young Smoot Admits U. S. Job, Four Others

Paid for Aiding Airway While Serving as Senate Clerk.

By Martha Dalyrmple.

Furs, sugar, aviation and the business of feeding miners were among the paying interests that Ernest W. Smoot, son of former Senator Reed Smoot (Republican), Utah, had at the same time he was drawing $3,325 from the Government as clerk of his father's Senate Finance Committee in 1930, the Senate mail contract investigating committee learned yesterday.

While Senator Black, committee chairman, was seeking to refresh young Smoot's memory about his various salaries in 1929 and 1930, the possibility of an important development in the Administration's air-mail policy was seen at the White House.

Several Government officials who have to do with air mail and air-mail contracts, conferred at length with President Roosevelt yesterday afternoon, and announced that there would be another conference within 48 hours.

Farley Declines Statements.

Postmaster General Farley, who acted as spokesman, declared he had no statement to make, but it is generally believed that the question of returning the mails to private companies was the most important on the agenda.

Harris M. Hanshue, president of Western Air Express, acquitted a few weeks ago of a charge of contempt of the Senate for removing papers under subpena by the committee, was the other important witness of the day before the Black committee.

EARNEST W. SMOOT.

After much prodding he admitted that he authorized a merger of his company with Transcontinental Air Transport to form Transcontinental and Western Air Express, against his better judgment, because he knew that otherwise his line would receive no air-mail contract from the Postoffice Department.

Smoot was involved in the evidence on Tuesday when it was revealed that he had rendered a bill for $15,000 to Western Air for his representation work before Comp-

Whitney Raps Nationalizing Of Exchanges

Tells Senators Securities Bill Means Surrender to U. S. Control.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Becoming more caustic in his criticism of the securities exchange bill, Richard Whitney, president of the New York Stock Exchange, yesterday contended before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee that the measure would "establish indirectly a form of nationalization of business and industry hitherto alien to the American theory of Federal government."

Reading from a prepared statement, Whitney said he did not believe "the liberalism of today is predicated on the conception of a National, as opposed to a Federal government," and that such liberalism "requires the Federal Government to operate our exchanges, to control our credit and to regulate our corporations."

"Reform should be limited to the correction of abuses, and should not retard recovery by unwise restrictions upon individual initiative," he asserted.

Objections Yet to Come.

Whitney's statement was sharper than that he delivered last week before the House Interstate Commerce Committee, also holding hearings on the securities exchange measure. Called late in the day before the committee, the stock exchange president, however, did not make much progress in specifying objections to the bill.

Aside from questioning its constitutionality, which he did through

Bright Spots Go Gay With Legal Liquor

Police Deliver Licenses, Starting Revelry at Midnight.

By Frank Getty.

The peal of midnight brought the fruition of repeal to Washington.

From a dozen precinct stations, police squad cars, sirens shrieking, whirred through the city's icy streets, carrying the retail liquor licenses authorizing the end of 17 years of official drouth.

Simultaneously, trucks from a score of wholesale wine and spirits stores churned toward the hotels and restaurants, where happy celebrators were awaiting their first sips of legal local liquor since the Sheppard law wired the cork so tightly back in 1917.

White-coated bartenders and wine waiters, who had been waiting with strained impatience for the death knell of the drouth, broke into broad smiles of welcome as the rumble and clatter at the service doors heralded the arrival of the first loads of whisky, rum, gin, brandy and their concurrents.

Customers Cut Capers.

Beyond the partitions (remaining vestiges of restraint) impatient customers, gathered in their best bib and tucker to celebrate the occasion, beat a joyous refrain on glassware and tabletops and sent up a cheer as the first cork popped and the first waiter rushed in to fill orders given in advance.

Within a quarter of an hour,

Dollar Gains in London.

London, Feb. 28 (AP).—The United States dollar closed today at $5.06⅜ to the pound, a gain of ⅛ of a cent from the overnight rate. Gold currencies improved similarly, the French franc closing at 77.06 to the pound, against yesterday's figure of 77.16.

House Rejects First Lady's Plan for U. S. Furniture Plant

By Robert C. Albright.

Amid cries of "state socialism" and "unfair Government competition," the House yesterday overwhelmingly refused to allot funds for a Government-operated furniture factory at Reedsville, W. Va., sponsored by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The vote assumed proportions of a revolt from the Administration's subsistence homestead plan as 168 Democrats joined 104 Republicans and 3 Farmer-Laborites in rejecting a conference report on the Treasury-Postoffice appropriation bill. The vote was 275 to 110.

The report was sent back to conference. House managers were instructed to insist that funds for the manufacture of Postoffice equipment be limited to the District of Columbia, where a plant now is maintained.

The Public Works Administration already has allocated $525,000 for the West Virginia furniture factory, which would put 127 unemployed miners to work fabricating equipment for postoffices.

Although yesterday's House vote will not block continuation of the West Virginia project, Representative Louis Ludlow (Democrat), Indiana, who led opposition to the Reedsville plant, last night declared

Sweatshops Flaunting Eagle; Coal, Steel Also Scored.

Public Confidence Wanes, She Asserts

Failure to Live Up to Law Cited as Low Pay Is Bared.

By Raymond Clapper.

With her red hair tossing, Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the progressive Republican Governor of Pennsylvania, declared in the NRA public forum yesterday that Blue Eagles were adorning sweatshops in hundreds of Pennsylvania towns, thereby dramatizing the major theme of the second field day of cirticism—weakness of NRA in cracking down on chiselers.

Throughout the day there was surprisingly little direct assault on the aims of NRA, but enforcement of the codes was criticized over almost the entire range of the five-group discussion as utterly inadequate and sometimes as nonexistent.

It is known that Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson regards this as one of the most pressing problems, and the widespread criticism voiced yesterday is expected to stimulate NRA to aggressive enforcement activities as soon as next week's code authority conferences are over.

Gen. Johnson moved around the city sitting in at the different group meetings. At one he encountered Robert Minor, the Communist leader, in the midst of a general denunciation of NRA.

"Why don't you come down and join us?" Gen. Johnson asked during a friendly exchange of opinions.

"Because we are fighting for two diametrically opposed views," the Communist leader replied.

Wholesale Chiselling.

Charges of faulty enforcement included allegations which involved wholesale chiseling by employers; failure to readjust wages of skilled workers to a shorter work-week so that many are getting $10 a week less than before NRA; stretch-

8-Day Seige Roils Prison

Welfare Island Is Called "Twin Volcanoes" by Commissioner.

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—Gotham's "Devils Island"—a unit of prisons and city hospitals in the middle of the East River—has been in a continuous state of seige for eight days.

Commissioner of Correction Austin H. MacCormick, in a speech today, said Welfare Island was "twin volcanoes ready to blow the roofs off the prisons."

Prison guards have been on 24-hour riot duty both in the hospital and in the penitentiary where 1,200 men participated in six riots and kept the prison in a state of incipient mutiny.

MacCormick said the leisure of the 2,300 men on the island was "90 per cent to blame for these conditions."

Rioting in the correction hospital began when a boiler blew its tubes and the hospital remained unheated for some time.

The disturbances at the hospital, while at no time out of control, the Commissioner said, only anticipated more serious revolts in the Penitentiary, where 1,300 prisoners protested against their food and refused to go to the mess hall.

While prisoners knocked pans of steaming food and coffee to the floor and shouted threats and imprecations, Warden Lazarus Levy, with a small detail of guards, marched into the mess hall and announced:

"If you want trouble, you're going to get it."

Suit Against Niece Is Halted by Duke

London, Feb. 28 (AP).—One of England's wealthiest men, the Duke of Westminster, has withdrawn a libel suit against his niece, Lady Sibell Lygon, 26, a socialist.

Settlement of the action on the following terms was announced today:

A "sincere public apology" for an article Lady Sibell wrote for the Oxford and Cambridge magazine, and payment of the costs of the action. Particulars of the complaint have not been made public."

Prince, on Stand, Tells How He Killed Czar's Mad Monk

London, Feb. 28 (AP).—The grim story of a tragedy that rocked Russia and startled the world was told today in a crowded London courtroom when Prince Felix Youssoupoff related how he killed the sinister Monk Rasputin.

The prince crisply gave details of the slaying during a hearing of his wife's suit for $2,000,000 damages against the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures, Ltd., in which she alleges the film "Rasputin and the Empress" libeled her.

"In doing what I did," said the prince, "I thought I was acting in the service of my country."

He took the stand after the defense had intimated he had not killed the powerful monk—the so-called force behind the Czar—in St. Petersburg during the World War.

Prince Youssoupoff, descendant of the old Russian nobility, maintained he slew Rasputin when the latter admitted he was in the pay of Germany and planned to seize the throne. It was the first time he gave his version of the affair on a witness stand.

"Did you determine that in the interest of your country Rasputin should die?" Sir Patrick Hastings, a leading British attorney, asked him.

"Yes," said the witness, "because

U. S. Trading Policy Change Slated Today

"Favored Nation" Pacts to Be Junked for New Reciprocal Plan.

By Kendall Foss.

Hard on the heels of steps to promote exports, President Roosevelt conferred yesterday with Congressional leaders and Administration experts, preparatory to dispatching a long-heralded tariff message to Congress.

The message will go to the Capitol today or Friday. Its early passage is regarded by Senate and House leaders as assured.

Designed to insure an orderly increase in imports as exports rise, the message will request authority to revise existing tariff schedules as much as 50 per cent in the negotiation of reciprocal trade agreements. No authority will be sought to expand or contract the free list.

Frankly experimental, the measure will be limited to three years. In practice revision downward will be confined to schedules which are prohibitory rather than legitimately protectionist and to certain completely useless schedules which protect nothing. And revision will be made when other countries agree to accept an increased amount of American goods.

More White House Power.

Two outstanding departures from previous practice are inherent in the forthcoming bill. First, it is a policy measure which leaves the details of administration to the Executive, thus removing the making of tariffs from the floor of Congress. Secondly, it initiates separate dealings with individual countries where hitherto schedules applied to all foreign countries alike.

This marks the end of the so-called "most-favored nation" clauses, until now the heart of American foreign commercial policy. That policy assured participants that their goods would be received in other countries with which they maintained such treaties on terms as good as those granted the "most favored nation." Henceforth, each nation this countries negotiates a reciprocal treaty with will enjoy special import favors here not extended to outsiders. Forty-one old agreements will go by the board.

Withal, the bill is a cautions one. A number of boosters for a flourishing international trade fear it is a little too cautious; doubt it will produce very comforting results. The nature of yesterday's conference suggests, however, that this bill goes as far as Democratic Senate and House leaders deem safe at this time.

Hull and Peek There.

At the conference yesterday were Vice President Garner, Senators Joe Robinson, Harrison and Byrnes, Byrns, Doughton and Buchanan, as well as Secretaries Hull, Wallace and Roper, and George N. Peek, president of the new Export-Import Bank.

While the intention to tackle the tariff problem dates back to the early days of this Administration, the decision to go ahead during this session of Congress is partly the result of steps just taken to promote exports. There is no doubt in Administration minds but what it is vital to keep foreign trade in approximate balance. Eperience has shown too clearly that a prolonged favorable balance of trade for a creditor country ends up in an array of uncollectable debts.

Yesterday also witnessed further progress in the development of the Export-Import Bank. Charles E. Stuart, senior partner of Stuart, James & Cook, New QYork mining engineers, with six years experience in the Sovet Union rationalizing the coal industry, was named vice president and Lynn P. Talley, of the RFC, appointed treasurer of the new bank. R. Walton Moore, Assisitant Secretary of State, and already a trustee, was made chairman of the board. It is understood the two additional banks will have the same officers. No one seems to know why three banks were created instead of one, but apparently it just got started that way.

Philippines Move For Soviet Trade

Coconut Oil Tax Will Prompt Change.

Manila, March 1 (Thursday) (AP). A proposal that an attempt be made to develop trade with Russia and possibly with Japan on quota basis in event Congress enacts a 5-cent pound tax on coconut oil was advanced today for consideration of a convention of planters March 5.

Conrado Benitez, secretary of the Planters' Association, said the project had been favorably received.

The proposal contemplates sending a commissioner to Russia to attempt to arrange for the purchase of wheat and petroleum in exchange for coconut oil, the sale of which in America is expected to be curtailed heavily.

Army Pilot Forced Down With Air Mail

Lieut. W. B. Offut Unhurt in Crash Near Capital.

Lieut. William B. Offfut, flying the mails from Newark, N. J., to Washington, was forced down by a dead motor near here late yesterday but escaped injury, the Associated Press reported. The plane was damaged.

A large consignment of mail was not damaged. It was taken to Baltimore by truck and forwarded by rail.

Lieut. Offut said the plane struck a snow-filled rut and nosed over as he attempted to land on a farm, breaking the landing gear and shattering the propellor.

Young Smoot Admits Holding U. S. Senate Job, Four Others

Witness Tells Probe He Was Only Partially Paid by Airway.

troller general McCarl and before Congressional Appropriations Committees.

The young man, who nervously twisted his feet about the rungs of his chair and the witness table legs, testified in an almost inaudible voice. Even irritated Senatorial requests to speak up did not serve to make his testimony any more distinct.

With a rueful gesture he admitted that only $2,500 of the $15,000 bill had been paid. He said he had taken it to his lawyer friend, Col. William Donovan, former Assistant Attorney General, but had been advised to "drop it" and not take the case to court.

New Income Was Heavy.

Smoot's extraclerical duties which netted him more than $20,000 at the same time he was drawing $3,325 as a Senate clerk, included representation of Wulsohn & Co., furriers. The only definite duty he could remember performing for his employer was a trip to Russia in 1926. He admitted that in 1929 he had received $5,000 as salary, and, asked to explain what he did, said:

"I really can't just remember. I advised Mr. Wulfsohn about some of his financial affairs. I went to New York several times to talk to him."

The biggest single contribution to his income in 1929 revealed in the evidence was $13,000 from Vanderhoof & Co., a publicity concern. Here his duties consisted in "getting out press releases for the domestic beet sugar people."

The son of one of the 12 apostles of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (Mormon), in Salt Lake City, then explained his connections with the grocery business of feeding miners.

He said he was a "partner" of H. S. Anderson, one of his lifelong friends, who paid him an unidentified annual sum for his aid in securing feeding contracts at various Western mines.

He said he had nothing to do with the award of the Government contract for feeding the workmen at Boulder Dam, which was given to Anderson.

In connection with his efforts before the office of the Comptroller General in 1930 in behalf of Western Air Express and Transcontinental Air Transport, Black referred to a letter written by young Smoot in which he said:

Memory Is Short.

"If nothing happens next week, father and I will see McCarl again."

Smoot said he couldn't imagine why he had used that word "again," since neither he nor his father had ever seen McCarl in connection with the T. W. A. contract award which was under consideration by the Comptroller General. Senator Smoot, said his son, only wrote one letter urging McCarl that he expedite rendering a decision, because many of his Utah constiuents were interested in having the matter settled.

The question of a transcontinental contract award to T. W. A. over a much lower bid by United Aviation had been referred to McCarl for settlement. The award to the higher bid was upheld finally.

Although young Smoot testified that he wrote his letter of resignation from the Senate committee on November 19, 1930, he admitted that he received a full year's salary.

Hanshue, when asked whether he had combined his company with T. A. T. voluntarily replied:

"Not exactly. They had been asking us to combine for several years, but we preferred to remain independent. But in 1930 Mr. Brown said that we ought to get together because we were operating on the same routes and were in competition, and he wanted to award the central transcontinental route to one unified outfit."

He said that he told former Postmaster General Brown that he didn't have much hope of effecting such a merger, because of the opposition of his board of directors.

"Did you object to making a bid on the route?" asked Black.

"No. But I knew that this line would be let by extensions and there would be no chance of making a bid on it."

"Your only chance to get that contract was to form the merger with T. A. T., wasn't it?"

"Yes."

Halliburton Was Silenced.

Black then questioned him at length about an agreement between Western Air and the Aviation Corporation, whereby Aviation Corporation bought out the independent line belonging to Richard Halliburton for $1,400,000. The witness said he did not know whether the reason for buying out Halliburton had been because the independent had threatened to make a bid on the line, which was part of the southern transcontinental route that Aviation Corporation wanted.

Some time later both Western Air and T. A. T. turned over $700,000 each to Aviation Corporation. Of the total, $284,000 was for Halliburton equipment and the remainder, $1,116,000 was for 20,000 shares of Western Air stock which Aviation Corporation owned. The stock, said Hanshue, had a market value of between $35 and $40 a share, but that they paid $55.74 a share.

Hanshue declared that Brown had suggested that Pittsburgh Aviation Industries Corporation, one of the Mellon-controlled interests, be given a share in the new merged line, T. W. A.

"He said they had an airway across Pennsylvania and a couple of airports that were worth $500,000."

When Black questioned him about just what the airway was, he replied:

"Well, it was an airway on the ground. It was just equipment and lights. They had influenced the State of Pennsylvania to put up lights and other facilities."

Hanshue will be recalled today.

Steamer, 50 Aboard, Is Reported Sinking

Helsingfors, Finland, Feb. 28 (AP). Pounded by violent seas, the Polish steamship Zieszys, with 50 aboard, was near sinking tonight.

The vessel struck the rocks tonight and immediately sent out SOS calls. Subsequent wireless messages described her position as critical with a bad hole in her hull.

Army Flier Plunges to His Death at Bolling as Parachute Fails.

Corps during the war. In 1917 he took a ground school course in the School of Aeronautics at Austin, Tex., later receiving flying training at Kelly Field, San Antonio, Tex.

He was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Air Corps April 5, 1918, and rated as a reserve aviator. During the war he was stationed at Camp Dick, Dallas, Tex., and at Brooks Field, San Antonio.

After the war he served in the Philippine Islands for three years, and upon his return was stationed at Fort Sill, Okla., until June, 1922, when he was transferred to Cook Field, Dayton, Ohio, where he served as test pilot and chief of the flying section. In 1925 he was transferred to San Antonio in charge of operations.

Promoted Here.

Two years ago Brookley was graduated from the Air Corps Engineering School at Dayton. Following his graduation, he came to Washington where he served in the material liaison section. He was commissioned a captain June 5, 1932.

Surviving are his wife and three children, who live at 329 West Bradley lane, Chevy Chase.

Capt. Estabrook was born in Massachusetts, July 12, 1886. He was appointed flight lieutenant in the aviation section of the Signal Corps, November 22, 1917. He received an honorary discharge from the Army in 1919, but went back into service as a first lieutenant in the Air Corps the following year. He was commissioned captain in 1928 and was graduated from the Air Corps Engineering School in 1932. He had a bachelor of arts degree from Harvard, where he was graduated in 1909.

He is married and the father of one child. His home is at 15 Newlands street, Chevy Chase.

Air Mail Link Denied.

Officers at Bolling Field were emphatic in their statements that the accident had no connection with mail flying, and that the two men were flying to keep up their record or hours in the air.

The plane fell at the extreme edge of the field and on the grounds that the taking of pictures on military reservations is unlawful, newspaper photographers were not permitted to take pictures. A Post photographer was stopped by a lieutenant and escorted to the guard house. A threat was made to take his photographic plates until the officer was persuaded that he had not taken any pictures.

Another news photographer who had entered the field near where the plane crashed, and, who officers at the field believed, had taken pictures, was held with the explanation that his plates would be taken from him.

Sweatshops, Coal, Steel Fly Eagle, Flaunt Code, Is Claim

Mrs. Pinchot Says Public Losing Confidence in Enforcement.

out and speed-up practices; designating workers as executives to escape hour limits; dodging behind wage exemptions for apprentices to hire cheap labor and discharging them after the privileged learning period had expired; setting back time clocks; deducting from pay envelopes even to charging waitresses for pencils; flaunting of Blue Eagles in sweatshops; employing workers at 6 cents an hour to sew NRA labels into garments; preventing workers from attending NRA meetings; stalling on enforcement of section 7a requiring collective bargaining; boosting prices by arrangement to exhorbitant levels, and letting big chiselers escape and thereby encouraging little ones.

Recommendations included the following:

Giving labor and consumers equal voice with management on code authorities.

Abolition of the open price posting provisions.

Requiring all deputy administrators of NRA to file with the Federal Trade Commission statements covering their corporation holdings and connections.

Elimination of wage differentials favoring particular localities: requiring chain stores to sell at the same prices as individual stores.

Establishment of a 30-hour week with higher minimum wages and with no exemptions for clerical or technical forces in time and a half overtime requirements.

Mrs. Pinchot Bitter.

But it was the shrill, barbed words of Mrs. Pinchot which cut through the din of miscellaneous criticism and crystallized the general complaint that NRA's preachments were falling short in performance.

Mrs. Pinchot lost no time in pointing out that she was for the NRA, which she said had put 500,000 people back to work in Pennsylvania alone and increased the average wage in manufacutring industries from $13 to $18.

"I am convinced, however," she added, "that it can never measure up to its full passibilities unless some drastice changes are made in its administration. These facts, of which I shall tell you, are those into which my nose has been rubbed as I have gone about the State—facts which no person with eyes can avoid seing.

"My mail is full of letters every day from men nad women, boys and girls, who tell me of conditions in work shops, mills and factories, where the law is being openly and cynically violated.

"I believe it is no exaggeration to say that today Blue Eagles are adorning sweat shops in hundreds of towns in Pennsylvania—taht pay envelopes show wages of $8, $7 $6 and $5 a week and sometimes as law as $3."

Says Complaints Ignored.

"You will find the story in your own correspondence if you choose to look at it," she flung out in the general direction of Col. R. W. Lea, special assistant to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, who was presiding at the meeting on unemployment in the Department of Commerce Auditorium. "It might be worth while to check up to determine to your satisfaction on what proportion of cases that have come to you any help has been given, or, for a matter of fact, even an acknowledgement of a letter to the sender."

"The local and State organizations files will tell the same story of hundreds of thousands of complaints received concerning the sweatshops, low wages, introduction of 'stretch-out' systems, dismissal of workers who protested—and those who so much as dared talk of union organization.

"Complaints do not come in so fast now, I imagine you are finding. At least, the workers tell me they do not complain any more—usually they say it is because they do not dare to, for they have had experience of compliance boards who have notified their bosses—and have been immediately dismissed."

Mrs. Pinchot pointed out that in many towns of Pennsylvania the compliance boards were set up by the local chambers of commerce.

"One might as well put the guardian of the sheep fold into the hands of a committee of wolves," she declared. "It is a grisly farce to entrust enforcement of social legislation into the hands of a group that opposes and has always opposed social legislation, to a group that is on record against Government help to workers—on record against minimum wage laws, the regulation of hours of labor—factory laws, workers' compensation and insurance, the ratification of the child labor amendment, to an organization that sits up nights to sing hymns of hate against trade unions."

"A Section Mocked."

She went on to discuss the "deliberate, plain and wholesale mockery" of section 7 (a) of the recovery act. The steel industry was openly fighting the Government on this matter, Mrs. Pinchot charged.

Discussing the Weirton Steel and Edward G. Budd cases, in both of which the employers are charged with interfering with employes' rights of collective bargaining, Mrs. Finchot said: "I want to say with all the earnestness at my command that until men like Weir, Budd and others of the big industrialists are made to obey the laws of the land, there is no manner of use in taking Blue Eagles away from little beauty shops or corner restaurants."

"Gen. Johnson," she continued, addressing the administrator by name, though he was not present, "you told the workers in your speech to the Federation of Labor last autumn that they must not strike, that they need not strike to get recognition of their union.

"I wonder if you ever stay awake at night, seeing the faces of thousands of men and women, who are pacing the streets of Pennsylvania towns, jobless and desperate, without resources and with despair in their hearts—because they had faith in your promises and went ahead and organized a union—and for so doing, lost their jobs—and never a finger in Washington lifted to help them."

Mrs. Pinchot told of attempting to speak to a meeting in Apollo, Pa., only to find that she could not obtain a hall. At this point Edward McGrady, labor adviser in NRA and Assistant Secretary of Labor, broke in:

"I think it would be very interesting to let the people of this country know that there are cities who refuse to allow workers to meet to discuss their rights under the NRA," he said.

"There are plenty of towns like that," answered Mrs. Pinchot.

"If you, in the future, desire to go into any town and opposition is raised, I'd just love to go with you," broke in the Assistant Secretary of Labor again. "I'll go as an official of the United States Government. Its time to rip the curtain off this thing," he asserted.

Must Enforce Law.

"That's swell," Mrs. Pinchot replied, adding:

"Until men like Weir and Budd are made to obey the laws of the land, I don't think there is any use in taking the Blue Eagle away from the little fellows."

"Then why can they punish the small man and not the Steel Trust?" demanded the speaker.

Returning to her prepared address, she inquired: "Gen. Johnson, what do you suppose the workers think when they see that Weir has power enough to defy the United States Government — when week after week goes by and they are told that their case has been taken away from the Department of Justice, when the days upon which the Labor Board has promised to hand down a decision go over—and they hear nothing but silence so dramatic, so violent that it almost has the power to shake their faith in the Government?"

More fireworks were touched off by Gerald Smith, an American Federation of Labor organizer in Louisiana. "The same gang that tried to kill Huey P. Long in Louisiana tried to kill him in Sands Point, Long Island," he began.

Flinging his arms around his head, shouting at the top of his lungs, Smith said the recovery act was "as good as the Ten Commandments, as holy as the Beatitudes," but that "violations of the eighteenth amendment are a Sunday school picnic compared to violations of the NRA.

"I'm going to start believing in the National Recovery Administration when it puts its foot on the neck of a Standard Oil official and the steel trust," he shouted. "The 'big man' has spit in our President's face and dared him to come on."

A broadside was likewise leveled at the administrator, rather than the law itself, by Louis Waldman, spokesman for the Socialist party. "We support the NRA for the good it has done in abolishing child labor, abolition of home work and the principle it establishes that the conditions of employment are the concerns of the Government," he declared. "But it has failed to accomplish its purposes, not so much because of the act itself, but because of the methods Gen. Johnson has used for its enforcement."

Civil Service Today Governs Emergency Pay

Incomes' Standardization Raises Some Salaries, Lowers Others.

Classification of salaries in all emergency agencies of the Government, standardizing incomes of thousands of workers in emergency set-ups, goes into effect today.

The effect of the classification will be to bring salaries in the hitherto unclassified emergency agencies into line with those paid under Civil Service in regular Government departments. Under the plan, ordered by President Roosevelt, all employes doing similar work will be paid identical rates, wiping out differences which have sprung up between amounts paid workers in emergency organizations and those in classified departments.

The classification, however, will go into effect without benefit of the so-called "tolerance" clause, which was designed to protect salaries above $4,000 in order to retain specially-qualified officials who might not be willing to remain in Government service under a heavy classification cut. The tolerance clause, which would allow retention of 20 per cent of an official's former salary on top of the classification base, was eliminated by the Director of the Budget, it was learned yesterday.

Salaries in many of the alphabetical agencies here have already been brought under the classification order, and other agencies are completing the task. Classificatoin has been completed in NRA, PWA and Emergency Conservation. In the Emergency Relief Administration, the AAA and others the work is now in process. It is expected the reorganization of pay rolls will be completed before March 15, when checks for March 1 will be paid.

The President's original order calling for classification specified the ten major emergency administrations by name. Later, the order was extended to include all emergency groups. It will affect field as well as Washington headquarters forces.

In some cases the classification will cut salaries, and in other cases it will bring advances in pay. The classification was worked out in each department in conjunction with a reclassification committee appointed by the President. Classification for salaries ranges from a low of $840, corresponding to the lowest class on regular civil service, to more than $8,000. Nineteen classifications have been made and every person drawing a salary in an emergency organization will be placed in one of the 19 brackets.

Inclusion of emergency agency workers will have the effect of placing all Government employes under classification for the first time since creation of the first alphabetical agency by the Roosevelt Administration.

'Hunger Army' Rebuffed Again

Commons Twice Refuses to Hear Marchers; Laborite "Cusses."

London, Feb. 28 (AP).—After another turbulent scene, the House of Commons today for the second time refused permission for a committee of 2,000 unemployed "hunger marchers" to present their case in person.

"This House is a damn farce," angrily shouetd John McGovern, Left wing Labor member, as he strode from the floor to inform the marchers, waiting outside in rain and snow, of their second rebuff.

The militant McGovern had renewed a fight started yesterday to hav a deputation speak at the bar of the House, but was informed by the speaker that he could not alter rules.

Angered, McGovern shouted, "It's a damnable outrage" and was sharply reminded by the speaker that the language could not be used in the House.

McGovern, expelled on a previous occasion for seizing the mace and who heckled King George at the opening of Parliament last November, continued speaking, in violation of rules.

Cries of "Order, order," arose from the House.

"To hell with you," McGovern was heard to shout through the din.

Touhy Henchman Hits 'Conspiracy'

Sees Plot to Pack Jury With Capitalists.

Chicago, Feb. 28 (AP).—Basil (The Owl) Banghart, reputedly one of the toughest guards on the Tuohy kidnap team, may have a former All-American quarter back for his trial judge.

He objected to everything, including an alleged conspiracy to pack the jury with capitalists, when arraigned today charged with participation in the $70,000 kidnaping of John Factor.

Roger Tuohy and two henchmen already have started 99 years in prison for the Factor "snatch." Banghart asked for a change of venue from the court of Judge Michael Feinberg, who had tried Tuohy, Gus Schaefer and Albert Kator, and the cast went over to Judge Walter P. Steffen, the erstwhile All-American pilot of the University of Chicago football team.

Four of Family Die In Fire-Swept Home

Rome, Ga., Feb. 28 (AP).—Four members of a family of six were burned to death here last night in a fire which firemen believed resulted from an attempt to thaw out frozen water pipes. J. W. Naish, a cotton mill worker, two daughters, Helen, 18, and Louise, 14, and a son, 12, died in the flames.

The New Dealers

—The Low Down on the Higher Ups—

New Deal's Triumph on Power

Muscle Shoals Work Is Greatest Experiment in Social Reform.

Roosevelt Changed Issue and Captured Public Imagination.

The identity of the author of "The New Dealers" must remain undisclosed. Publication of the material in The Washington Post does not necessarily imply editorial indorsement of his views.

David E. Lilienthal, youngest member of the TVA, has become its most powerful influence. Inset, Arthur Morgan, flood control expert, chairman of TVA.

By the Unofficial Observer.

IN the Tennessee Valley Authority, the New Deal finds its most complete expression. For years, the "power issue" had been rotating around the stale alternatives of "private enterprise" and "public ownership." President Roosevelt has changed the issue so that the alternative to private enterprise—meaning the "Power Trust"—is human progress through a broad social plan in which the element of public ownership is an essential but a secondary consideration.

He has, moreover, established the fact that the Federal Government is the only agency which can direct, coordinate and control a regional plan which operates in three States, includes power development, flood control, reforestation and agricultural reform, and which is the biggest experiment in social reform—on a strict business basis—that this country has ever seen.

The 12-year-old vision of Senator George W. Norris of Government ownership and operation of the plant at Muscle Shoals was magnificent but it lacked imagination. President Roosevelt converted it into an element of his great scheme for the development of the Tennessee Valley under a harmonious plan based on cheap electricity, the decentralization of industry, the development of local culture and everything else on down the line to a well-rounded civilization. When he got the thing through Congress, he had to scour the country for the right men to undertake the greatest experiment in regional planning the world has seen outside of Soviet Russia.

Unconventional Educator Named as Chairman.

First, he got a native of Minnesota, Arthur Morgan, president of Antioch College, at Yellow Springs, Ohio, a civil engineer and flood control expert noted for his unconventional ideas about education, to serve as chairman.

For counsel he secured David E. Lilienthal, one of Felix Frankfurter's proteges. Lilienthal is 34, but his hair is falling out and lengthening his forehead, so that he looks older. He is a graduate of Depauw University and Harvard Law School, where he attracted Frankfurter's attention. Later Lilienthal got a job with Donald R. Richberg in Chicago and, when Gov. Phil La Follette of Wisconsin needed a man to reorganize the State's public utility commission, he employed Lilienthal, whose subsequent work at Madison attracted National attention among liberals.

Dave came into the New Deal with the indorsement of Frankfurter and the Senate Progressives. His job has been to look after the electrical end of the undertaking, to bargain with the power companies and negotiate the contracts for sale of Muscle Shoals power.

Arthur Morgan has been more interested in the engineering and cultural ends of the undertaking, especially the stimulation of local industries and handicrafts. Something of a dreamer, after a youth spent in wandering through the West in search of employment and health, he found himself as a drainage engineer. He was placed in charge of the flood control project on the Miami River after the disastrous flood in Dayton, Ohio, in 1913.

Won College Presidency As Result of Ideas.

While on this job he heard of Antioch College and drove over to Yellow Springs to investigate. He found a sleepy, charming, unworldly little institution, like many other "cultural" colleges in the Middle West. He had, as a result of his own youth, come to the conclusion that the best education was one which combined academic studies with entirely irrelevant practical experience.

His ideas impressed the trustees and shortly thereafter he was asked to become president of the college. He accepted, on condition that he receive a free hand, and developed the most interesting experiment in modern American education. The thing is done on the basis of six-week shifts; six weeks of study followed by six weeks of practical work. The college finds jobs for its students and those jobs may be scattered all over the country, selling books or shirts, teaching school, slinging hash, digging ditches. Nothing American is alien to it.

The results have been significant. Antioch has been turning out all-round men and women, who have a good cultural background and know how to fall on their feet. A recent survey showed that, in this era of dreadful unemployment, 80 per cent of Antioch graduates during the last three years were employed.

Morgan's job in the Tennessee Valley is to develop a many-sided economic and cultural community instead of the inert over-specialization which has hitherto characterized our industrial development. To him, the TVA is Antioch College again on a big scale.

Morgan Is Specialist in Agricultural Needs.

The third member of the TVA is Harcourt A. Morgan, venerable president of the University of Tennessee. His specialty is agriculture and he knows well the whole Tennessee Valley region, its potentialities and its people. He is the local representative on the Authority. Harcourt Morgan is a native of Canada and a graduate of the University of Toronto. After specializing at Cornell and the Marine Biological Laboratory at Woods Hole, Mass., he began his career as entomologist and horticulturist at Louisa State University in 1889. In 1905, he moved to Tennessee as director of the University of Tennessee Agricultural Experiment Station and professor of zoology, becoming president of the university in 1919.

He is a quiet old gentleman, little known in the educational world outside of the South Central region, but highly respected there. He is 66, nearly twice the age of the dynamic Lilienthal. Experiments with fertilizer production at Muscle Shoals and general overseeing of the whole experiment are his functions. He spends nearly all of his time in Knoxville and Muscle Shoals.

The job under the control of these three gentlemen is simply to develop an area four-fifths the size of England, with a population of 2,000,000, linking up the farms of eastern Tennessee, the industrial cities of Knoxville and Chattanooga, the cotton fields of northern Alabama, the Cumberland plateau of central Tennessee, with its coal, phosphate, iron and timber, and the blue-grass regions of Kentucky.

They propose to extend river navigation for 642 miles from Knoxville to the Ohio, and by canal from the Tennessee River to the Gulf. They propose to control floods, navigation and power by a system of storage dams, and to retard erosion by extensive reforestation. Their major immediate problems are to supervise the sale of electricity developed by the Government plants and to construct the Norris Dam at Cove Creek and the Joe Wheeler Dam in northern Alabama.

This is an enterprise by which great reputations will be made or broken and it will provide the whole country with a sample of what the New Deal can eventually do for us all. By law, political considerations are specifically excluded in all employment under the TVA and the utilities interests are debarred from directly or indirectly controlling it. The work can be either continued or scrapped; by definition, it can not be prostituted.

Lilienthal Is Outstanding Member of TVA.

While Arthur Morgan is chairman of the TVA, its youngest member, David E. Lilienthal, has become its most powerful force. Morgan, who is somewhat of a visionary, was ready to sit down and talk things over with the power interests. Lilienthal began by giving them a bad fright and then sat down with them, with the result that he got twice as good a bargain as either of his elders would have obtained. Under the New Deal, wisdom is no longer confused with age.

Hitherto, the history of the TVA has been the history of Lilienthal's treatment of the power companies. Lilienthal is a short, blond, baldish man with a level head. He is calm, charming, quiet-voiced and very disarming in his mode of speech. He can couch firm, and even bold, proposals in conciliatory language. His subordinates marvel at his unfailing kindness and good temper and, like most of the men who are making their mark in the New Deal, he is a terrific worker, though always unruffled and informal in manner.

When Lilienthal first published his power rates for Muscle Shoals they sent shivers down the spines of power companies. He calmly explained that these rates provided for "all costs of service" plus allowance for depreciation, taxes and interest, so as to constitute a fair Rooseveltian "yard-stick" for the rates of private companies. He added that he proposed to make the Muscle Shoals plant entirely self-supporting and "bankable," a real business enterprise. Compared with rates in New York City, the TVA rates averaged between a half and a quarter of those charged by the Edison Co. The immediate result in Tennessee was to produce rate-cuts by the private companies of from 5 to 25 per cent.

He followed this by a campaign for municipal ownership of power plants and devised the plan of lending money to individual purchasers to buy electrical appliances of standard grades at low prices on the installment basis. This helped both Muscle Shoals and the private power interests in the South, where a stalemate had been reached. The power companies felt that they could not afford to reduce their rates any further, yet their rates were so high that the great mass of people could not afford to operate many electrical appliances, even if they could buy them. Lilienthal's scheme broke the jam and was characterized as "a stroke of genius" by Mr. Owen D. Young, ever ready to sell electrical appliances for the General Electric. Then Lilienthal sat down and negotiated an all-around agreement with the power interests. It was a beautiful piece of bargaining and Lilienthal did it single-handed.

United States Airways Suspends Operations

Kansas City, Feb. 28 (AP).—W. A. Letson, President of the United States Airways, Inc., announced today the line would suspend operations immediately. The company operates between Kansas City and Denver.

Approximately 40 employes will be retained at moderate salaries pending the outcome of airmail hearings in Washington, Letson said.

Return of Full Pay Imperiled By Democrats

Senate Gets "Assassinated" Bill Today; Call Off House Parley.

This objection is confidently anticipated by the party wire pullers.

Announcement of this plan by Speaker Rainey came as a distinct surprise to advocates of full pay restoration since a forced vote on the pay amendment, with a good chance of adoption, had been forecast.

Vote Blocked.

The plan to send the bill back to the Appropriations Committee, however, blocks a vote on the amendment just as the gag rule had prevented House members from increasing the pay restoration above the 5 per cent sponsored by the Administration when the bill was originally passed.

Full pay advocates had freely predicted—and Majority Leader Byrns had practically admitted—that the House stood ready to adopt the Senate's amendment were the matter put to a vote at once.

By indefinitely delaying action, however, Administration leaders may force acceptance of a compromise on the pay amendment as well as to veterans' benefits.

Speaker Rainey, when questioned about the procedure, admitted it was a bit unusual, but absolutely in conformance with the House rules.

He said the Appropriations subcommittee will be expected to report a new bill, although obviously little change will be made in the major items on which the Senate and House agree. When this is reported, the House will resolve itself into a committee of the whole and vote on the bill in the same manner it did formerly, when the "gag" was adopted by a margin of only five votes.

Borah Clause Opposed.

A Senate amendment relating to pay which the House resented most is the Borah proposal to retain the 15 per cent cut on all salaries above $6,000 a year, except judicial. House members for the most part are nearly as interested in having their full salaries restored as are Government clerks and stenographers.

The amendments which upset the apple cart, however, are those increasing compensation for World War and Spanish-American War veterans and, especially, the amendment modifying restrictions on World War emergency officers.

Represetnative Truax (Democrat), Ohio, yesterday introduced a bill similar to the Borah amendment, save that it limits the 15 per cent reduction to Senators and Representatives and executive department heads.

Louisiana University Rescends "Withdrawal"

Baton Rouge, La., Feb. 28 (AP).—The Louisiana State University Student Council has changed its mind about recommending the university's withdrawal from the National Student Federation because of asserted participation of Negro students in affairs of the organization.

The council wired the federation today that it has rescinded a motion adopted last week urging severance of relations with the federation unless a separate organization were formed for Negro students.

Delay Here Snags Pay Of U. S. Aids in Europe

Paris, Feb. 28 (AP).—Today was pay day for American Government employes, but, in 11 European countries, the day ended without pay for employes ranging in rank from Ambassadors to stenographers of fourth secretaries.

Their pay checks were held up in the central disbursing bureau in Paris by the delay at Washington in passage of the McReynolds bill which would adjust losses due to variations in the foreign exchange markets.

Prince Tells How He Killed Monk

I thought he was a danger to my country."

During cross-examination of Princess Irena Youssoupoff, Sir William Jowitt, of the defense, said:

"I do suggest that Prince Youssoupoff did not kill Rasputin.

First Shot Not Fatal.

"I am suggesting that your husband fired the first shot, which did not kill Rasputin. And that Rasputin got up, and as he was making his way out of the place Purishkevitch (Vladamir Purishkevitch, Duma leader and foe of the czar), came up and fired four shots, two of which hit him.

"If he was dead before he was pushed into the ice, it was Purishkevitch who killed him."

Sir William dwelt at length on historical aspects of the tragedy in an attempt to show that the character in the film did not correspond to Prince Youssoupoff, and that therefore the woman character—upon whose delineation the suit is based—could not be taken as representing the princess.

She claims that the picture linked her identity objectionably with Rasputin.

Counterfeiting Increase Laid To Depression

Three-Fold Gain Is Noted in Arrests and Seizure of Spurious Bills.

(United Press.)

A steady increase in distribution of counterfeit money, due to new methods of manufacture and prevailing hard times, is overtaxing facilities of the United States Secret Service.

Thousands of dollars of bogus bills are said to be passing daily over the counters of the Nation's stores and banks.

A threefold increase in arrests and seizure of spurious bills since the start of the depression indicates the growth of this type of crime. The rate of seizure of bogus money is now running close to a million dollars annually.

Chief William H. Moran, of the Secret Service, believes bootleg gangs forced out of the liquor business are chiefly responsible.

Numerous instances have been reported where even experienced bank tellers have accepted counterfeits. One bank here recently accepted five $20 bills which later turned out to be counterfeit, and even the Federal Reserve branch at Charlotte, N. C., was reported to have failed to detect immediately a "high class" $10 note.

Increased output of counterfeits is reported to have brought a decline in their price to around $30 a hundred from $35 a hundred. But some better imitations are reported sold at 60 cents on the dollar.

In the year ended June 30, 1933, 3,003 arrests were made in counterfeiting cases, and $921,499 in spurious bills was seized. From July 1 to February 15 last an additionad 2,040 arrests were made. In the prosperity year ended June 30, 1930, a total of 1,013 arrests were made and $253,796 in counterfeits seized.

Faymonville Name To Moscow Post

Major Wlil Sail in June After Completing Studies.

Maj. Philip R. Faymonville was formally named yesterday as military attache to the American Embassy in Moscow.

Faymonville's designation was revealed several weeks ago, but the announcement was held up pending completion of his present studies at the Army War College here. Lieut. Thomas D. White, Air Corps, was designated assistant military attache, and has gone to Moscoe. Faymonville will complete his course at the War College early in June, and then will proceed to his post.

He is an aid to President Roosevelt.

Austria Quiet As Ultimatum Fritters Out

8-Day Nazi Deadline to Dollfuss Ends in Puff of Smoke Bombs.

Vienna, Feb. 28 (AP).—A half dozen smoke bombs burst in Vienna today and several Nazi flags were unfurled in the provinces, but the expiration of a Nazi leader's ultimatum to Chancellor Dollfuss' government was marked by comparative peace.

Theodore Habich, exiled adviser of Austrian Nazis, threatened a "resumption of the fight" if, in eight days, Nazis were not taken into the administration. But up to this evening, there were few signs of this "fight."

Troop movements and rumors of mobilizations however, still appalled the populace, despite official assurances that nothing unusual was afoot.

University of Vienna students were peaceful. There were no street gatherings. Officials and others, to all appearances, continued their tasks of reconstruction.

There was no move to clamp down a tight censorship, as reported abroad.

Talk of a restoration of a Hapsburg Monarch heightened nervousness in some circles.

Prince Ernst Rudiger von Starhemberg, commander of the Fascist Heimwehr, or Home Guard, recognized this yesterday when he said the question of a Hapsburg restoration "must be approached with the greatest caution."

Czechoslovakia, however, was not entirely reassured by the Prince's remarks, especially his advocacy of repealing laws banishing the Hapsburgs from Austria and confiscating their property.

In authoritative Czech circles, Von Starhemberg's statements were not looked upon as a guarantee that Archduke Otto, the pretender to the Austrian Throne, might some day suddenly appear in Austria from his exile in Belgium.

The Czechs would take immediate steps to prevent Otto from actually reentering Austria, even as a private individual.

Tribute

Roosevelt Congratulates Veteran Reporter.

President Roosevelt began his press confcrences yesterday by summoning James P. Hornaday, veteran Washington correspondent, to his desk to receive congratulations on the anniversary of his rounding out 50 years in the newspaper profession.

Hornaday, correspondent for the Indianapolis News, pushed his way through the crowd in the Executive Office to hear from the Nation's Chief Executive the following tribute:

"I think the truest thing and the nicest thing I can say is that you are a gentleman of the press."

Hornaday came to Washington 32 years ago for the Indianapolis News. He started his career as a reporter a half century ago on the Martinsville (Ind.) Republican.

Peery Forces Win in House Budget Test

Foes Fail to Get Majority Necessary on Deficit Amendment.

By Doug Warrenfels.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 28.—Administration forces emerged with flying colors today after the first skirmishes over the $82,000,000 budget bill in the House of Delegates.

A militant opposition, led by Delegate E. O. McCue, jr., Charlottesville, outvoted Gov. Peery's men by 45 to 43 on an amendment contemplating a deficit of $1,000,000, but failed to obtain the 51 votes necessary for passage.

The test came after Delegate Edward L. Oast, Portsmouth, proposed that $6,120,345 instead of $5,120,345 be set aside for schools in the 1934-1935 fiscal year.

"Unless we pass this amendment," the author protested, "we must either swallow new taxes or stifle public schools. I think we should get around additional taxes by a revision of the estimates. The guess of one man is as good as that of another."

New Taxes Seen Doomed.

Delegate Ashton Dovell, Williamsburg, Democratic floor leader, fought the Oast amendment.

"We can't satisfy the school people," he declared, "by giving them an I. O. U. and voting against the source from which educational funds can be realized. This amendment is just a gesture."

McCue interpreted the vote on the Oast amendment as indicating the administration would be unable to muster the 51 votes necessary for passage of the bill to execute the Peery program of $875,000 in new taxes.

Delegate Wilbur C. Hall, Leesburg, an administration spokesman, termed the Oast line-up as a "criss-cross vote," and predicted the Governor's measure would go through.

Amendments Beaten.

Delegate John W. Morrison, Harrisonburg, offered an amendment to fix the school estimate at $7,120,345. He said passage would permit the Governor to borrow $2,000,000 for schools and prevent imposition of new taxes. The amendment was defeated without a record vote.

Amendments by Delegates E. P. Barrow, Lawrenceville, and Y. M. Hodges, South Hill, to curtail expenditures at William and Mary College were rejected by overwhelming votes.

Earlier the House killed by 48 to 35 a proposal by Delegate John Q. Rhodes, Louisa, to have drivers' permits expire two years after issuance instead of five.

Most of the Senate session was devoted to amending a bill designed to place Commonwealth attorneys, revenue commissioners and treasurers on salaries instead of fees.

D. C. Suspect Faces Court in Burglary

Trial of Dennis L. Smith Starts at Harrisonburg.

Harrisonburg, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Dennis L. Smith, 32, of 1606 East Capitol street, Washington, D. C., went on trial in Rockingham Circuit Court today on housebreaking charges growing out of the cigarette burglary of the Merchants Grocery and Hardware Co. warehouse here December 29, 1933. The case will go to the jury tomorrow.

Smith was arrested outside the building. The defense contends he had no part in the burglary and that Smith has not been normal since being injured in an automobile accident in 1918. Dr. John M. Ladd, former assistant alienist of the District of Columbia, said he would classify Smith as a "moral derelict" as a result of his brain injuries but would not call him insane.

James R. Henkel and Phillip Davis, of Alexandria, who were arrested in the building, testified Smith had no part in the burglary, which would have yielded $1,400 worth of cigarettes. Davis, who pleaded guilty last month, is serving a 10-year term. Henkel was tried by a jury and given an eight and-a-half-year sentence.

16 Below Threatens Shenandoah Mark

Coldest Weather in 17 Years Is Recorded.

Harrisonburg, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—The Shenandoah Valley this morning experienced the coldest weather in 17 years, when the official temperature at the Dale Enterprise Weather Station dropped to 16 degrees below zero. Household thermometers registered as low as 20 below.

Only one other reading is lower in the 54 years of the Dale Enterprise Station. That was in 1912—25 degrees below.

Many country schools did not open, or closed early, on account of the cold.

Bristol Awaiting Bumper Fruit Crop

Farmers of Area Rejoice Over Heavy Snow.

Bristol, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Farmers of this section see in the winter weather of the past week an almost certain indication of a kindly spring season and bumper fruit crops.

"If this just keeps up about a month and then quits for good," G. C. Baker, Sullivan County agent, said of the cold and snow, "we'll have the finest crop of peaches and other fruit you ever saw.

"The snowfall and then the rain all day yesterday, ran right into the ground, soaking it through. That's what will count in getting spring crops under way. The cold will hold back the early fruit, and we hope it will last a while."

Dovell Denies State Funds Loaned to College Athletes

None From Other Areas Thus Favored, He Replies to Auditor's Charge.

Richmond, Feb. 28 (AP).—Chairman Ashton Dovell of the appropriations committee today told the House there had been no diversions of State funds in loans to out-of-State students at the College of William and Mary.

Robert Saunders, Dovell said, gave $25,000 to the college, which the auditor classed as endowment, but which under the terms of the gift might be used in a number of ways.

Dovell's statement was in reply to a question by Y. M. Hodges, of Mecklenburg, who read from a newspaper that the auditor had stated a considerable amount of money had been loaned to students on notes indorsed by the athletic director. The matter came up during the discussion of the budget bill.

Mr. Dovell previously had given a preview of a controversy over additional money for public schools, which he said he did not believe would be sufficient to run all of the schools eight months with the amount to be received from the localities.

ASHTON DOVELL, of Williamsburg, delegate to the Virginia General Assembly, who yesterday denied that the College of William and Mary had advanced State funds as loans to out-of-State students, as reported by State Auditor L. McCarthy Downs.

Frazier Fights Rules Change

Director Says Amendments to Auto Code Will Hit State Purse.

Richmond, Feb. 28 (AP).—The House of Delegates today took action on a series of motor code amendments which Director T. McCall Frazier said would cost the State more than $1,000,000 in the next five years.

Frazier said House adoption of an amendment to the definition of a chauffeur, so the chauffeur's license clause applies to "practically nobody" would cost the State $365,000 in five years and that the refusal to adopt the amendment reducing the life of permits from five to two years would cost the State $868,274 in five years. Still another amendment pertaining to the fees charged for notices of judgment under the financial responsibility law, which was adopted, will cost the State $1,500 annually, the director said.

Meanwhile, State fiscal authorities were experiencing anxious moments as the Senate engaged in consideration of the administration bill abolishing the fee system of compensation for Commonwealth's attorneys, commissioners of the revenue and local treasurers and placing them on salaries, with half of the Commonwealth's attorneys' salaries to be paid by the State and half by localities. Salaries of the commissioners and the treasurers also would be split between State and local.

Frederick Plans Corn-Hog Program

Enrolling of All Farmers in County Sought.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.)—A campaign to enroll Frederick County farmers in the Federal corn-hog reduction program will be started Monday. County Agent I. Fred Stine has charge of the work.

About 150 have enrolled to date, and benefits to farmers, if all enroll, are placed at $25,000.

The magisterial district committees include J. H. Funkhouser, P. H. Wakeman and A. F. Lillard, Opequon District; William S. Huyett, Alfred W. Wright and Edward O. Carpenter, Stonewall District; M. J. Pease, Fred Whitacre and L. H. Ramey, Gainesboro District; Edwin R. Marker, P. M. Funkhouser and Richard A. Cooper, Shawnee District; V. O. Baker, W. J. Muse and E. U. Richard, Back Creek District.

Berkeley Presses New Boy Scouts' Program

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—With a definite program for new backing of Boy Scout work in Berkeley County, the first session of the administrative center committee was held here last night with Dr. H. H. Porterfield, head of the local Scout movement, in charge. Sub-committees to make monthly reports were set up as follows:

State Obligates Most PWA Funds

93 Per Cent of Allotment Already Laid Out.

Virginia was shown yesterday by an American Association of State Highway Officials report to have obligated 93.5 per cent of its $7,416,757 PWA highway allotment as of February 24, the Associated Press reported.

The National figure was 74.5 per cent, the Associated Press points out.

Virginia had obligated $6,934,000, the report said, and had under contra... $4,678,000 or 62.2 per cent.

On the Job!

'Phone Operator's Record Perfect 20 Years.

Staunton, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Twenty years of perfect attendance at her post will be the record of Miss Augusta V. Hedrick when she retires tomorrow as night chief operator in the Staunton office of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.

Miss Hedrick is rounding out 27½ years of service, having become affiliated with the company as a substitute operator in 1906.

During the first 20 years of her employment, Miss Hedrick did not miss a day due to illness. Since that time she once took a leave of absence of six weeks to visit a brother in Iowa.

A testimonial banquet will be given in her honor later this week. Miss Hedrick says she plans to devote her time to housework, raising flowers, and church work.

Albemarle Wine Industry Launched

Growers Organize as N. Y. Firm Bids for Grapes.

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Grape growers of Albemarle County here today set up machinery to obtain a State charter as a nonstock membership cooperative. Bernard Chamberlain, local attorney, was elected president; Dr. William B. Atwood, of Greenwood, honorary president; B. W. McCray, Elk Mountain, vice president; Percy Brown, secretary, and Henry Chiles, Crozet, treasurer.

These officers were empowered to proceed with the incorporation and to call a meeting of all interested members for the adoption of by-laws. Orders for vine stocks from nurseries were placed.

A letter was read from the head of an old wine house in New York, offering Albemarle growers $100 or more a ton for Norton and Ives grapes, dependent on their sugar content. He appeared ready to make a 10-year contract to take 10,000 tons of grapes annually.

CWA Men Ousted From Courthouse

Covington, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—About 50 dissatisfied CWA workers who had planned to meet last night in the courthouse here to present their grievances before S. W. Justice, of Clifton Forge, representative of the American Federation of Labor, were ejected from the building by the sheriff because of their failure to obtain permission to use the courthouse.

Mr. Justice objected strenuously to the ouster, and remained here today receiving complaints from the men.

Old Valley Covered Bridge Soon to Pass.

New Market, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—The last of Shenandoah County's picturesque old covered bridges, which for more than half a century has spanned the Shenandoah River between the Valley Pike and Quicksburg, north of here, may soon pass into discard.

Constable C. D. Stover heads a movement for a new State bridge and work is expected to start by early spring.

The present old, gray, weather-beaten bridge, supported by huge hand-hewn wooden arches, and weatherboarded up the sides, long has been considered unsafe. It was built by native artisans, John Woods and Robert Jones, who became noted far outside the county as master bridge builders.

Mrs. Mawyer's Funeral Held

Krol Given Six Years in Theft Of Wool Cash

Conviction Closes Probe of Corporation Looting at Winchester.

By C. B. Carr.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 28.—Max Krol, former treasurer and general selling agent of the defunct Arthur G. Jones Woolen Co., of Winchester, was found guilty of embezzling $4,312 of company funds by a jury in corporation court here late today and punishment was fixed at six years in the penitentiary.

Immediately following the verdict, Attorney Harry R. Kern, of defense counsel, made a motion to set aside the verdict as contrary to the law and evidence. Judge Philip Williams stated he would set a date for a hearing on the motion.

The jury deliverated an hour and 35 minutes.

Conviction of Krol is the last chapter in the failure of the Arthur G. Jones Woolen Co., which resulted in a loss of $300,000 to investors in Winchester and northern Virginia.

In 1924 Krol and Arthur G. Jones came to Winchester and organized the woolen company. Capital stock totaling $300,000 was sold. In 1929 a stockholders' protective committee audited the company's books and found alleged shortages, and indictments against the pair were returned.

Jones was arrested immediately, convicted and sentenced on two counts to three years in prison. He completed his sentence in December, 1932. Jones was president and general manager.

Krol, after indictment, became a fugitive from justice until last year, when he was apprehended in New York. Several other indictments against Krol are pending.

Krol, who appeared in court leaning on a cane and carrying one arm in a sling, appeared unmoved when Court Clerk Clark M. Smith read the verdict, signed by B. W. Largent, foreman.

U. S. Aids Families Moving From Park

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Mountain people who are leaving their homes in the Shenandoah National Park will get assistance under a Federal project headed by Ferdinand Zerkee, of Luray.

Eldridge Jones, of Moorman's River, has been named as an enumerator in this work for Albemarle County. Those named in Greene County are J. F. Gillis, George B. Deane, I. D. Davis, Robert Collier and Conrad C. Vernon.

The evacuation of the park area is already under way, and several families have moved into this section. One group plans to leave for Brazil.

New Inoculation Used.

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—A toxoid which requires only one injection instead of three is now being used by the city health department to inoculate children against diphtheria, according to Dr. C. B. Ransone, city health officer.

Postal Employe Gets Three Years

Danville, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Otha W. Owen, formerly in charge of the postal savings division of the Danville Postoffice, was sentenced to three years in the Federal Penitentiary today by Judge John Paul, following his conviction by a jury yesterday on charges of misappropriation of funds.

Owen asked for a continuance, saying he had not been able to make arrangements for counsel since his first trial when the jury failed to agree. Judge Paul then appointed two members of the local bar who began their defense 30 minutes after receiving the assignment.

Judge's Widow Receives Bulk of $60,000 Legacy

Waynesboro, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—The will of Judge Bennett T. Gordon, probated in Nelson County, disposed of a $60,000 estate.

Among the bequests was $5,000 to the Trinity Episcopal Church. The widow receives a substantial sum in fee simple and the benefits of a $25,000 trust fund.

Loan Rate Bill Sent to Senate At Charleston

House Rejects Unfavorable Committee Report to Pass Measure.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Seeking to reduce interest rates on small loans, the House of Delegates today overrode an unfavorable report from its taxation and finance committee, passed a bill cutting the rates and sent it to the Senate.

Introduced by Delegate Walter E. Stout (Democrat), Wood, the bill originally provided only a reduction of interest rate, but this was ruled out of order as being excluded by the Governor's call for the present special session. Stout then added an amendment calling for an annual license fee of $100 to $125 for the small loan agencies, thus making it a revenue measure.

The reduced rate of 2 per cent a month applies to the first $150, with 1 per cent additional up to $300. The existing legal rate for these loans is 3½ per cent a month on the first $150 and 2½ per cent on the second.

The Senate today gave final legislative authority to a bill passed yesterday by the House, authorizing the town of Hundred, Wetzel County, to levy a franchise and privilege tax on all business, except utilities, to raise money for firefighting equipment.

The Senate also finally passed bills authorizing Bluefield to borrow PWA funds for a stadium and a city market, and passed with technical changes a bill authorizing the Mercer County Board of Education to borrow like funds for a colored high school. The former went to the Governor and the latter was returned to the House.

Cold Hits CWA In Hagerstown

Citizens Fear Projects Will Not Be Ready by May 1.

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Fearing that most of the CWA projects in Washington County will be uncompleted May 1 when the CWA force here is to be disbanded, the Chamber of Commerce, local CWA committee and citizens will appeal to the CWA administration in Washington.

Weather during February has handicapped projects here 60 per cent, the CWA committee announced.

The local CWA forces were reduced by 106 men, effective Friday. This is the second reduction in the tapering off process, 529 having been laid off in accordance with instructions received a week ago, leaving the quota available after March 2 at 888 men.

Even with good weather until May 1 it would be impossible to complete some of the more important projects, the committee announced. The ground has been frozen to a depth of 18 inches, making work on road projects difficult.

Fifth Carroll Grange Installs Its Officers

Mount Airy, Md., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Carroll County's fifth grange, the Mount Airy unit, has been instituted by State Organizer Edward F. Holter. Mount Airy Grange, with a charter membership of 27, will install the following officers March 20:

Master, Leslie B. Rigler; overseer, Chester R. Hobbs; lecturer, Mrs. Rebecca Hobbs; secretary, Miss Ruth Hobbs; treasurer, Charles B. Buckman; chaplain, Albert Grimes; steward, Mareen Hobbs; assistant steward, James Van Sant; gatekeeper, Shirley Bohn; Ceres, Miss Ethel Reck; Pomona, Miss Kathleen Bohn; Flora, Mrs. William Davis; lady assistant steward, Mrs. Frank Gardner.

Burns Kill Man Who Rescued 6

Saved Wife and 5 Children From Flaming Home, But Caught Fire.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Frank Wachob, 54, head sawyer for a lumber company at Suncrest, is dead of burns suffered February 15 while rescuing his wife and five children from their burning home.

Wachob had built a big fire in the kitchen stove after rising early. The flue took fire and the blaze spread quickly. After vainly trying to extinguish the flames, Wachob ran upstairs, aroused the family and helped them out. The flames by then had spread so far that all were forced to leap from second-floor windows. Remaining behind until the others were safe, Wachob found his clothing had ignited and though he jumped from a window and rolled on the snow-covered ground, he was badly burned.

The residence and three adjoining homes were destroyed, while a fourth was damaged.

Legality in Doubt, Election Put Off

Moundsville Questions Tax Allotment Use.

Moundsville, W. Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—A special election, called for tomorrow to decide on a special tax levy, has been postponed two weeks because the city officials doubt whether the proposal is legal.

In the meantime, an interpretation of a law permitting cities without bonded or other contractual indebtedness to use the 30-cent levy allocation for general purposes will be obtained at Charleston. The point at issue is whether the allocation could be applied to 1933-34 taxes.

Because State tax authorities have ruled that it would not be legal, a proposal to levy an additional 2-cent tax at McMechen for maintenance of its volunteer fire department has been abandoned.

Year-Old Baby Burned To Death in Its Crib

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Today's subzero weather contributed to the death of Philip L. Barlup, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Barlup.

The Barlups' water pipes were frozen and Mrs. Barlup stepped outside to obtain a bucket of water. While she was gone the baby's blanket caught fire from a stove and the infant was so badly burned that he died three hours later in the Washington County Hospital.

Stockholders Of Closed Bank Ordered to Pay

Judges Urner and Willard Rule $205,000 Must Be Returned.

Frederick, Md., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Chief Judge Hammond Urner and Judge Arthur D. Willard filed a decree in the circuit court ordering 58 stockholders of the defunct Central Trust Co. to pay approximately $205,000 in liability assessment on stock they held when the bank and its 11 branches closed September 2, 1931.

The decree, in effect a judgment, is taken to apply to all of the 1,859 stockholders, mostly in Maryland, adjoining States and the District of Columbia who have not paid their liability assessment and it concludes litigation on part of John G. Ghingher, Maryland bank commissioner and receiver for the trust company, started eight months ago.

$100,000 Already Paid.

In the original suit $217,770 in assessments was sought. As a suit against all of the stockholders would be unwieldly, 50 were selected as defendants. This number was raised to 73 later, to include Emory L. Coblentz, president; Charles McC. Mathias, vice president, and others. In the meantime, $12,760 was collected from those named in the suit and about $100,000 was paid voluntarily.

Some weeks ago Judges Urner and Willard upheld the statutory liability of stockholders of the closed bank. This was followed by the suit against 73 to compel payment. A number of those mentioned disclaimed liability on the grounds that the bank was insolvent at the time they purchased the stock and also because officers misrepresented the stock as a sound investment. The court in a lengthy opinion held that as the stockholders received dividends on their stock and gave no indication of being dissatisfied their claim was invalid.

Those Affected.

Mr. Coblentz is named as owing $63,700; Thomas B. Hayward, a director, $30,000; Mr. Mathias, vice president, $11,540; Charles R. Holter, $9,000; John S. Hershey, $4,500; Albert Holter, $7,000; Thomas H. Legg, $6,000; McGill Belt, $4,100. Others ordered to pay smaller assessment include Edwin P. Abbe, Mary Hyatt Abbe, Samuel Ausherman and Ruth Ausherman, Alice L. Barrick, Frank B. Beasman, Roscoe P. Brown and Lydia K. Brown, John F. Bussard, John Franklin Bussard, Eva W. Chiswell, Mary K. Coblentz, Minnie H. Cramer, Nina C. Cramer, Silas S. Cramer, Thomas L. Cramer and Bessie Cramer, Myrtle O. Crist, Joseph N. Darby, John A. Engle, George N. English, James H. Firor and Sarah O. Firor, Nelson H. Fooks, Samuel J. Geiser, Basil C. Gilson, Harvey R. Grosinickle, William J. Grove, Albert L. Hauver, David L. Hedges, John S. Hershey, Alma S. Holler, Annie C. Holton, M. Frank Holter, Florence V. Holter, John W. Holter, Nora K. Holter, Hubert L. Horine, William C. Humm, Pearl E. Humm, Bertha B. Kefauver, Maurice D. Kefauver, William J. Kepler, Ada S. Knott, Simon H. Koogle, David O. Leatherman, Katie P. Long, Naomi O. Mackley, Lloyd C. Mackley, Samuel E. McBride, Armstrong G. McKinney, Edward B. Mesell, Albert C. Miller and M. Luther Miller.

The stockholders are also ordered to pay the costs of the suit with interest from July 1, 1933.

Washington County Bar Will Honor 3 Pioneers

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—The Washington County Bar Association will honor three members of 50 or more years at a dinner March 5.

The three veteran members are former Mayor Reinhold J. Halm, admitted to the bar 60 years ago; former Judge Martin L. Keedy, a member for 51 years, and Daniel W. Doub, a member for 50 years.

Waynesboro, Pa., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—The local Young Men's Christian Association's financial condition is such that it will have to close unless help is forthcoming, its director revealed in a request to the Waynesboro Beneficial Fund Association. The sum of $1,600 is needed immediately.

The Beneficial Fund Association's new officers are: President, J. H. Stoner; vice president, J. J. Oller; treasurer, Dr. P. D. Hoover; secretary, S. G. Benedict.

Winchester Beer Licenses And Lodging Houses Decrease

Winchester, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—The sale of beverages here, particularly 3.2 beer, appears either unpopular or unprofitable, judging from figures issued by Commissioner of Revenue Charles P. McVicar.

Whereas in 1933 there were 36 retailers and 11 wholesalers of beverages licensed here, the number has now decreased to 26 and 5, respectively.

The number of licensed lodging houses also decreased from 50 in 1933 to 33 in 1934.

Mr. McVicar reported that city licenses collected to date aggregate $16,884.26, while the State licenses assessed against the same persons total $13,325.17.

Merchants paid the greatest aggregate levy, $8,760.71. Other divisions were: Beverage retailers, $390; beverage wholesalers, $250; automobiles, $755, and miscellaneous, $7,476.

Two hundred and sixteen merchants have been licensed to do business in 1934. Other licenses include 3 picture shows, 18 lawyers, 2 bowling alleys, 2 common criers, 6 contractors and plumbers, 3 building and loan firms, 6 dentists, 88 tobacco dealers, 3 hotels 1 junk dealer, 2 laundries, 2 peddlers, 3 photographers, 1 pool room, 3 real estate dealers, 26 restaurants, 3 undertakers and 2 veterinarians.

West Virginia CWA Control Plan Defeated

Herold Motion to Form Joint Commission Voted Down.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—By a vote of 18 to 8, the State Senate today defeated an effort by Senator A. C. Herold (Democrat), Braxton, chairman of the joint legislative CWA investigating committee, to place expenditure of Federal relief funds under control of a State commission.

Herold proposed a commission of 12 members, to include the Governor, the president and three members of the Senate, the speaker and three members of the House, and three citizens to be named by the Governor.

Plans for completing a voluminous record of its findings and submitting it to the legislature were announced today by Herold. In the meantime, additional complaints of political preference and charges of mismanagement are being heard.

Among witnesses just examined was Hetzell Pownall, of Moorefield, former State commander of the American Legion, who charged inefficiency in CWA administration in Hardy County, and said that "being a veteran in Hardy County is a disadvantage as far as the CWA is concerned."

Returning from Washington today, after receiving there assurance of cooperation from National officials, William N. Beehler, State CWA administrator, and Francis W. Turner, State welfare director, found telegrams and letters from 16 counties notifying them that the last Federal grant of relief funds had been exhausted.

These counties are Kanawha, McDowell, Mingo, Berkeley, Lincoln, Fayette, Cabell, Barbour, Wayne, Lewis, Logan, Mercer, Boone, Greenbrier, Roane and Brooke. In the meantime, the Legislature prepared to seek means of providing State funds the Federal Government has demanded must be supplied before additional relief funds will be granted. The last grant of Federal relief, $450,000, was made ten days ago.

A mass meeting of all CWA workers and sympathizers in the central counties today was called for Sunday afternoon in the Masonic Temple by J. A. Rowe, president of the Clarksburg Council of National Unemployment Councils of the United States.

Miss Martha Evans Weds.

Fairmont, W. Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Martha Merle Evans, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Evans, to Harold Raymond Miller, son of Judge Charles E. Miller, of the criminal court of Marion County, and Mrs. Miller, which took place February 8 in Pittsburgh. Mr. Miller is a grandson of Mrs. Laura A. Miller, Strasburg, Va.

Reversal Gives Liquor License To Chain Firm

Maryland Bureau Grants Permit Denied by Carroll Board.

Westminster, Md., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—The State license bureau yesterday reversed a decision of the Carroll County Board of License Commissioners and granted a liquor license to the Read Drug & Chemical Co. for their store here.

The county commissioners had refused a license after a protesting petition declared that the Legislature intended that the local officer of the corporation applying for a license must be a managing officer of the corporation conducting the business of the corporation at the locality for which the license is sought and residing there for at least two years prior to making the application.

The petitioners charged that Edward O. Diffendal, of Westminster, appointed vice president of the company just prior to filing of the application for a license, was not a bona-fide officer of the Read Drug & Chemical Co. Diffendal's appointment did not comply with the law, it was charged, because he had no control over the policies of the company and was merely elected in order that the local store could obtain a license. However, the State license bureau said:

"If the Legislature intended that the officer described in the statute should be required to be an active managing officer and to have been such for two years prior to the date of the application, it would result in any chain store corporation doing business in a number of counties being denied licenses.

"The statute, in our opinion, is not susceptible of this construction, but on the contrary the statute was designed to permit any corporation to be eligible to procure a license, by having an officer in the county, who has the qualifications in the statute, make the application."

Man Held in Theft From Another Who Slept

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Charged with larceny of $175 from George Vanersdale, near here. Raymond Unger, of near Berkeley Springs, was ordered held for the Morgan County grand jury under $1,000 bond. Clarence Whisner, arrested with Unger, was released.

Vanersdale said the money was taken from his clothing while he slept.

17,000 Cumberland Voters.

50 Prisoners Win Paroles From Ritchie

3 Montgomery, 2 Prince Georges Men to Get Freedom March 6.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 28.—Gov. Albert C. Ritchie today announced his decision to parole 50 prisoners from State prisons, and releases will be granted March 6 unless cause to the contrary is shown. In addition to the paroles, the governor will grant restoration of citizenship in case of certain prisoners previously released, and he ordered a reduction of sentence in two cases.

All of the paroles were recommended by Parole Commissioner Clark. A large number of the prisoners were sentenced for chicken stealing. They included the following from the counties indicated, the majority of other cases being from Baltimore courts:

Montgomery—John Cooper, Emmett Bryant and Walter R. Benson.
Prince Georges—Clyde Allen and Edward W. Money.
Washington County—Thomas Shipper, Ross Hamilton, John Toms, Emmert W. Hawbaker, Theodore Miller and Leander Peck.
Calvert—Warren Gantt.
Carroll—John Lattiers and Roland Davis.
Charles—George Brown.
Anne Arundel—Owen Creighton, John E. Stump, Clyde Armstrong and Everett Slater.

Coal Shortage In Hagerstown

Cold Weather Augments Slashed Production Due to Code.

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—This city is faced with a coal shortage, several varieties generally used having become exhausted within the past week.

Pocahontas and run-of-mine coal, household types, are very scarce and dealers are having difficulty in obtaining a new supply.

Operators say it is impossible to produce coal in previous quantities because the mines are now being operated on a 40-hour-week basis and the demand exceeds the output, particularly due to the severe weather this month. Operators in the Pocahontas region say production is held up due to their inability to find a market for slack coal.

Orders that were to have been delivered February 1 have not yet arrived, and the supply in many grades is exhausted. Some dealers are parceling out the coal to their regular customers.

The heavy snow also has made coal delivery difficult. Dealers report that only about 50 per cent of the normal deliveries can be made.

Bars Barred

Long Dominoes Among Items Prison Bans.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Double six dominoes may be given convicts of the State penitentiary at Moundsville, but the double nines are barred. There are two reasons—the larger ones give opportunity for smuggling in saws, and they are used more readily for gambling.

These and many other things are proscribed in a new list of forbidden articles just compiled by Warden Clifton F. McClintic. The ban includes anything which might be converted into weapons, be used as a means of escape or clog the prison sewer system.

Under the last-named class are included unshelled nuts and watermelons. Pepper is proscribed because convicts might use a handful to throw into the eyes of a guard. All tin and glass containers are prohibited. Leather belts and silk and rayon underwear also are interdicted. The former could be used in scaling walls and the latter is difficult to mark for laundering.

Arbitration Board Sets Value of Land

Miller Tract Is Allowed $28,440, in Finding.

Front Royal, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—The board of arbitration for the northern counties of the Shenandoah National Park today announced an award of $28,440 for 600 acres of land owned by Miller estate heirs in Rappahannock and Warren Counties.

The appraisal commissioners had placed a valuation of $20,415 on the lands. The Millers originally claimed over $100,000, later reduced to about $60,000.

All claims in the eight counties inside the Kelsey line have been settled, and final dates for court condemnation of last tracts have been set. Warren and Albemarle, March 1; Page, Mrch 3; Madison, March 5; Greene, March 9; Rappahannock, March 12, and Augusta, March 13. When these court orders become effective, title to the entire park area will be given to the Federal Government.

Hodges Favors Prison-Printed School Books

Delegate of Mecklenburg Would Have Texts Provided Free.

Richmond, Feb. 25 (AP).—Delegate Y. Melvin Hodges, of Mecklenburg, will seek to require the State Board of Education to set up a staff for the editing and publication of school textbooks to be printed in the State penitentiary for free distribution to Virginia pupils.

Hodges sought to require this in an amendment offered yesterday to the Boschen-Witten bill prohibiting the sale in Virginia of prison-made goods from other States, but the speaker ruled that the amendment was not germane to the bill. Hodges said it would be offered again on an appropriate bill.

The amendment would require the Board of Education to set up the textbook editing staff effective January 1, 1935, and finance it out of funds appropriated for the use of the board, with a $4,000 salary maximum. The superintendent of the penitentiary would be required to set up the proper machinery, and all textbooks used in the schools would be printed in the penitentiary.

The Governor would be empowered to approve expenditures in the penitentiary for purchase of the printing and binding machinery, even though a deficit was forced.

Chesapeake Ice Maroons Ships

Coast Guard Rushed Food to Chincoteague Boats; 10 Steamers Held Up.

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Coast Guard headquarters today received an appeal from the chamber of commerce of Chincoteague Island and others to send assistance to a number of fishermen whose boats are caught in the ice there. The telegram stated "Fishermen are in dire distress and can't earn a living for their families."

A number of fish boats are caught in the ice at Chincoteague and other points on both sides of Chesapeake Bay. Near Baltimore ten steamers are hemmed in by heavy ice and have been unable to move for more than a week.

The Japanese steamer Nakai Maru arrived today from Baltimore and reported heavy ice all the way down the bay. The ship had a difficult time passing through the ice field and her skipper reported sighting a number of boats unable to move at all.

The cutters Rush and Reliance were dispatched to the upper portion of the bay to help break the ice. Patrol boat CG-208 was dispatched to Chincoteague to assist in freeing fishing boats. She carried extra provisions for the crews of the ice-bound fishing boats.

Convict's Plea Fails to Save Wife in Court

Mrs. Best Held Guilty With Mate in $800 Check Fraud Here.

Albet Best, declared by police to be "the slickest confidence man in the United States," brought all his persuasiveness to bear in District Supreme Court yesterday in an effort to save his pretty 22-year-old wife from conviction on a charge of false pretenses—but to no avail.

Blonde and modishly dressed, Mrs. Thea Best was found guilty before Justice Joseph W. Cox, despite the contention of her husband that she was in complete ignorance of his operations. They were arrested together in Akron, charged with having obtained $800 worth of travelers' checks here on a bad check.

Best, alleged to have swindled several Washingtonians and to be wanted in several cities, was convicted several weeks ago and is serving a term of one to three years. Mrs. Best will be sentenced Friday.

After the pair were indicted, Best pleaded guilty and asked Justice Peyton Gordon to liberate his attractive wife. He declared she knew nothing of his operations.

Testifying yesterday, Best, a huge man, admitted police in a score of cities would like to question him. He told Assistant United States Attorney Irving Goldstein, when asked about numerous aliases, that they "would fill an encyclopedia."

Fisherville School Rebuilding Planned

Fire Destroys Structure Near Staunton.

Staunton, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Augusta County school officials lost no time today in launching plans for rebuilding the ten-room building at Fisherville, destroyed by fire last night. Architect Long, of the State Board of Education, will arrive tomorrow to assist.

Meantime, work has been started on a ten-room wooden "shanty" structure, where classes will be held temporarily. It is expected these rooms will be available within a week. This plan was followed when Fisherville lost its school by fire in 1922.

County School Supt. Crawford Gilkeson estimates the loss at $32,000, with $24,000 insurance. The fire is believed to have started when gas in the furnace exploded and scattered blazing coal about the basement. Because of inadequate water supply and zero temperature, Staunton and Waynesboro firemen were powerless.

District Quota Of CWA Told At Staunton

7 Counties and 4 Cities Get 2,824 Workers in Allotment.

Staunton, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Under the second phase of the Civil Works Administration program, the Valley district of seven counties and four cities has been apportioned 2,824 workers, including men and women.

Under the first phase of the CWA, completed February 15, district allotments were made on the basis of man-hours, but in the new period the basis is a total number of workers.

Staunton receives 181 workers under the new allotment, and Augusta County 613 workers.

In the second phase, workers are divided into six classes: men, women, airport, county or community sanitation, Tennessee Valley Authority and coast and geodetic survey. In this district, however, there are no TVA workers. The district total apportionments are:

Augusta County, 613; Bath County, 132; Frederick County, 253; Rockbridge County, 332; Highland County, 72; Rockingham County, 451; Shenandoah County, 417; Buena Vista, 74; Harrisonburg, 97; Staunton, 181, and Winchester, 202.

46,000 Hours to Albemarle.

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 28.—The CWA allotment for the second phase of its program in Albemarle County will amount to only 46,000 hours, according to information received from Richmond today. The allotment for the first period was 166,000 hours.

The 3,000 registered unemployed in the county and city will be divided into A, B, C classes according to their need. None will be employed from the B class until the A class is exhausted.

Shenandoah Pay Roll Halved.

Woodstock, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—The Civil Works Administration pay roll for Shenandoah County has been cut in half on orders of State officials, Harold G. Chandler, CWA administrator, stated today. There will be 309 men and 35 women employed under the reduction.

Instructions from State headquarters indicated the rate of pay for CWA workers would be cut, Mr. Chandler stated, probably within ten days.

Bristol Seeks Workers.

Bristol, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Appeals have been sent to State officials to prevent the laying off of 465 CWA employes here next Saturday, but no replies have been received yet, Administrator Fox Drinkard said today.

Drinkard wrote to officials of the Eighth Virginia District of the CWA at Roanoke and E. G. Terrell, local inspector of works, wrote to his chief at Roanoke.

The storm sewer system on Euclid avenue and the school building repairs programs here are important, and the contemplated reduction in work "would seriously retard their progress," Mr. Terrell said.

Danville Loan Defeated.

Danville, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—The City Council next week will inform the Public Works Administration in Washington that voters here decided against utilizing the $3,000,000 allocation set aside for the proposed power project, and the money will be released, it is understood, for some other purpose in Virginia.

Spotsylvania Has Grain To Feed Hungry Birds

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—P. Blake Lewis, game warden for Spotsylvania County, has received 50 bushels of wheat from the State Game Department for distribution to persons interested in feeding birds while snow is on the ground.

Webb Midyette, District game warden, warned of the desperate need for feeding birds, while E. S. Moore, president of the Stafford County Game and Fish Protective Association, requested school children to assist.

Police Rum Power Asked.

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Authority to aid in the enforcement of the Alleghany County liquor control law has been asked of the mayor and city council by Chief of Police Oscar A. Eyerman. He said police here now lack power to arrest violators of the county law, although most of the county's licensed places are in this city.

2 Persons Lose Lives in D. C. Auto Crashes

Police Think One Victim May Have Succumbed to Heart Attack.

Two persons died in automobile accidents in Washington yesterday.

An autopsy will be performed today to determine whether a heart attack or injuries killed William Howe Becker, 50, of 608 Carroll avenue, Takoma Park, Md., when he walked into the side of an automobile at Fifteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest shortly after noon yesterday.

Becker was dead when taken to Emergency Hospital a few minutes after the accident. Physicians were doubtful that the injuries he received were sufficient to cause death, and it is believed he may have suffered an acute heart attack.

Lawrence D. Smith, of 1225 Oates street northeast, driver of the car later was released by police, who said Becker was walking from a car-loading platform against a red light at the time of the accident.

Mrs. Mary E. Mills, 36, of 2704 Sixth street northeast, was killed early yesterday morning when the Mills automobile, driven by her husband, John E. Mills, was struck by an American Oil Co. truck at Rhode Island avenue and Fourth street northeast.

Charles Paul Adams, 1458 Columbia road northwest, driver of the truck, was released in the custody of his attorney, according to police, pending outcome of an inquest today. Mills escaped with superficial injuries. Mrs. Mills is survived by two small children besides her husband.

British Navy Softens Blow

Offers Cash Inducement to Officers Who Retire Voluntarily.

London (U.P.).—"Make way for a naval officer."

But the way that England is trying to make for a large number of her commissioned seadogs is a way out of the service. The British navy has a superfluity of lieutenants and lieutenant commanders.

The admiralty doesn't like to fire these trained and loyal officers, but it has made them an attractive offer to retire voluntarily. The men will be presented upon retirement with a good-sized gratuity to enable them to start up in civilian life.

When it became evident in 1931 that the surplus of young officers was becoming too burdensome, the admiralty initiated a scheme whereby officers were allowed to retire upon pension.

The new plan will embrace practically all classes of young officers. As an inducement to retire lieutenant commanders under the age of 40 are offered a cash gratuity of £2,500, with an additional £200 for each year's seniority in that rank.

Loudoun County Digging Out.

Leesburg, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Loudoun County is being shoveled out of one of its worst snow storms in years with the aid of 100 CWA employes. Appeals for help continue to pour in to Mrs. Blanche M. Melvin, welfare worker.

Icebergs Also Seen in Bay, Watermen Claim.

Crisfield, Md., Feb. 28 (AP).—Stories of seeing seals and icebergs in Chesapeake Bay and also in the nearby Atlantic Ocean are being told by watermen in this section.

Herds of seals have been reported seen along the coast and at least two have been reported seen in Chesapeake Bay—an almost unheard of happening.

Capt. Dykes Taylor, crossing the bay en route to Crisfield, said he saw a large silver seal in Tangier Sound, near Tangier Island. He said he got within 60 yards of it as it dozed on the ice.

Several persons reported making an effort to capture a seal in the Annamessix River, near here.

From the Cedar View, Va., side of the Eastern Shore came the story of an iceberg 20 feet high being seen At Deal Island another large berg was seen.

Students Hurt by Spill.

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Three St. James students, returning by automobile from their homes after a week-end holiday, were injured when the motor car went over an embankment near Braddock Heights. The three, Marthas Sterling and Steve Close, Bel Air, Md., and Sidney Watter, Baltimore, were treated at the hospital here. Close suffered a dislocated shoulder.

New Aid Plan Is Disclosed By President

Program to Take Place of CWA Asks More From States.

to be organized prevented a more calculated policy. It also recognized that at least some of the criticism of the CWA was on solid ground.

Transplanting Planned.

Relief of the "stranded populations," who have neither opportunity for employment nor self-support from the soil, involves their transplanting to more generous localities. Mr. Roosevelt said Administrator Hopkins had estimated these families at 300,000, but that others attending an executive council meeting Tuesday spoke in higher figures, up to 500,000.

"It is planned to explore this difficult situation and, in collaboration with the Subsistence Homesteads Division of the Department of the Interior, and with other Federal and local agencies, devise and apply definite remedial measures which will affect an appreciable number of these families," the White House statement said.

"These measures will be directed first at maintenance of small tracts of land and then at the development of supplemental industrial opportunities to provide for a normal standard of living."

Six-Month Work Limit.

Principles of the CWA, now nearing dissolution, will be continued, however, in providing work relief for the urban unemployed. Mr. Roosevelt reaffirmed the Government's present policy in this field, but asserted closer investigation will be given applicants, who will be limited to six months' work.

"This is in order," the statement explained, "that it may not be considered, or utilized, as a permanent means of support."

The whole new program looks to eventual absorption of the 3,200,000 now on CWA rolls by public works and private industry. It will be continued indefinitely—although generally discussed for one year—under rules and regulations now being drawn at emergency relief headquarters.

Commenting on the problem of of the rural needy, Mr. Roosevelt pointed out that many areas have depended upon one crop, which paid perhaps once every five years. Relief in these cases, he said, should be through diversification of crops to provide family support, somewhat in line with the Georgia cow-hog-hen campaign to get away from cotton.

Part-Time Income.

It is cheaper and more beneficial, experience has shown, to provide the cow instead of the milk. While cash income thus is not as essential as with urban workers, the Administration plans to exercise every influence toward having township and county gangs engaged in such employment as road work opened to rural inhabitants to provide a part-time income.

In the continuation of the CWA—if under another name—in the cities, the Administration plans shifting the responsibility more to local communities. Careful check of the 4,000,000 formerly on CWA pay rolls was impossible, he said, but under the new program jobs will be more restricted. The share-work movement will be continued by limiting employment to only one member of a family.

The shifting of "stranded populations"—a strictly New Deal contribution to unemployment relief—will bring to greater significance the subsistence homesteads, almost 25 of which have already been begun. From two to three times that number eventually will be established from the $25,000,000 allocated to this purpose.

Dole Termed Repugnant.

In this connection, President Roosevelt only Tuesday gave the word to agricultural aids to go ahead with the Government purchase of from 3,000,000 to 5,000,000 acres of submarginal land. Many of these families will be offered places in subsistence homesteads as the Government acquires their land, it is understood.

By the statement that direct relief "is not an adequate way of meeting the needs of able-bodied workers," President Roosevelt reiterated the Administration's general opposition to the dole. In effect, such a system of relief was termed in the White House statement as "repugnant to American ideals or individual self-reliance."

The relief program will be kept strictly within the President's budget, it was indicated. Of the present $950,000,000 appropriated both for direct relief and CWA, the President expects $600,000,000 to be left by May and about $500,000,000 by the end of the fiscal year, June 30. This sum he expects to be sufficient for unemployment relief during the whole of the next fiscal year.

Will Ask 2 Billions.

The Administration is not binding to this amount, however, as the President intends to ask Congress soon for $2,000,000,000 as a lump sum for recovery expenditures next year. Within this figure is contained $500,000,000—or possibly more—for public works, but any subdivision is subject to reallocation at any time.

Officials at relief headquarters characterized the President's announcement as a "declaration of principle" which should hearten the unemployed by affirming that the Government does not intend "to let them down" after the CWA demobilization.

As to wages, it is indicated the maximum and minimums of the CWA, which provoked much of the criticism of that organization, will be abolished in favor of wage scales based on "prevailing rates" in communities.

Long-range intergradation of numerous agencies—the Interior Department through its homesteads corporation and PWA, Agriculture Department, Labor Department, and both the Federal Emergency Relief and Federal Surplus Relief Administrations (the latter of which will buy submarginal land)—is called for under the new program.

It will be under the general direction of Mr. Hopkins, who has assumed increasing stature in the New Deal and is close to the ear of the President. In it was seen the seeds of a permanent policy toward unemployment which dovetails into the Administration's National plan-

New Federal Relief Plan

Methods for Continuing Aid After Demobilization of CWA Are Outlined by President; Work Aimed at 3 Major Groups of Needy.

In the following White House statement, President Roosevelt yesterday unfolded a three-point program for the continuation of Federal relief after the demobilization of the Civil Works Administration this spring:

The experience of the past nine months has shown that the problem of unemployment must be faced on more than one front.

Coincident with the plans for the demobilization of Civil Works has been the development of a program to meet the peculiar needs of three separate and distinct groups in need through no fault of their own.

It has been found that these three groups fall into the following classifications:

1. Distressed families in rural areas.

2. Those composing "standard populations," i.e., living in single-industry communities in which there is no hope of future reemployment, such as miners in work-out fields.

3. The unemployed in large cities.

The Administration will be guided by these groupings in expending the $950,000,000 recently appropriated by Congress.

The care of needy persons in rural areas is a problem quite distinct and apart from that of the industrial unemployed. Their security must be identified with agriculture. They must be placed in positions of self-support. In many parts of the country this calls for a change from commercial farming and dependence upon a single cash crop to the raising of the various commodities needed to maintain the family.

Relief funds, therefore, will be expended on behalf of rural families in a manner and to an extent that will enable them to achieve self-support. Work for wages from relief funds is not an essential part of this phase of the program and will be provided only insofar as it is necessary to accomplish the primary objective. No encouragement of an extension of competitive farming is contemplated, but rather the placing of thousands of persons who have made their living from agriculture into a relationship with the soil that will provide them a security they do not now enjoy.

Methods to Be Employed.

Some of the methods to be employed include building, or rebuilding, to provide adequate farm homes; the provision of seed and of stock for other than commercial purposes, and opportunities to these workers to earn modest cash incomes through part-time or seasonal employment in small industrial enterprises. There should also be a planned distribution of the regular jobs on highways; in the National and State parks and forests and other public work prosecuted in agricultural communities.

The plan calls for complete cooperation with the Department of Agriculture and with the State and county agricultural departments throughout the country. It substitutes for direct relief an opportunity to obtain and maintain self-support in an accustomed environment, and completely divorces relief activities in rural areas from those in the cities.

Only a careful survey can determine the number of families included in "stranded populations," but there are sufficient data already collected to indicate a situation of substantial proportions. The solution of the problem of these families involves their physical transplanting, in a large majority of cases, since the areas in which they are concentrated offer neither future employment at wages nor opportunities for self-support through agriculture.

It is planned to explore this difficult situation and, in collaboration with the Subsistence Homesteads Division of the Department of the Interior, and with other Federal and local agencies, devise and apply remedial measures which will affect an appreciable number of these families. These measures will be directed first at maintenance on small tracts of land and then provide for a normal standard of living.

The needy unemployed living in cities and towns and who, in the course of coming months, may reasonably look forward to regular jobs, are entitled to and should receive insofar as possible, adequate assurance of means to maintain themselves during the balance of the period of their enforced idleness. The Federal Government, both in its relief measures and in its Civil Works program, now nearing completion, has been meeting an emergency situation.

Direct Relief Opposed.

Direct relief as such, whether in the form of cash or relief in kind, is not an adequate way of meeting the needs of ablebodied workers. They very properly insist upon an opportunity to give to the community their services in the form of labor in return for unemployment benefits. The Federal Government has no intention nor desire to force either upon the country or the unemployed themselves a system of relief which is repugnant to American ideals of individual self-reliance. Therefore, work programs which would not normally be undertaken by public bodies, but which are at the same time outside of the field of private industry, will be projected and prosecuted in and near industrial communities. Labor on these projects will not be expected of dependent members of the community who are unable to work, but will be confined to those needy unemployed who can give adequate return for the unemployment benefits which they receive.

Work will be given to an individual for a period not to exceed six months. This is in order that it may not be considered, or utilized, as a permanent method of support. It will be administered by and under the direction of those responsible for the unemployment relief activities in industrial communities.

Every effort will be made to continue opportunities for work for the professional groups in need—teachers, engineers, architects, artists, nurses and others.

This program expresses a conviction that industrial workers who are unemployed and in need of relief should be given an opportunity for livelihood by the prosecution of a flexible program of public works. The several States will be aided, as the Federal relief law provides, in the financing of this enterprise.

School Heads Vote to Follow Modern Trend

"Out-Moded" Education Is Criticized at Session in Cleveland.

Cleveland, Feb. 28 (AP).—Accused of teaching out-moded social and economic theories, the Nation's foremost educators today resolved to take the lead in furthering the development of the newer concepts, and agreed the schools and colleges should "keep in step."

Highlight of the educators' trend was the adoption of a resolution urging President Roosevelt to create a special council for national social-economic planning.

The resolution, adopted by several thousand college professors and superintendents of schools, attending the convention of the National Education Association's department of superintendence, further asserted:

"We recommend that educational leaders join with all other leaders who desire to cooperate in setting up a program of relief for and correction of maladjustments in the socio-economic world.

"We believe that the schools should keep step with the changes that are occurring in the country and throughout the world."

The same body today heard one of the country's prominent business men declare that economic and social theories of by-gone days, still taught in American schools and colleges, were among the principal causes of the depression.

The speaker, Edward A. Filene, Boston merchant, added that "had it not been for the extraordinary leadership of President Roosevelt, America would very likely have been thrown into some such social convulsion as has occurred in several European countries."

United States Senator Royal S. Copeland urged the educators to join in a concerted drive to halt crime in its infancy, by special treatment of children who develop antisocial tendencies.

Ohioan Pleads Guilty In $130,000 Holdup

Salem, N. J., Feb. 28 (AP).—Charles Kent, 45, of Canton, Ohio, pleaded guilty today to charges of participation in the $130,000 holdup and robbery of two messengers of the Pennsgrove National Bank & Trust Co. February 2.

Kent was arrested with two men and a woman in Camden the next day, when police seized a suitcase containing more than $35,000 of the loot.

'Civilization' Plans to Place Hitler 'On Trial' in Gotham

New York, Feb. 28 (U.P.).—Chancellor Adolf Hitler will be "placed on trial" by "civilization" the night of March 7 in Madison Square Garden, with Samuel Seabury as prosecutor and with an imposing array of distinguished American citizens serving as witnesses.

The "trial" is to be held two days after the anniversary of Hitler's accession to power and is sponsored by the American Jewish Congress and the American Federation of Labor.

It was indicated that Hitler will be represented by proxy.

The witnesses will include:

For American public opinion—Alfred E. Smith, Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia, Senator Millard Tydings, Dr. John Haynes Holmes.

For labor—William Green.

Eyewitness — Arthur Garfield Hays.

For civil liberties—Roger Baldwin.

For the academic world—Chancellor Harry Woodburn Chase, of New York University.

For the world of sports—Gustavus Kirby.

For the liberals—Prof Raymond Moley.

For the Jews—Rabbi Stephen S.

Liquor Legal; Not This Kind

Man Found Guilty in Sale of Colored Alcohol.

Almost coincident with the inauguration of the first legal sales of liquor in the District since prohibition, Nathan Drayfus, 46, of 1428 Columbia road northwest, was convicted by a jury in the United States division of Police Court before Judge Gus Schuldt yesterday on two charges of selling and possessing licensed whisky.

The case was the first to be tried under the new District liquor law. Drayfus will be sentenced Saturday.

Drayfus, according to testimony of Dr. Walter Spears, Government chemist, was selling colored alcohol on the pretense that it was bonded whisky.

Jardine to Become Wichita U. President

Topeka, Kans., Feb. 28 (AP).—W. M. Jardine, former United States Secretary of Agriculture, resigned as Kansas State treasurer today to become president of the Wichita (Kans.) Municipal University.

No successor was named by Gov. Alf M. Landon.

Singing Children, Like Lorelei, Lure Shark, Turtle in Samoa

George S. Parker Asserts He Saw Spectacle on Island.

Los Angeles, Feb. 28 (AP).—George S. Parker, fountain pen manufacturer, asserts he saw little children in an American Samoan village stand on the beach and lure giant shark and a huge turtle to shore with a chant and handclapping.

Parker has just landed here en route home after a business visit in Samoa, where a native chief is his agent.

"My agent," said Parker, "took me to the village and induced the children to chant their little songs. Pretty soon in came a big shark who stayed for a time and then swam away. Then the children chanted again and in came a huge turtle, it stayed a while and also disappeared.

"I know it sounds fishy, but I saw it with my own eyes. Later I sent other passengers there to find out if it was an accident, and they saw the same thing.

"There is a native legend that a prince and princess many generations ago fell in love but were not allowed to marry. They were supposed to have gone to the huge lava cliff near the village and leaped into the sea, the prince becoming a shark and the princess a turtle."

Dognaped!

Where Is Timmie; Wonders Owner of Pup.

Chicago, Feb. 28 (AP).—Timmie, a blue-ribbon "dognaping" victim, was still missing tonight and his owner, Louis Rudginsky, Boston tire merchant, fidgeted about his hotel room waiting for a call from Timmie's abductors.

"I don't know what I'll do," said Rudginsky, who was midway between tears and profanity.

Last night a friend received a call demanding $500 ransom for the dog, a 13-pound purebred, which had won three dog shows recently. Earlier some one called Rudginsky with the same demand.

"The darn little dog," Rudginsky said, as he wandered around a hotel room. "He wasn't worth 5 cents, unless you like dogs, you know. I wouldn't take $10,000 for him, if I had $10,000."

'Middies' to Cruise In European Seas

850 to Sail June 1 on 2 U. S. Vessels.

For the first time in three years, Naval Academy midshipmen will make their practice cruise this summer to western European ports, according to the Associated Press.

Members of the first and third classes at Annapolis, totaling 850, will make the cruise aboard the battleship Arkansas and the training ship Wyoming.

The ports to be visited include Gibraltar, Naples, Villefranche and Plymouth, England.

The squadron, under command of Rear Admiral Hayne Ellis, will start June 1.

Friend of Longfellow Is Dead at Butler, Pa.

Butler, Pa., Feb. 28 (AP).—Funeral services will be held at Cabot tomorrow for the Rev. Lambert E. Lennox, D. D., 80, a friend of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow and Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Mr. Lennox, a pastor in Methodist Episcopal churches of Michigan for half a century, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Garrett Pyrrell, after coming to Cabot on a visit from New York. He retired 13 years ago.

Here's How!

After all these years, and nearly three months after many of the States, the cheering glass is again legal in Washington. It is a day for rejoicing. Once again the good life, in the understanding of it that George Saintsbury had, may be led by civilized people in the District.

The National Capital is perhaps fortunate in the delay which kept the bottle corked until today. The exuberance of sudden release from the tyranny of the eighteenth amendment will not be excessive here. Urbane Washington, acting slowly, has had a chance to observe its fellow Americans in their reaction to repeal and counts among its cosmopolitan population thousands who know from first-hand experience the feeling of freedom. There should, for that reason, be little abuse of the new privilege. There will be celebration, yes, and gayety, we hope, and new laughter in this important corner of a sad old world, as glasses are lifted in a hearty amen to repeal.

The locked door is open and hypocrisy passes out. Washington joins with other enlightened communities in rejoicing, certain that it is appreciative enough of this most pleasing aspect of the New Deal to use an ancient gift of nature wisely, and not too well.

Mr. Davis Speaks Out.

The most significant criticism of Administration policy evoked this week was not brought forth by Gen. Johnson's "field day" for the NRA. It was inspired by the recent pamphlet of the Secretary of Agriculture entitled "America Must Choose" and it was delivered in New York by John W. Davis, Democratic standard bearer in the 1924 Presidential campaign.

As must all Democrats with any knowledge of, or faith in, the fine traditions of their party, Mr. Davis confesses himself appalled by the trend toward bureaucracy, regimentation and governmental interference with economic laws which the country has been following with accelerating pace in recent months. Wisdom in government, he points out, consists in discovering these laws and following them, "not in devising hasty expedients whereby they may be circumvented." Recovery awaits a courageous and patient pilgrimage along paths tested by past experience not, again in Mr. Davis' cutting words, in "looking for scapegoats and hoping for shortcuts."

The first year of the New Deal is now drawing to its close. Its plan and method are becoming reasonably clear to all. Its program has received ungrudging nonpartisan support. But the time for uncensored nonpartisan criticism is overdue. In speaking, frankly and fearlessly to the text of "America Must Choose," John W. Davis has again demonstrated his right to be regarded as an outstanding leader in national as well as party life.

Look Before Leaping.

President Roosevelt's approach to the controversial issue of Philippine independence stands out in sharp contrast to that of congressional leaders who declared a few weeks ago that the Filipinos would have to accept the Hawes-Cutting bill or nothing. Apparently the President has been impressed by the Filipinos' objections to that measure as presented by the independence mission now in Washington. Instead of trying to force Senator Quezon and his colleagues to accept an unsatisfactory law, the President has negotiated with them for modification that will be mutually acceptable.

Reports that an agreement between the President and the Filipino leaders has been reached are also important because they indicate that the question of independence may be reopened by Congress at the present session. That would doubtless mean another drive by various interests in this country to hasten severance of our tie with the Philippines to eliminate their competition with American farmers. It will not be an easy task to amend the Hawes-Cutting act in accordance with negotiations between the White House and the Filipino leaders.

Judgment upon the White House agreement must be reserved until its full text has been announced and analyzed. It does not appear, however, that all the complicated issues in the Philippine situation have been eliminated. For example, it is reported that the controversy over maintenance of American naval bases in the Islands would not be settled now, but would become the subject of negotiations after independence had been achieved. How can any one suppose that an issue on which no agreement can be reached while the Philippines are under the American flag would become more soluble after a separation had been effected? Grave danger lurks in any policy of leaping toward independence first and looking for settlement of these momentous issues afterward.

A more favorable sugar import quota is also reported to be a part of the White House agreement. Economic adjustments are unquestionably one of the most important aspects of the entire independence question. It can not be assured that there will be permanence in any measure calculated to maintain abnormal economic ties with the Philippines if political ties are simultaneously abrogated.

Politics In Radio.

President Roosevelt plans to concentrate regulatory powers over telegraph, telephone and radio facilities in a Federal Communications Commission. The plan can not be intelligently appraised without considering the status of the so-called independent regulatory agencies under the present Administration. Since the President initiated the practice of dismissing members of these bi-partisan bodies because their views may be at variance with his own, there has developed an obvious tendency for regulatory commissions to become mere tools of the party in power. In view of this situation any move to extend their authority ought to be scrutinized with the utmost care.

The shadow of politics has been cast over most of the regulatory commissions, but the Radio Commission appears to be the most vulnerable. Under the law it is a bi-partisan, independent body to which has been assigned the task of regulating wireless communication activities. It is supposed to issue or revoke licenses in accord with the public interest as determined by scientific facts and engineering data. But it appears that in recent months politics has become the dominating influence in the commission. Members realize that if they ignore the wishes of powerful politicians they may be asked to resign. Consequently, radio broadcasting is being regulated, in many cases, in the interest of politics rather than in the public interests.

The commission recently decided to eliminate a station in Louisiana that was considered obnoxious, and to assign its time on the air to another broadcasting concern in the same State. Politicians interested in the station marked for limbo appealed to the White House, and the commission—in theory bi-partisan and independent—reversed its former decision.

Eminent politicians frequently bring pressure upon the commission. In return for their aid in securing privileges for favored stations they expect liberal opportunities to broadcast their views. Private operators are alarmed at this intrusion of politics into radio broadcasting, but if they protest they may jeopardize their own position, for talk of Government control of the air is growing. And if members of the commission object to taking orders from politicians they are reminded of the President's intolerance for a commissioner who disagrees with him.

It is reported that some members of the present commission are not easily controlled. Hence, Congress is asked to set up a new regulatory body—the proposed Communications Commission—in spite of the fact that no agreement can be reached as to what its ultimate functions should be. Representative Rayburn's bill for this purpose would not substantially change or add to existing law. It would merely centralize administration of existing measures for control of communications and give the President authority to oust members of the Radio Commission who do not see eye to eye with him. In short, its chief effect would be to strengthen the influence of politics in radio.

When the whole picture is spread out, Senator Schall's statement that the communications bill would lead to censorship of the press is seen to be neither extreme nor premature.

"The Evil That Men Do."

No abatement is yet observable in the vitality of the Rasputin legend. That dramatic story has recently been revived in an English law court. A princess, Romanoff by birth, by marriage Youssoupoff, is suing the producers of an all-Barrymore motion-picture on the charge that it falsely represents her as Rasputin's mistress. The defendants reply that the objectionable character is obviously imaginary.

Whatever may ensue, this episode is already serious enough to make Hollywood think twice before another leap into the dark of modern chronicles. Screen-adaptation of classic fiction is a relatively secure practice: Hugo's heirs did not sue the producers of "Notre Dame," although Julien Champenois, in the name of French culture, protested. Remote history is also quite safe. It looks as if no relative of Gustavus Adolphus' long-dead daughter will issue summonses against Greta Garbo's employers for depicting the love of a Scandinavian Cleopatra who never had an Antony.

But to be innocent of legal dynamite, productions of this type must have retired far within the valleys of the past and rest invisible from the frontier-peaks of news. If the only good Indian is a dead Indian, the only quite safe historical drama is one involving personages deceased a long, long time.

A Substitute For CWA.

In place of the CWA, President Roosevelt has devised a relief program based on diversified farming, subsistence homesteads and temporary jobs for unemployed industrial workers. The decision to liquidate the CWA is, of course, commendable. As a means of relief it proved to be extravagant—and as a means of restoring normal conditions it has been ineffective. Further developments must be awaited, however, to determine whether the new program is an actual improvement over the CWA.

Efforts to put rural families on a self-supporting basis are commendable in theory. But what practical policy can the Government adopt to bring about this desired result? The experiment of transplanting a large number of families from regions supposed to be economically defunct carries many grave implications. Will the Government attempt to build factories to support all of the families transplanted to subsistence homesteads, as it is planning to do at Reedsville, W. Va.?

For idle urban workmen the President expects to continue "work programs which would not normally be undertaken by public bodies, but which are at the same time outside of the field of private industry." Details as to the exact nature of these projects, the wages to be paid and the source of funds have not yet been revealed.

The taxpaying public can only hope that these undertakings will be more carefully planned and executed than the CWA has been.

The Emperor Kang Teh.

A note of real pathos underlies the elaborate ceremonial with which young Henry Pu Yi, 28 years old this week, is today being crowned Emperor of Manchukuo.

In the inclosure around the coronation altar, sand has been sprinkled to keep the imperial feet from being soiled. A white bullock is to be sacrificed as Pu Yi becomes Kang Teh, meaning Tranquillity and Virtue. But as this ritual proceeds Japan is sharply protesting to Moscow because Soviet planes are said to have flown over Manchurian territory. There is the stark reality behind the tinsel show at Hsinking.

It is not merely the buffer position of Manchukuo between Russia and Japan which raises doubts as to the tranquillity of the new regime, regardless of its claims to virtue. Over the ceremonies today will float the five-barred banner of the new empire. It is a replica of the former national flag of China, in which each stripe stood for one of that country's constituent races: Manchu, Chinese, Mongol, Mohammedan and Tartar. Choice of this emblem is a deliberate affront to the Chinese, for it seems to bear out reports that the scheduled destiny of Manchukuo is to absorb the country from which the Japanese bayonets tore it loose two years ago. Under the circumstances none can blame Nanking for the statement that "whether Pu Yi is emperor or chief executive, he remains a Japanese puppet."

Nor is it merely the absence of Chinese recognition with which this government of "tranquillity and virtue" must contend. On the eve of the ceremonies at Hsinking our Department of State has taken occasion to reaffirm the doctrine of nonrecognition laid down by Secretary Stimson two years ago. On March 11, 1932, that doctrine was adopted by a resolution of the League of Nations Assembly in which the representatives of 44 nations declared that:

> It is incumbent upon the members of the League of Nations not to recognize any situation, treaty or agreement which may be brought about by means contrary to the Covenant of the League of Nations or to the Pact of Paris.

Such a situation underlies the coronation of the new Emperor Kang Teh at Hsinking today. Except for Japan's too ardent support, he starts his reign as the unrecognized ruler of an unrecognized nation. In all the wide and troubled realm of Manchukuo there can be few individuals who of their own free will would change places with youthful and likable Henry Pu Yi, as he was known in the days before Japan raised him to dizzy and unstable eminence.

To The Provinces.

Just as the Administration prepares to put into effect its program for withdrawal of submarginal lands from cultivation, Prof. Rexford G. Tugwell, one of the chief authors of the new deal for agriculture, is assigned to a mission in Puerto Rico. Secretary of War Dern has "borrowed" the dynamic Assistant Secretary of Agriculture to investigate the feasibility of more intensive farming in the island.

Puerto Rico's agronomic problem no doubt demands the attention of high-caliber experts. That densely-populated island is devoted almost exclusively to agriculture, yet imports a large portion of its food supply. The problem is to make two cabbages flourish where one grows at present. But this task would seem to call for an agriculturist of the old school. Prof. Tugwell has won his spurs as an advocate of curtailment, destruction of surplus crops and the conversion of unfertile lands into Government forests.

It may seem strange that an official matured in the great experiment of crop reduction should be chosen to study a very different situation in a remote insular possession. But President Roosevelt is remarkably adept at finding new provinces for members of the brains trust on whom the limelight has focused with perhaps undue refulgence. There are those still living in Washington who can recall the sudden exit of Prof. Moley from the local stage. And, the monetary sphere aside, there are other instances in which Administration policy has been sharply deflationary.

Prof. Tugwell is a skillful and competent economist. He doubtless will perform a useful service in Puerto Rico. But the sudden shifting of the scene of his activity inevitably raises the question of whether, in the opinion of the President, Prof. Tugwell needs Puerto Rico more than Puerto Rico needs him.

War and Disarmament.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On every hand one reads and hears hard things about war. The air is filled with calls and projects for its abolition. Men of note and the man on the street have their say. Congresses and conferences meet and argue and adjourn, and yet there is no general agreement on the subject. The project now receiving most attention, and apparently, the most banked on, is that of disarmament. There is no such thing as total disarmament. There may be partial disarmament, but no matter how far this may be carried, it will not prevent war unless it leaves all states or—in a balance of power—both sides, equally strong or equally weak. The offensive can not succeed without a considerable preponderance. This failing, there will be no offensive, and, consequently, no war.

The premise of this plausible reasoning, the equality contemplated, is chimerical. The means by which one people may surpass another in war power can not be enumerated and equalized. Whatever states may do they will, in general, remain materially unequal. The weaker will abstain from attacking the stronger. That is as far as so-called equality will work for peace. It will not prevent aggression by a strong state or coalition against a weak one. The idea that turning the clock back for the soldier turns it forward for the statesman, that so-called disarmament prevents war, is a singular illusion. War never has been and never will be prevented by disarmament.

In all parts of the world are communities, countries and empires within each of which war is all but impossible, and between or among which it is probable or imminent. Where war is prevented there is government, where it is tolerated there is no government. Where there is government there is a people; there is statehood. The only preventative of war that thousands of years of civilization have brought forth is that of statehood. How many people in the world are in favor of world statehood or an attempt at preparing the world for it? Where are the statesmen who would dare put the question to their constituents, say nothing of answering it for them in the affirmative? How long must the world wait for a population that will give it such statesmen? Until it grows to the vision of one people, one flag, one country, the world around.

JOHN BIGELOW.
Washington, Feb. 9.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As long as the minds of men are filled with warlike tendencies, war in some form or other will last. War can not be legislated away, any more than the desire to drink can be abolished through legal means.

That war is "mass-murder in the first degree" is a fact, but murders—single or mass—will continue until men emerge from the jungle. Mentally, we are still very primitive and thoroughly uncivilized. Aeons will pass before peace and love are established in our hearts.

There are multitudes that relish a good "scrap." The average individual would infinitely prefer witnessing a bloody prize fight than reading Emerson or attending a symphony concert. "The only argument that appeals to certain minds is the clenched fist."

Capitalism breeds war; as long as the majority are governed by greed and "grab" conflict is inevitable. As it is, life itself is a battle. We war on one another in a multiplicity of ways and are guilty of social cruelties that are shocking to one possessing a shred of justice or humanity.

But even in our present semi-jungle state, it is conceivable that if the English-speaking races would take a firm stand for peace and discontinue the mad rush for increased armaments that universal conflict might be checked. The World War, far from making this land safe for democracy, made it unsafe for everything and everybody.

Seeking Enlightenment.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: As a reader of your paper, the writer would like to be enlightened upon several points, not clear to those of us so far removed from the "fountain head" of all knowledge.

Just what is the difference between Hoover's "around the corner" prosperity and Roosevelt's "expected" new deal prosperity, both based upon hope only?

If the people are unemployed and hungry now with what we call a surplus, which means more than people need to eat and wear at a time when people are hungry and half clad, then will not curtailment of wheat and cotton and hogs and other things cause more unemployment (among those who produce these things) and add to existing distress? Do we actually live upon high prices or upon agricultural products? If the latter, will curtailing them fill empty stomachs? How can there be a surplus as long as people are hungry and need clothes? Is not our trouble faulty distribution, and not a surplus?

If the Government knows that withdrawal of the bank credit which accommodates 90 per cent of all business is holding back recovery, why does the Government waste months in lecturing bankers instead of directly hurrying recovery by furnishing industry with credit? And why does the Government bid against industry for whatever money there is, to spend and not to lend for recovery, if it realizes that recovery can only come through credit to industry and the latter's employment of labor, as it seems to realize, judging by its many appeals to bankers to aid recovery? If the Government uses up all its own credit, in borrowing money to spend, not lend, and if industry as the main employer of labor becomes a worse risk from lack of credit and losses, will this induce banks, who refuse to lend now, to change their policy and lend as Government spending and debts hasten a crisis?

Some of us, without the advantages of the Washington "intellectuals," are just a little disturbed over the Government policies. Therefore, we appeal to The Post, doubtless in touch with the "wise men of the East," to enlighten our confused minds about things perhaps simple enough to the "intellectuals."

Edgar Guest's Poems.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read the columns of your paper for years, and have always enjoyed it, most especially your editorials and Edgar Guest's poems. Very recently, I have missed seeing his poems and consider it a great loss to your paper. To finish my reading for the day with a poem from Edgar Guest fits me for a peaceful night's rest, and surely we need something like that, rather than some foreigner's lengthy palaver over how to cook or dress at this age when so many people are starving for real food of the soul.

Historic Cold Winters.

A Lexicographer Scientist's List of Ancient Low Temperatures.

Noah Webster in American Journal of Science, 1835.

"To the Editors of the Connecticut Journal:

"Gentlemen—If you think the following relation of facts selected from my History of Diseases, or supplied by my own knowledge, to be of any value, it is at your service.

"N. WEBSTER."

The first winter of uncommon severity in New England, after the Pilgrims arrived, was in 1642, when the harbor of Boston was covered with ice, so that teams passed from one isle to another. Indeed the ice extended so far at sea that at Boston no water was to be seen.—Winthrop, 240, 243.

A. D. 1683, the winter in Europe and America was very severe. It is related that in England trees burst open, or were split by the intense cold.

A. D. 1708-9, in New England, the winter was nearly of the same severity. So intense was the cold on the 14th of December that the day was not forgotten during the generation then living. Trees, grain and vines were killed.

In February, 1717, fell the greatest quantity of snow ever known to fall in one storm. The depth can not be ascertained with exactness; but it was several feet. In Boston people went out of their chamber windows, in the morning; upon rackets, snow-shoes. Farmers had no way to get wood but by walking upon rackets. John Winthrop of New London lost 1,100 sheep on Fisher's Island, where they were buried in snow 16 feet deep. Two of the sheep, however, survived, being taken out alive after being covered for 28 days. They lived by chewing the wool of the others; but after being relieved their own wool came off. See Winthrop's letter, historical collection, volume 2, page 12. I do not find it mentioned that the cold of that winter was of unusual severity.

The winter of 1741 was of great severity. My father, who was a witness of the winters of 1741 and 1780, considered the cold of the former quite equal to that of the latter. But I have seen no thermometrical observations made in New England in the year 1741.

By Mr. Jefferson's observations in his notes it appears that the winter of 1780 was the most severe, as in 1740-41 York River was not frozen over, whereas in 1780 the Chesapeake was covered with solid ice from its head to the mouth of the Potomac. At Annapolis, where the bay is more than five miles wide, the ice was five inches thick.

In the winter of 1779-80 the first snowstorm occurred about the 25th of November and subsequent falls of snow raised it to the height of three or four feet upon a level. The wind for several weeks from the northwest was cold, the snow was so dry and continually driven by the wind that no good path could be made, and traveling was almost impeded. I passed often half a mile or mile on drifts as high as the fences.

Farmers could do little else abroad than feed their cattle and provide them with water. For about six weeks the cold was so intense that no snow melted on the south side of buildings. The Sound between Long Island and the main was nearly all covered with ice and troops of horse and heavy cannon passed on the ice between New York and Staten Island. Since that, as in 1788, the ice in the East River has been passable for a footman for a few hours only at a time.

It was remarked that in the severe winter of 1780 almost all the birds of the forest perished. Here and there only a solitary warbler was heard the next summer.

Winters of the utmost severity occur but three or four times in a century. Very mild winters are equally rare.

BARGERON.

IT may be nothing more than a coincidence, but it is also a fact that Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell's banishment to Puerto Rico follows closely upon what, to my mind, is the first major breakdown of the planned state which he was so assiduously setting up. Say what you want to, the argument for the planned state is taking an awful wallop in the failure to rid our streets of the recent heavy snowfall.

According to telegraphic reports, the entire East is still engaged in digging out with traffic still handicapped three days after the storm. We know what the situation has been right here in the Nation's Capital. Shovelers and scrapers finally got into action but there is still much to be done before we have returned to normal traffic conditions.

Now if the planned state can't get the snow off of its streets just what can it do?

* * * *

We would have expected delay and confusion back under the old Democratic order when the matter of snow removal would have had to be debated in Congress, with the representatives of snowless communities decrying the waste of money and those representing snow-bound constituents pressing the case. We were told that was the price of a Democracy.

But I can recall that even with the slow-moving machinery under which we operated in those days that in one instance at least we cleared the streets here much quicker than we are doing this time.

One would think that immediately the recent storm ceased all our Governmental heads, our planned staters, would have to do was to rush to their charts and see how much of a fall we had had, then to other charts to ascertain the number of men and shovels available and then press a button which would promptly get the snow removal underway.

Surely if there is any advantage in organization and regimentation, in having the Nation's industry and resources and its manpower at a central finger tip, that should be one. Yet our planned machinery failed us in its first great test.

Of course, we worked with amazing efficiency in establishing the Civilian Conservation Corps and the CWA. Indeed, we were no slouches in killing the little pigs and canceling the air-mail contracts. The planned staters on those endeavors seemed to be at their best.

When something of such major import as getting the snow off our streets developed, however, they were obviously not equal to the task. They were caught with leaden feet. Our old-fashioned Democratic processes could have done just as well.

It is all the more regrettable that this situation should have come about because it is so noticeable to the people, to the man in the street. By and large, they have not had the time nor the desire to follow the finer points of the controversy between the proponents of democracy and those of the planned State. They wanted, after what they have been through the past four years, action and results.

These they seemed to be getting from the planned staters. They were in no mood to be argued with on the ways in which we seemed to be getting places. Suffice for them that we seemed to be getting there.

Now what are they to think as they bump slowly along in their cars in the narrow path that has been cleared, as they try to lift their machines over high snowbanks to get to the curb, indeed, as they slip and turn somersaults on the sidewalks? What are they to think, I ask you?

Why, they will think just as any other people would think. Why, they will ask, can't a great unified Nation, its whole strength now moulded into one planned whole of effort, why can't it get the snow off its streets?

If Prof. Tugwell had really been as smart as he is reputed to be he would have foreseen this state of mind, and rather than permit the embarrassment to his ideas, he would have grabbed a shovel and cleared the streets himself. As things are, he is leaving for an island where there is no snow.

Love-Letters of a Worldly Woman.

When I was an undergraduate I was one of the editors of the college Literary Magazine, and had charge of the book-reviewing. I reviewed a learned philosophical volume, called "Lectures and Essays." The author was a famous English mathematician, Prof. W. K. Clifford, who had died tragically young, and left these papers.

Four years later I read with intense interest a work of fiction called "Love-Letters of a Worldly Woman," by Mrs. W. K. Clifford. I recommend it now to those who read this article.

Twenty years later I produced a book of my own, called "Essays on Modern Novelists," and in a few months I received a letter from London, written by Mrs. Clifford, in which she modestly asked if I had ever heard her name. I immediately informed her that I had reviewed her husband's book in my boyhood.

On my next journey to England I found that her home was the meeting place of many of the most interesting people in London.

I have known many courageous women; Mrs. Clifford was one of the bravest individuals I have ever met.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall.

Facts, Just Facts.

You remember (or rather, let's hope you don't) the tale of the two gray-bearded savants at a learned convention in a Manhattan hotel. Arguing over some point more knotty than not, they came to a deadlock beyond which lay only appeal to an encyclopedia. So they marched out into the lobby and advanced upon the desk clerk.

"Have you got the Encyclopedia Britannica?" asked one of the savants.

"We haven't; I'm sorry," said the young clerk very politely. "But what is it you gentlemen wanted to know?"

* * * *

I am feeling today quite as unabashed as the young man behind the desk. What is it you'd like to know?—ask me anything. When did Paul Robeson make his stage debut? Who owns the manuscript of "Alice in Wonderland?" What is nystagmus? How old is Adolph Ochs? Where is Banjermasin? What are Louis Gruenberg's chief compositions? I'm ready for these and 29,994 others.

Much as I would like to preserve your mounting and respectful wonder, I must puncture it at once. For there lies on my desk, published today, the neatest and freshest summary of present-day knowledge—"Facts: the New Concise Pictorial Encyclopedia" (Doubleday-Doran, four volumes, $19.50 by subscription).

The title implies almost everything you should know about this work. It is brand-new and amazingly up-to-date. Douglas, Lewis W., is side by side with Douglas, Stephen A. Darrow, Clarence S., includes mention of the Massie trial. Gen. Johnson's portrait appears with those of Amy, Andrew and Samuel. Every item and topic is brought down to 1933.

"Facts" is impressively concise. It holds more muscle to the pound of body than any other encyclopedia I know of. This has been done by an intelligent compression of items and by a system of obvious abbreviations.

The volumes are profusely illustrated with diagrams, photographs, colored maps and hundreds of portraits. The item Hokusai has a reproduction of his famous print, "The Wave." True, it is no larger than a postage stamp, but it gives the distinctive impression. Motion pictures is accompanied by a scene from "Cavalcade." Lawrence Tibbett appears on the stage in "The Emperor Jones." The workings of a Diesel engine, slide rule and the planetary universe are all illustrated. There is even the label of a Stradivarius violin.

Finally, it is a true encyclopedia—a "footing it all around." Its 1271 pages touch every imaginable topic except Mae West.

* * * *

As John Erskine remarks in a foreward, this work "is a kind of explanatory introduction to our intellectual life with full emphasis upon our own country at our own moment." It does not pretend to take the place of the large, standard encyclopedias. If you wish to go deeply into a topic, "Facts" will serve you only as a starting hand. But for the thousand and one kernels of knowledge you may be seeking at any time, for all the names, dates, definitions and generalities of the modern world, "Facts" will stand on your desk in instant readiness.

A staff of experts, headed by Nella Braddy (editor of "The University Library," and "The Standard Book of British and American Verse," and recently the author of "Anne Sullivan Macy: the Story Behind Helen Keller") has done an immense amount of authoritative research and diligent boiling-down. "Facts" now awaits your use—the one encyclopedia every inquiring American needs.

Words, But No Music.

Although several valued correspondents have told me in more or less kindly fashion that I have paid quite enough attention to Miss Gertrude Stein, let us look at her once again. For she is fast becoming not only a cult but a popular one. Now "The Autobiography of Alice B. Toklas," I shall maintain with my last breath, was full of sheer delight. But I lie awake nights trying not to think of the chagrin of readers who expect to find any trace of that quality in "The Making of Americans." And as for the book in hand, the libretto of her opera, written in 1927, "Four Saints in Three Acts," my feelings toward it verge on downright incivility.

* * * *

No doubt you read in the press that this brief opera was first presented in Hartford on February 7 and in New York not long after, that the critics and audiences found it highly pleasant and praised the music of Virgil Thompson, the settings and costumes of Florine Stettheimer, the singing of the Negro cast, and the suitability of Miss Stein's words to vocal rendition. To that I have nothing to say; I am concerned with a book.

And Random House, for the price of $1, has made of the libretto a distinguished piece of printing. Mr. Robert Josephy's typography is unimpeachably good. Mr. Carl Van Vechten contributes a preface written on February 8, in which he disproves very neatly from the example of "La Gioconda," the dictum that words and plot matter at all to an opera—a dictum, I believe, no one had ever begun to maintain. Lastly, the cast, direction and circumstances of the first performance possess a certain professional interest.

There follow 43 pages of text, in, apparently, the English language. To express the range of my enjoyment thereof, I can only echo the remark which Dorothy Parker made of Katherine Hepburn's acting in "The Lake"—it runs the gamut from A to B.

Love Doesn't Give Baby Poison It Cries For

By Robert Quillen

The typical American of the class called "gentle" astonishes the world by his indulgent kindness to his family.

Yet in this, as in all other matters, he is a natural extremist, and often his good intentions end in weakness that does more harm than good. To gratify his family's present desires he will violate his better judgment and give them temporary pleasure at the price of ultimate disaster.

Even my limited acquaintanceship includes four men who sacrificed or now are sacrificing themselves to avoid displeasing their families.

Each of them, having lost his health, was told by competent physicians that his only hope of regaining it was to quit work for a time and move to another climate.

But each one knew that his family would suffer some inconvenience if he elected to be "selfish." If they migrated with him they would miss their friends and customary social pleasures; whether they migrated or remained at home, they would be forced to pinch pennies and deny themselves luxuries until he began to work again.

So each man chose to do the thing that seemed generous and doomed himself to an early death rather than inconvenience his family.

How cruel good intentions can be!

If a man is needed by his family, his first duty is to save himself. If he realizes that he is shortening his life, and his family does not, his clear duty is to do the thing prompted by his own superior judgment and disregard the scoffings, pleadings or pouting of those who depend on him.

Would he knowingly drive the family car into a bed of quicksand if his loved ones, being ignorant of the danger, urged him to do it?

To sacrifice himself and leave them without a provider is a greater wrong. For he not only shortens his life without justification, but in doing it to please his family he makes them responsible for his death.

It is a manly thing to be a martyr when the cause is worthy and the need great, but it isn't manly to destroy the living of your wife and children because you are afraid to displease them.

A book containing twenty-six "Letters From a Bald-Headed Dad to his Red-Headed Daughter," by Robert Quillen is now available.

The price is fifty cents. Address Publishers Syndicate, 30 North La Salle, Chicago, Ill.

Smoot Denies Influencing Air Mail Awards

Former Utah Senator Says "No Attack" Statement Is "Falsehood."

Salt Lake City, Feb. 28 (AP).—Reed Smoot, former Utah Senator, said today he had no connection with air-mail contracts while he was chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

Ernest W. Smoot, his son, told the Senate Air-Mail Investigating Committee that the former Senator had taken up with former Postmaster General Brown a contract for carrying the mail by the Western Air Express. The elder moot declared he had no recollection of ever discussing the matter with the Postmaster General.

Smoot also denied he had lent his influence to hte granting of an air-mail contract to Western Air Express in 1930 on a high bid, as testified before the committee by James G. Woolley, former vice president of Western Air.

"I don't know Mr. Woolley and I don't remember that I ever met him," the former Senator said. "I never knew such a question was ever raised."

He ridiculed the idea that he could join with Representative John Q. Tilson, former Republican floor leader of the House, in promising there would be no attack in Congress on awarding the contract to the high bidder, adding "it's an absolute falsehood."

Smoot's statement was made in the headquarters of the Latter Day Saints Church.

He said he did not know what compensation his son received for representing business firms in Washington and said he was not aware what firms he had represented.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

NORTHERN REACTION TO LOWELL'S SNOW POEM.

The snow had begun in the gloaming
And busily all the night
Had been heaping field and highway
With a silence deep and white.
(That's a cute little way to describe it,
But it isn't so good, I say,
When you have to go out in the silence
And shovel the quiet away.)

Every pine and fir and hemlock
Wore ermine too dear for an earl,
And the poorest twig on the elm tree
Was ridged inch deep with pearl.
(It may have been ermine to you, James,
An excellent poet, I know,
But to me it was no fur garment—
It was simply some more darned snow!)

From shed new-roofed with Carrara
Came Chanticleer's muffled crow,
The stiff rails softened to swan's-down
And still fluttered down the snow.
(So that's what it was! Carrara!
Well, somehow it doesn't sound
Quite right to say all the autos
And trains were Carrara-bound.)

I stood and watched by the window
The noiseless work of the sky,
And the sudden flurries of snowbirds
Like brown leaves whirling by.
(I stood and watched by a snowdrift
The work of the freezing sky
But somehow the raging Storm King
Struck me as a noisy guy.)

Bill Proposes Archives Body

Bloom Offers Measure to Set Up Commission; One Job Pays $10,000.

Creation of a United States Archives Commission and a Bureau of National Archives would be authotrized by a bill introduced by Representative Sol Bloom (Democrat), of New York, yesterday.

The Archives Building is now nearing completion on Pennsylvania avenue as part of the Federal triangle group of buildings.

The commission would be composed of secretaries of each of the governmental departments, or someone designated by them, and its members would serve withouts salary. Also on the commission would be the Librarian of Congress, the chairmen of the Senate and House Library Committees, the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, and an Archivist, to be named by the President. The office would pay $10,000 a year.

The Bureau of National Archives would be formed to receive and preserve Government documents. A committee on national historical publications also would be set up.

the "moral force of the vote should be sufficient."

Rallying to the defense of the subsistence plan, Mrs. Isabella Greenway, Arizona Congresswoman and close friend of Mrs. Roosevelt, vainly exhorted the House to indorse the West Virginia movement.

"This is a far broader issue than a furniture factory, the leading lady of the land, or the purchase of a particular commodity," she said. "We are well into an experiment in the decentralization of wealth, which must be accomplished in the long run by a decentralization of industry."

She said "private industry to my absolute knowledge was begged to go down to Reedsville and make the experiment."

Mrs. Roosevelt's Idea.

Referring to Mrs. Roosevelt as "our charming first lady," Representative Andrew Edmiston, West Virginia Democrat, told members "it was her idea that this factory be built."

"If for no other reason than to extend courtesy to the First Lady, even if it is just a whim, we ought to approve this project," he said.

But Representatives Ludlow and John J. Cochran, of Missouri (Democrats), and Carl E. Mapes, Michigan, and John Taber, New York (Republicans), led a bitter bipartisan assault on the plan.

Representative Ludlow charged it would force the Keyless Lock Co., of Indianapolis, now making post-office equipment, to close its doors, while Cochran declared it simply "means you are going to put the Government further in business."

Termed Socialism.

"This is socialism, going right down the line," charged Tabor. "It isn't distribution of wealth, but destruction of wealth. Let us stop it now."

Representative Mapes declared furniture plants in his district have been doing business at a loss for years, and the Administration proposal "will put them further in the red."

Denying the Reedsville project "is competitive in any sense of the word," Representative Jennings Randolph, West Virginia Democrat, who represents the Reedsville district, answered Ludlow with the charge that the Keyless Lock Co. "is one of the worst nonunion shops in the country."

Competition Denied.

He was interrupted by Representative William P. Connery, jr. (Democrat), Massachusetts, who declared the labor record of this president "is not so hot."

"This project would not compete with any business on a destructive scale," insisted Randolph. "It would simply serve as a yardstick to determine whether the Postoffice Department has been paying too much for its equipment."

Under the bill as it originally passed the House, expenditure of $800,000 allotted for postoffice equipment, would be confined to this city. The Senate removed the restriction, so that the funds, if needed, could be used on the West Virginia plant.

The young emperor, who in daily life dresses like the average Englishman, agreed to pomp and dignity, but he banned such old customs as the "kowow," in which his subordinates would have touched their foreheads to the floor in submission.

Two main ceremonies marked the advent of Pu-Yi to the realm of world rulers.

The first was in Shuntien square, and was attended by only the select of officialdom, who were personally invited or approved by Pu-Yi. The second was a broader function in the royal palace, at which the beautiful new empress occupied a place of dignity. Foreign diplomats were welcomed here.

Issues Two Royal Edicts.

Two royal edicts were released to the press after the ceremonies.

The first said "through heaven's grace we were commanded to ascend the imperial throne of the state and we have obeyed this command, as all the officials and people petitioned us to do so."

It contained direct reference to Japan, saying, "our friend the Japanese Empire, in compliance with the will of heaven, has rendered assistance to our Nation and brought about a close and friendly cooperation. The Japanese Empire took the initiative in extending recognition and concluded a friendly pact with us. This pact must last through all the ages.

Promises "Kindly Way."

"We shall not change the general principles of the administration," the edict read. "We recognize the validity of all existing treaties with foreign countries. We desire to win their confidence, advance the cause of common justice and promote the 'wnag tao'" (kindly way).

The second edict was in the same solemn Manchu style. Frequently referring to the "will of heaven," it pointed out that two years had elapsed "since our new state was founded and the bandits and other threatening elements were suppressed."

"Our Eastern neighbor, the Japanese Empire, assisted us for the purpose of promoting the happiness of our 30,000,000 people according to the will of heaven," the second edict read. "Now in complance with the heavenly command we have ascended the imperial throne."

Uses American Automobile.

The Emperor emphasized a trend toward modern methods, cautioning his officers "they should abolish old customs that sometimes lead to evils, and study modern methods."

Pu Yi and his entourage traveled about a mile down a street heavily packed by humanity as he proceeded from the palace to the square for the semi-secret coronation. He used a modern American automobile.

Twenty-five years ago he was crowned Emperor of all China in reign lasted four years, when a the Forbidden City of Peking. His revolution overturned the monarchy and established a republic. The boy Emperor was shorn of title but allowed to remain in the Forbidden City. In 1917, Monarchists plotted a return to power and their attack on Republicans set Pu Yi upon his throne for a second time. This reign lasted four days. Angered leaders of the opposition decreed Pu Yi's life forfeit for the attempted Royalist coup, but he was smuggled from the Forbidden City and given refuge in the Japanese Embassy.

Fled Disguised as a Coolie.

Another plot against his life brought a decision to send him to neutral Tientsin. Disguised as a dirty coolie, he escaped soldiers of the "Christian General," Marshall Feng Yu-Hsiang, who stopped all trains to search for him. He reached the Japanese Embassy in Tientsin.

Pu Yi and his wife, whom he married in 1922, remained under Japanese protection for several years—until Manchukuo proclaimed itself a nation. Then he was moved in on a Japanese cruiser and set up as regent.

He is the son of Prince Chun, of a long Manchu line. His mother was the daughter of Gen. Jung Lu, whose military skill once benefited Dowager Empress Tzu Hsi. When her line died without issue Pu Yi's mother persuaded her to have the grand council appoint her son to the throne.

Milkman Saves Woman And Son From Flames

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Mrs. Nancy Sherritt and her son, Stanley, 25, were rescued from their burning home this morning by Henry C. Peterson, a milkman.

Peterson placed a ladder under a window on the second floor and climbed up to wake up the occupants and brought Mrs. Sherritt and her son down the ladder. Firemen arrived in time to save the house from total destruction.

U. S. Hires "Army" To Sign Checks

Even With a Machine It's a Mighty Task.

A flock of Uncle Sam's fastest check signers yesterday moved into the Treasury, the Associated Press reports.

The actual transfer involved the 250-man personnel of the Veterans' Administration, but with them went Arthur E. Mills, inventor of a signograph that turns out from 200 to 250 signed checks every minute.

The Veterans' Administration disbursing personnel has been plenty busy with the machine. Normally they "loafed" along on 892,000 checks a month for pensions and adjusted service certificates.

But then came the Civil Works Administration. Result: More than 16,000,000 checks to date for CWA workers.

Bright Spots Go Gay With Legal Liquor

Police Deliver Licenses, Starting Revelry at Midnight.

Washington's gay welcome to the return of spirits was under way at many of the leading hotels and restaurants and all of the night clubs, the latter packed with patrons who did their best to behave as though this drinking business was something quite new.

Nearly three months after most of the rest of the Nation had hoisted one to the demise of Old Man Prohibition, Washington revelers raised their glasses in a hearty "Here's how!"

Some Hotels Wait.

Some of the larger hotels, in more dignified fashion, remained aloof from the early morning rejoicing. The Shoreham, the Mayflower and the Washington postponed selling legal liquor until later today. The Willard will serve its first drinks at a Junior League fashion show at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

But at most hotels and restaurants to which the police cars sped with licenses at midnight, the big moment could not be postponed.

The District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, laboring mightily far into the night, had effected a system whereby no red tape should overlap to keep anyone who wanted a drink this First of March from obtaining it legally.

Wholesale licenses had been given out late yesterday. The wholesalers retired to their establishments and made ready their cases and barrels. They were not allowed to open for business last night, but at the stroke of midnight they could fill orders by making deliveries, and this they were doing, even after the stroke of 2 a. m. put an end to the first brief revelry.

200 Licensed.

More than 200 hotels, clubs, restaurants and night clubs received their licenses to sell to patrons as fast as the police squad cars could circulate, and sold away until closing time came at 2 o'clock.

This morning, throughout the city, retail stores (for off-premise sales) will open at 8 o'clock, while an hour later sale by the drink will start in more than 1,000 licensed establishments.

First to drink legally this morning was the crowd at the National Press Club, which received License No. 1, at midnight. Members of the District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, George W. Offutt, Mrs. W. Beverly Mason and Isaac Gans, had gathered there to present the first license to William C. Murphy, president of the club.

The pop of the first cork atop the National Press Building had many an echo throughout the city within a few minutes.

The Nation's Capital, infested with 2,500 speakeasies under the Shepherd law, reverted to the ranks of the Nation's "wide open" cities with a will.

Bright Spots Brighter.

There was merrymaking in the new silver and blue Hi-Hat cocktail room at the Ambassador Hotel; at the Club Michel, where a special "Repeal Show" entertained; in the Heigh Ho Club's old-fashioned tap room, at the Madrillon restaurant, in the Washington Building; at the Russian Troika; in all those places, in fact, where the patrons and the management refused to let the opportunity of those two gay hours pass.

Today even Child's, on New York avenue, will be selling old-fashioned cocktails and "pink ladies" along with the "popular-priced" luncheon.

In those first two brief hours, where the supplies slipped down almost as rapidly as they were delivered, it was impossible to get a line on what Washington drinking is really to be like. After 17 years, without the benefit of the more luxurious speakeasies known to other large cities, the city has lost acquaintance with the more artfully enticing mixed drinks.

Ryes, Bourbons Still Favorites.

Wholesalers, forarmed with orders for midnight delivery, had a plentiful supply of domestic and imported liquors in their trucks. The ryes and Bourbons of the Volstead era still proved the most popular, despite the eagerness of the night's busy bartenders to display their talents at something fancier.

Prices differed with the elaborateness of the surroundings. Form 25 to 50 cents a drink seemed the order of the night, with wines and champagnes not greatly in demand and sufficiently expensive to deter all but the most determined—and prosperous—revelers.

And, for the most part, the celebrating was orderly—restrained rather than riotous. Somehow or another, despite 17 years without it, Washingtonians seemed to hold their liquor quite well.

Woman Gets $461,258 In Flood Will Case

Redwood City, Calif., Feb. 28 (AP).—The seven-year court battle of Mrs. Constance May Gavin for a "daughter's share" in the estate of James L. Flood, pioneer mining man, ended with the signing of final settlement papers today.

Mrs. Gavin, wife of a Los Angeles bank clerk, received cash and property totaling $461,258, while her attorneys received cash and stocks valued at $251,176.

6 Burned in Mine By "Flash" Explosion

Cambria, Okla., Feb. 28 (AP).—Six men were burned, none dangerously, in a "flash" explosion today 3,000 feet down in the Kali-Inla coal mine here.

The cause of the explosion was a mystery, mine officials said, since the workings had been inspected for gas an hour before 17 workers went into the mine.

Ship Averaged 2,900 Miles.

First to Sell Legal Liquor

200 Dealers in District Receive Licenses at Midnight, Delivered by Police to Permit Sale to 2 A. M.; Dispensing Under Full Steam Today.

The first liquor licenses for retail establishments were issued last night by the liquor control board to some 200 applicants, thus enabling them to sell liquor from midnight until 2 a. m. today.

The licenses were sent to the Police Department and were distributed to the various precincts at midnight. Policemen on motorcycles and in automobiles delivered the permits to all liquor establishments in their jurisdiction.

George W. Offutt, chairman of the board, decided yesterday to change previous plans to distribute all permits by mail. After 2 a. m. today all retail establishments were required to close and no sales are permitted until 8 a. m. today, when "off-sale" establishments may open. Drinking in other retail shops is permitted after 9 a. m.

The following licenses were granted: Class A is for all beverages off-sale, Class B is for beer and light wines off-sale, Class C is for all beverages by the drink in restaurants, &c., Class D is for beer and light wines in restaurants, &c., Class E is for liquor on prescription.

Fingerprinting Trade Grows

Manufactring Firm Formed to Supply Demand for Equipment.

Kansas City, Mo. (U.P.).—The use of fingerprint identification is becoming so common in business as well as police work that it is developing a new industry, according to A. W. Nelson, president of a company formed here to manufacture fingerprinting supplies.

Fingerprint experts in the past have made their own equipment, but the practice is becoming so widespread that a demand has arisen for manufactured supplies, Nelson said. Fingerprinting has ceased to be merely the work of a few persons who find it interesting, and has become a common practice in so many businesses that swift, easily-handled equipment is wanted.

Hospitals in many cities use fingerprints for birth certificates, Nelson said. Insurance companies use them for policy applications and claims, banks use them for identification in large accounts, and undertakers are beginning to use them.

This means of identification is comparatively new in America aside from police work. A Scotland Yard detective is credited with introducing fingerprint identification to this country, when he came to St. Louis 33 years ago, and established the identity of a prisoner wanted in England.

President to Inspect Power Site in Fall

President Roosevelt will make an inspection tour of the Tennessee Valley, now under development by the TVA, some time next fall, according to Representative A. H. Carmichael (Democrat), Alabama, after a visit to the White House yesterday.

Remember Sweet Adeline?

Memories of "the good old days," now being broadly aroused by the return of legal drinking, hover around an obscure corner of the Library of Congress. In that corner are stacked brightly colored lithographic prints which long ago were displayed as advertisements to whet the public's desire for products of the brewers and distillers.

The prints originally came to the library when presented as file copies in conection with applications for copyrights. Recently, they were taken from the copyright office files to those of the library's fine arts division.

Library officials believe the collection is the only one of its kind in the United States.

The library's collection provides, in effect, a short course of pictorial instruction in "when, where and how drinkers used to drink." Also, it provides a good indication of the "art displays" used when the powers of advertising had not yet been fully developed.

The "Hour-Glass" Girls.

Girls of the famous Anna Held contour are present in large number among the depictions. Almost without exception, they are shown holding aloft glasses, with "Have One With Me" or some other similar legend in large type. More than a hundred designs in which the well-known "mountain bock" is prominently displayed are included.

Among the strangest picturizations is one which was well circulated in Spanish-American War days. It shows a cavalry sergeant, mounted on a prancing steed, receiving a bottle of whisky from the hands of a nurse. In the background a plentitude of "battle atmosphere" is supplied by outlines of cannon, bursting shells and other equipages of war. Incidentally, the label on the bottle was given prominent display.

The United States Capitol is portrayed in several of the prints. One of these, dating back to the 1880's, bears the legend "The Representative Whisky of America."

"At the Boat House."

"At the Boat House," is the caption of another print which depicts the start of a happy outing. Piled on the wharf to which two canoes are tied, are a multitude of bottles, apparently intended to be taken aboard the small craft.

One of the lithographs, extolling the qualities of a famous champagne, shows two dogs chasing a rat through a well-stocked cellar, with one basket containing bottles having been conveniently overturned to bring to gaze the all-important label.

A clubroom scene is surmounted by these words: "The finest drink ever offered to an American Gentleman. It lends charm to a dinner or reception."

King Gambrinus Bavarian scenes, the figure of Columbia, a tallyho, happy folk on roller skates and an almost endless array of similar creations of artistic fancy round out the collection.

Tie-up of Four Baltic States Is Held Likely

Confederation Similar to Little Entente Urged by France.

Kovno (U.P.).—Formation of a four-power Baltic bloc, identical in many of its purposes with the Little Entente, and probably also sponsored by France, looms as a strong possibility during this year.

The triumph of national Socialism in Germany, its spread to the explosive Memel district and the generally unsettled political conditions throughout Europe have led Baltic leaders to the conviction that such a league is advisable, if not necessary.

The bloc envisaged by French statesmen would include Lithuania, Latvia, Estonia and Finland, thus ringing the Baltic, in foreign political policy at least, from Sweden to East Prussia.

France's desire to see the formation of such a bloc was given fresh impetus by the obvious signs of a rapprochement between Germany and Poland, which latter nation France regards as a prime link in the chain of alliances she considers necessary to peace in Europe.

Lithuania's swing toward closer cooperation with her neighbors became first evident in the trade treaties recently concluded with Latvia and Estonia, but it is believed it will soon take a more concrete political form.

For a long period Lithuania's trade politics have leaned toward England while politically she was more closely oriented with Germany. But a recent speech of President Antanas Smetona before the governing party pointed the way clearly toward severance of close cooperation with a nation which Smetona claimed "seeks conquests in the Baltic and in Russia," and concentration on a united Baltic front.

The Baltic states are firm believers in the League of Nations. Revision of the peace treaties, they hold, must come within the Geneva framework. They prefer, as Smetona expressed it, "an unjust peace to a just war." Further community of interests with French policies would make the proposed bloc, if it is formed, an important factor in European politics.

South Dakota Plans To Quit Coal Business

Pierre, S. Dak., Feb. 28 (AP).—The State of South Dakota is going out of the coal mining business, Gov. Tom Berry announced today after conferring with the other two commission members—George Puder and Louis Lindstrom, of Timber Lake.

The three voted to sell the State-owned mine at Haynes, N. Dak., and dispose of a lease on a lignite strip mine at Firesteel in Dewey County. This is the third State-controled enterprise to be discarded.

Strike Pleases Spanish Wives

They Taste Prohibition When Walkout Shuts Cafes in Madrid.

Madrid (U.P.).—Wives and mothers who have a difficult time keeping their menfolk at home appeared to be the only persons who enjoyed the recent waiters' strike which shut every cafe, bar, night club and restaurant in the Spanish capital.

With no place to go to discuss politics, sports, or any other problem perturbing them, the men either stayed at home or took their families to the movies. But that idyllic condition ended when the waiters' strike of two weeks terminated.

One sensitive wife took it upon herself to explain to the newspapers why she was in favor of closing every cafe in Madrid.

"I believe," she wrote, "and I probably express the opinion of all Madrid women when I say that we are more pleased than ever with our husbands because they spend less and give us more of their time.

"During the 15-day strike I served my husband his three daily coffees, charging him 70 centimes or 10 centimes less than he was accustomed to pay. I saved 27.85 pesetas because I figured out that each coffee cost me about 9 centimes, so that I profited about 1.85 pesetas daily, which means that every 15 days I could buy another pair of shoes.

"I hope that the cafe owners and waiters never come to an agreement because as long as the cafes remain closed our home life will be free from the customary arguments about my husband going out."

U. S. Loan Guarantee Extension Is Forecast

A Presidential message asking Congress to extend the Government's full guarantee to the principal as well as the interest of the potential $2,000,000,000 in home loan bonds is expected within the next few days.

John H. Fahey, chairman of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, said yesterday after a visit to the White House that details have been completed and he expected the message shortly.

Administration to Delay New Corporation Act

The Administration has decided to defer action on a voluntary Federal incorporation law, now under consideration by a committee, until the next session of Congress, President Roosevelt said yesterday.

The committee has made several incidental reports, he said, but has not yet completed its work, pending further study. It consists of representatives of the Federal Trade Commission, Commerce and Justice Departments.

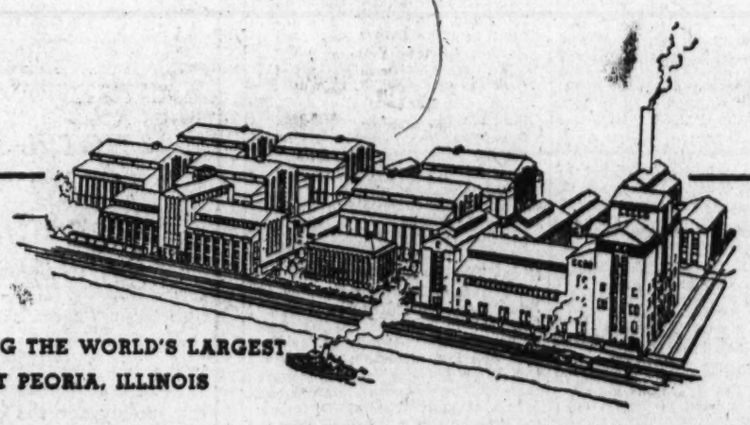
ANNOUNCE THEIR POLICY
IN THE PRESENT SITUATION..



NOW BUILDING THE WORLD'S LARGEST DISTILLERY AT PEORIA, ILLINOIS

● In view of the confusion following repeal, we believe the people of this country will appreciate a frank statement of the policy of Hiram Walker & Sons with reference to blended whisky.

Everyone knows that there is only a small quantity of properly matured whisky in the United States; so that good blended whiskies must be provided to meet the public's desire for liquor at moderate prices.

Naturally, liquor buyers want quality at modest prices; and they want to be assured of both by a responsible and reputable producer.

For some 75 years, the name of Hiram Walker has stood for the highest quality in whisky and other distilled liquors. Today it is so accepted and recognized the world over.

Hiram Walker is blending whisky with the same high regard for quality and purity which has been our fundamental policy since the beginning of the business.

The straight whisky used in our blending is all over four years old and is imported from extensive stocks aged in wood in our Canadian plants. The blending is done at our new American plant at Peoria, Ill. The whisky is pure and palatable.

When you buy Hiram Walker blended whisky, you can rest assured of quality, purity and value at a fair price.

If you prefer a straight whisky, you can obtain it by purchasing the world-famous "Canadian Club", guaranteed to be over five years old.

"Canadian Club" is aged in wood, bottled in bond in the Dominion of Canada, under government supervision and shipped across the international boundary in the bottles which you buy. The age of each is certified by the stamp of the Canadian Government affixed to each bottle.

Our importations will continue until such time as the new Hiram Walker plant at Peoria, Ill.—"the largest distillery in the world"—can have made and aged whiskies which will be bonded, supervised and stamped by the Government of the United States.

Such is the Hiram Walker policy—established because we believe that the public is entitled to the highest quality whiskies.

Droll Funster Surrounded by Weird Gadgets

Devices Pester Mr. Chasen, Ace Stooge; Jane Cowl Here March 19.

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Joe Cook, who has made thousands of theatergoers laugh in past seasons at his cleverly nonsensical antics in "Rain or Shine" and "Fine and Dandy," and long before that as the "one-man vaudeville show" of the two-a-day, comes to the National Theater next Monday night, March 5, in the new musical comedy, "Hold Your Horses," featuring Harriet Hoctor, premiere danseuse.

This is the glad announcement emanating late Tuesday from the office of Manager Stephen E. Cochran, of the National, only a few minutes after he had lamented with this column that no bookings were in sight until the week of March 19, when Jane Cowl will be E street's bright, particular luminary. Well! that's the way show business is!

"Hold Your Horses" comes to the National next Monday following a successful engagement in the New York Winter Garden and headed for a deferred engagement at the Grand Opera House, opposite City Hall Square, on North Clark street in Chicago.

Novel Cook Plot.

This novel vehicle is something of a new experience for Joe Cook, since it deals with the colorful period in our history immediately following the close of those justly celebrated "gay 90s." The time of the action is 1900 and the scene New York. Municipal politics form the basis of the plot and occasion many a laugh. Mr. Cook's private inventions for the discomfiture of Dave Chasen serve a similar useful purpose during the evening.

Included among the stellar players supporting the incomparable Mr. Cook are Tom Patricola, the aforementioned Mr. Chasen and a large coterie of others of like attainment.

"Hold Your Horses" was written by Russel Crouse and Corey Ford, with music and lyrics by Russell Bennett, Robert A. Simon, Louis Alter, Arthur Swanstrom and Ben Oakland. The settings are by Russell Patterson, well-known caricaturist and magazine artist, and the production was staged by R. H. Burnside, of New York Hippodrome fame, under the personal supervision of J. J. Shubert. The dances and ensembles were directed by Bob Alton.

All this happily dissipates the fear that "Hold Your Horses" would not be seen in the Capital this season and presumably may be interpreted as a tacit admission that Mr. J. J. Shubert has been moved by a just compassion to modify the earlier strictures which he placed upon sending further attractions to Washington. Washington is grateful to Mr. Shubert and no doubt will express its gratitude substantially at the box-office.

Mr. Cook, incidentally, is a lunatic comedian who deserves no less on his own account—just as one Hoosier about another.

Through an unfortunate confusion of dates, it was announced here yesterday that Elmer Rice's address upon the topic of "The Future of the Theater" was scheduled for last night at the Jewish Community Center, instead of tonight. Mr. Rice, one of America's most distinguished playwrights will arrive in the Capital today for the express purpose of delivering this lecture and will depart again for New York immediately it is concluded. The talk has been arranged by the National Jewish Forum and will be delivered in the Jewish Community Center tonight at 8:15 o'clock. It will be open to the public. Among Mr. Rice's best known plays are "On Trial," "Street Scene," Pulitzer Prize winners in 1929; "Counsellor at Law," "The Left Bank," "For the Defense" and "Wake Up Jonathan."

Happy Harbinger.

As has already been intimated in celebration of the jubilant dispatches relating to Mr. Cook and his early advent, Miss Katharine Roberts, one of the theater's most engaging pulpiteers, was a heartening visitor yesterday as a welcome harbinger of Jane Cowl's impending springtime—we hope it will be by then—visit.

Miss Cowl will be presented in the National Theater the week of March 19 by the Messrs. Seldon Bennett and Shepard Traube in a new play bearing the dissonant title of "Sweet Bells Jangled," in which I trust there is nothing personal!

"Sweet Bells Jangled" was written by Miss Cowl and Reginald Lawrence, co-author of "Men Must Fight," and is the first production of the new firm of Bennett and Traube, although both have been known in the theater for long. It will proceed from its Washington premiere engagement directly to Broadway.

Miss Cowl, one of the theater's most brilliant stars, has not been seen locally for several seasons and will be welcomed back with avidity by all true lovers of the drama.

Thus does what threatened to be a month's hiatus in bookings in the living theater begin to dismember itself, giving rise to the hope that in due course it will have effected its own complete annihilation.

Master Hardie Meakin, manager of RKO-Keith's and one of the more shrinking of the entrepreneurs, is stepping out of character to do a little Grade A pointing with pride since the announcement of the nominations for the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences awards for the best acting of the year.

The six upon whom the preliminary accolade has been bestowed are Charles Laughton in "The Private Life of Henry VIII," Paul Muni in "I Am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang," Leslie Howard in "Berkeley Square," Katharine Hepburn in "Morning Glory," Diana Wynyard in "Cavalcade" and May Robson in "Lady for a Day."

Mr. Meakin's pride springs from the fact that three of these were presented locally upon the screen of his theater—Laughton in "Henry VIII," Hepburn in "Morning Glory" and Robson in "Lady for a Day."

With a 50-50 break to begin with, RKO-Keith's bids fair to get into the finals!

"What's in a Name?"

When the Children's Theater of New York brings "Rip Van Winkle" back to the National Theater, Saturday morning, March 10, as the fifth and last attraction of its season, after his long sleep of more than the score of years allotted him by his creator, Washington Irving, the beloved Rip will have a rival in the public's interest in the person of a real American Indian dancer—"Ke-Ke-Ah-No-Quah," or "The-Boy-Who-Grew-Up-Overnight-and-Became-the-Head-of-His-Family."

Starr Jones—for that is he name "Ke-Ke-Ah-No-Quah" uses for the sake of brevity—was literally born in the theater rather than in a tepee, as both his mother and his father long presented Indian songs and dances on the white man's stage.

Noted Stage Dancer.

His own dancing played an important part in the New York production of "Girl Crazy," "Take the Air," "Circus Princess" and "The Garrick Gaities," and has been favorably compared by New York critics with the dancing of Ted Shawn, Jacques Cartier and Paul Coze.

Indian life and customs have always fascinated young Mr. Jones. He is an ardent student of the red man's lore. The Turkey-foot Clan of the Miamis adopted him as a member of their tribe; Chief White Horse Eagle inducted him into the Osage Tribe. He has learned the universal Indian sign language and the tongues of the Sioux, the Ojibway and the Leni-Lapis. From all these tribes and others, he has gathered dances, songs and ceremonials. His tribal brothers are very proud of the manner in which he presents their ceremonials on the stage.

Believe it or not, in two months you will be canvassing the neighborhood for children to serve as an alibi for your going to the circus!

And Sunday would be Inauguration Day save for the grace of Providence and a lot of good luck!

Nine Guests? Miss Tobin Seems in Trouble With Two!

These annoying, but moderately handsome, young men would be Donald Cook, on the left, and Hardie Albright, not quite so restrained, on the right. It is Miss Genevieve Tobin, of course, between them. These three are among the numerous principals in "The Ninth Guest," a picturization of the stage mystery play, coming to the screen at the Earle Theater on Friday. It is reported one of the headier of the season's masterpieces of multiple murder!

Malta Knights Plan Assembly At Cumberland

Grand Lodge Convention Program Will Include Parade and Ball.

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Officers of the Knights of Malta met here with members of Star of the East Commandery to arrange for the convention here May 6-10.

Grand Commander George C. Lowery, of Wilkinsburg, Pa.; Grand Recorder Elias J. Sterner, of Harrisburg, Pa., and Financial Secretary of Grand Commender B. E. Posten, of Wilkinsburg, discussed the convention program with J. K. Morgan, chairman of the convention executive committee and other local members.

The program calls for a special service at the Center Street Methodist Church, visits to industries and points of historical interest, a theater party and entertainment, a parade of visiting delegates, also companions and sisters of the Dames of Malta, with a banquet and ball.

Thursday, May 10, will be the final session of the Grand Commandery. It will take the entire day. At night there will be entertainment.

Trial of 2 Set April 4 In Vanderbilt Aid Death

Clarksburg, W. Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—The trial of Fritz and Peter Anthony, brothers, of Gormania, charged in the automobile death of John Brodnix, of Washington, secretary to Cornelius Vanderbilt, jr., will begin April 4 at Petersburg, Grant County.

Brodnix was killed on Federal Highway 50, near Gormania, December 23, 1933, when allegedly struck by the Anthonys' car.

Veteran Loses $10,000 War Insurance Claim

Clarksburg, W. Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Judge William E. Baker, of Elkins, in Federal District Court here, has ruled that Spurgeon H. Bagwell, World War veteran of Sand Fork, is not entitled to a judgment against the United States on a $10,000 war risk insurance policy.

The argument was based on whether Bagwell was totally and permanently disabled when the policy lapsed May 30, 1919, through nonpayment of premiums. Judge Baker held the evidence showed that Bagwell was not so disabled at that time and was not entitled to recover.

Bridegroom Held On Perjury Writ

Allegedly Falsified Age of 15-Year-Old Girl.

Westminster, Md., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—John Huff, of Hanover, Pa., waived a hearing before Magistrate George E. Benson here yesterday, and was jailed on a charge of perjury resulting from his application for a marriage license February 17.

When Huff applied for a license he gave his age as 26 and the age of Bertie V. Brown, his intended wife, as 18. The couple was married by the Rev. George A. Early, of the Westminster Church of the Brethren.

Two days later Huff was arrested after Orington Brown, the girl's father, claimed the girl is only 15.

CCC Camps Build Telephone System

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Sixteen miles of telephone line, connecting the three Civilian Conservation Corps camps in Allegany County, have been completed by CCC workers.

The line connects camps near Paw Paw, Little Orleans and Green Ridge. It joins the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. system at Fifteen-Mile Creek, near Green Ridge. District Forester H. C. Buckingham said the line may be utilized in fighting and preventing forest fires and when the CCC camps are abandoned the telephone system can also be used in emergencies by persons living in the sparsely settled sections of Allegany and Garrett Counties.

A Message from the HOTEL ASSOCIATION
OF WASHINGTON, D. C.
Regarding the Sale of Spirituous Beverages

In conformance with the Government's policy for the encouragement of legitimate enterprises which dispense beverages under authority of present laws, the hotels of Washington will discourage the service of liquors and wines to their guests unless such beverages are purchased from the hotels in the regular course of service.

In further conformance with the Government's policy of eradicating illegitimate enterprises, prices for wines and liquors shall be moderate and reasonable. The Hotel Association of Washington pledges its best efforts to eradicate any abuses which may have formerly prevailed in the sale of liquors and wines, and wishes to assure the authorities of the District of Columbia of its wholehearted cooperation in the orderly and lawful dispensation of such beverages.

Lavish Party Fetes Prince From Japan

Ambassador Saito Is Host at Dinner Honoring Tokugawa.

President to Entertain for Visitor Today at Luncheon.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Capital society is devoting itself this week to the entertaining of Prince Iyesato Tokugawa, president of the Japanese Red Cross and former president of the House of Peers of Japan, who with his son, the Japanese Minister to Canada, Prince Iyemasa Tokugawa, and the Minister's daughter, Miss Toyo Tokugawa, arrived in Washington yesterday to spend several days.

Last evening the Ambassador of Japan and Mme. Saito entertained at a large dinner in the grand ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel in honor of the distinguished visitor, when the younger Prince Tokugawa and his daughter, and also Mr. Sakae Yamasaki, aid to the elder prince, were among the guests.

The dinner was served at a very large oval table, arranged in a sunken garden effect, with Australian ferns and tropical flowers forming the base for an outdoor garden scene with four large Australian fern trees and three Japanese cherry trees in full bloom. Tall vases, covered with green moss, from which quantities of pink snapdragons drooped, gave an effective suggestion of more cherry blossoms. Decorations on the table included low oval floral pieces filled with pink roses, placed at intervals, snapdragons, white freesias, and blue Japanese iris.

Distinguished Guests.

The distinguished assemblage of guests included the Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull, the Ambassador of Turkey, Mr. Ahmet Muhtar; the Ambassador of Spain and Senora de Cardenas, the Ambassador of Poland, Mr. Stanislaw Patek; the Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and Mme. Troyanovsky.

The Secretary of War and Mrs. George H. Dern, Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy; Senator and Mrs. Key Pittman, Mrs. David A. Reed, the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. William Phillips, the President of the Philippine Senate, Mr. Manuel Quezon; Gen. Douglas MacArthur, U. S. A.; Admiral and Mrs. Joseph Strauss, the Bishop of Modra, James H. Ryan.

Mr. and Mrs. William R. Castle, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Laughlin, Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom, Representative and Mrs. Sam D. McReynolds, the Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Henry L. Roosevelt, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. William Crozier, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Hayne Ellis, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark L. Bristol, Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. Harry A. McBride, Dr. Stanley K. Hornbeck, Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon Fay Perkins, Judge John Barton Payne, Miss Mabel T. Boardman.

Virginia Homes Group Visions Colony Revival

Lecture Planned as Step Toward Restoring Plantation.

The list of sponsors for the illustrated lecture on gardens and homes of old Virginia to be given by Mrs. David Tucker Brown on March 7, at the Mayflower Hotel, was announced yesterday.

The sponsors are members of the District of Columbia committee of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation, who hope in time to recreate a self-sustaining colonial plantation. They plan to give this generation and generations to come a picture of the thriving community Thomas Lee carved out of a Virginia wilderness in 1729, when he built Stratford, the birthplace of Robert E. Lee.

The sponsors are Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, Mrs. Louis S. Greene, Mrs. Carter Glass, Mrs. Fairfax Harrison, Mrs. Harry B. Hawes, Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis, Mrs. John W. Davidge, Mrs. Joseph E. Washington, Mrs. Cazenove Lee, Mrs. Jesse Metcalfe, Mrs. Ralph Worthington, Mrs. Edwards Shouse, Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Mrs. Eliphalet F. Andrews, Mrs. Stephen A. Bonsal, Mrs. Gardner L. Boothe, Mrs. E. Randolph Cocke, Mrs. J. Harry Covington, Mrs. Hugh L. Cumming, Miss Sarah Lee, Mrs. William B. Mason, Mrs. George M. Morris, Mrs. Stanley F. Reed, Mrs. John Rutherford, Mrs. Lloyd P. Shippen, Mrs. Harry S. Venn, Mrs. Benjamin F. Weems.

Stereopticon Slide Show.

Mrs. David Tucker Brown has made the study of old homes and gardens her life work and has written extensively for publication.

Mrs. Gardner Boothe, of the Garden Club of Virginia, has spent two years collecting and organizing the colored slides which will illustrate the lecture. Many of them are from photographs by Miss Frances Benjamine Johnston.

The University of Virginia will be one of 45 places portrayed by slides. The university was built by Thomas Jefferson, who could have gone down in history as an architect and furniture designer of note if he had not overshadowed these talents by even greater gifts as a statesman and philosopher.

A Jefferson Masterpiece.

From his home at Monticello, overlooking the quaint town of Charlottesville, the story goes that Jefferson watched through a pair of binoculars the progress of his beloved university—its stately rotunda and arcades.

The colored slides will show the famous serpentine walls which surround the ground and the exquisite Schele de Vere garden. In the west range, which opens out on the beautiful quadrangle, Edgar Allan Poe lived as a student.

Rufus Mather Looks at Italy Revealed by Medieval Records

Lecture on Discoveries in Archives Heard by Ambassador.

The Ambassador of Italy, Signor Augusto Rosso, and members of the embassy staff attended the lecture given by Mr. Rufus Graves Mather, at a meeting of the Italy America Society last evening at the Mayflower.

Mr. Giuseppe Tommassi, secretary of embassy, is now secretary of the society. Because of the mourning period being observed by the Italian Embassy, the Ambassador and members of the staff left immediately following the address.

Mr. Mather, speaking on "Adventures in Italian Art Archives," told of his work in the Vatican Library when the present Pope, then Mgr. Ratti, was Prefect and in charge of the room where students worked. He also discussed the drama and human interest which he found in such unpromising sources as tax returns, account books, rental books, and notorial writings of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries.

The Archivist's Work.

"The archivist has something in common with the archaeologist," Mr. Mather said. "They are both hunting for something to add to our knowledge of history and art in its various branches."

In the case of the former it is necessary to pore over masses of manuscripts of what might be wholly irrelevant matter in the pursuit of discovery, making his "excavations," as it were, mentally, while the archaeologist does his work materially, he said.

Among those present were the Apostolic Delegate, Archbishop Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, accompanied by Mgr. Egidio Vanozzi and the Rev. Dr. Francesco Lardone; Senator and Mrs. Henry Wilder Keyes, Representative and Mrs. Harry Clay Ransley, Brig. Gen. Dion Williams, U. S. M. C., chairman of the executive committee of the society, and Mrs. Williams, Col. and Mrs. George B. McClellan, Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock, Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat, of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia; Mrs. Hennen Jennings, Mrs. Charles Lea, Baroness von Below, Mrs. Oscar Jarecki, Mrs. Francis Newlands, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose and Mrs. Thomas H. C. Reed.

Lecture Guests.

Accompanying Mr. and Mrs. Mather were the Surgeon General and Mrs. Hugh S. Cumming, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Phillips, Col. and Mrs. Robert Richardson, Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Colt Bloodgood, of Baltimore; Miss Marjorie Ferguson, of Florence, Italy, and Mr. Abraham Hewitt, of New York.

Also present were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Davies, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Harriman, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sim Lee, Mrs. Newland Johnston, Mrs. Morris Evans, Miss Meta Evans, Mrs. John Fremont, Mr. and Mrs. Thad Brown, Mrs. William Fitch Kelley, the Rev. and Mrs. James Shera Montgomery, Col. Frederick Johnston, Mrs. Horace Shares, Miss Grace Ocumpaugh, Mrs. J. Thompson Wailes, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Halstead, Mr. Blair Thaw, Col. and Mrs. John Bigelow.

Mr. Walter D. Davidge, the president, presided. Following the lecture given in the Chinese room, supper was served in the Presidential dining room of the Mayflower.

Dinner to Mark Roosevelt Year

Vice President Will Join Cabinet Fete for President.

The Vice President and Mrs. John Nance Garner will be among the guests at a dinner to be given by the members of the Cabinet in honor of President Roosevelt Sunday evening. The dinner will mark the anniversary of the President's first year in office.

Yesterday Mrs. Garner was the guest at luncheon of Mrs. Edwin L. Davis.

Mrs. Garner will be the guest in whose honor Mrs. Henry W. Keyes, wife of Senator Keyes, of New Hampshire, and Mrs. Fred H. Brown, wife of the junior Senator from New Hampshire, will entertain at luncheon on Thursday, March 8, in Mrs. Keyes' home in Alexandria.

Mrs. Keyes will leave Washington tomorrow for New York to attend the wedding of Miss Grace Roosevelt to Mr. William McMillan, of Baltimore, which will take place on Saturday, at noon, in the Christ Church at Oyster Bay, L. I.

The Washington Post presents

D. Sam Cox's

'BLACKIE BEAR'

A real children's story for real children.

Mr. Cox has taken every day problems and puzzles confronting youngsters and solves them through the adventures and experiences of Blackie Bear and his Creek friends.

Blackie's adventures are convincing and real. He gets into mischief . . . and pays for it just as with Jack Farmer, the 12-year-old son of two of the human characters in the stories.

And when Blackie does a kindly service for Billie Possum or Dr. Coon, the moral is quite as adroitly and impressively registered on the mind of the juvenile reader.

Blackie Bear characters are not namby-pamby . . . but are practical in thought and action.

Every child will enjoy "Blackie Bear." Give your children the wholesome joys of following these superb stories.

New Radio Set Serves Highball And Smoke, Too

Swinging Doors Oscillate to Reveal Decanters While Music Pours Forth.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

Exit all "model T" radios! A brand-new model has arrived in town and it's setting a modern pace in the radio world.

Last week the proprietor of a local shop said no, positively no, he had nothing new in radios. This week he calls up and figuratively crawls through the phone in his excitement. "Come down quick," he urges, "and see a real sight!"

And isn't it though! Here's a radio which serves music, sports, entertainment — and drinks and smokes as well! It's a genuine licensed set with a range which takes in all the regular programs, amateur stations, and police calls. A beautifully proportioned modernistic cabinet of matched grained woods has swinging doors at either end which open upon little shelves equipped with three tabulated bottles, six glasses and space for cigarettes and cigars.

As companion piece to the model host of today, this radio assures him a successful means of extending real hospitality, the kind that makes guests settle back in their chairs and exude congeniality.

The practical size of this new model, 14½ inches wide, by 6⅛ by 8¾, adapts it to any size room, and while not placing it in the portable class, does make it convenient to move around.

Bad Weather Bargains.

Rumors that spring is due most any time now restrains our breaking into the budget to buy bad weather equipment. But a downtown department store is loathe to see us shiver and shake with the cold, and accommodatingly lowers its prices on raincoats and galoshes, so that we can buy both for less than the usual price of one.

They offer a wide selection of both brown and black galoshes for $1.45, and a rack of left-over raincoats, tweeds and oil cloths, for $1.95 and $2.45. There are only a few of these left, and a small size range, but somebody is going to be lucky.

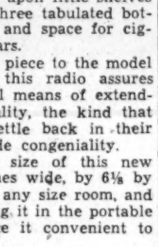
Princess' Bath Cream.

Once upon a time a European connoisseur of cosmetics was called upon to make some bath cream for a baby princess. The royal infant had a way of kicking, screaming and rousing the household when her nurse placed her in the tub.



The cosmetician, who was a well-known dermatologist, created a cream which was applied over the child's knees, elbows and feet. It was soft and soothing to such an extent that the baby princess stopped squawking about the bath, and as time went on they say she'd raise a hue and cry if for any reason her bath was delayed.

Naturally such a cream was bound to attract the attention of court attendants, who wanted some for their own children—and, as the case developed later, for their personal use.

Women are not apt to pass by any beauty aids. Many of the court belles found that this cream applied on any rough or chapped places about their own body would soon make the skin soft and alluring. Massaged on the feet before a warm bath it seems endowed with a magic for banishing foot fatigue.

John and Priscilla.

The Puritan Priscilla's John Alden is at last speaking for himself—that is, after a fashion.

The long-handied candle snuffers now on display in a local shop have John's head at the end of their long handles. In eloquent silence he's telling the shoppers that here indeed is a candle snuffer worth having, that the chrome finish is untarnishable, and, furthermore, a snuffer like this isn't just to be picked up anywhere at any time.

Beside the Alden snuffers there are some mounted with the pretty Priscilla heads. One of each makes a perfect pair.

Reasonable Dressmaking.

There was a dressmaker in Baltimore who had a little shop all her own and customers enough to keep her busy the whole day through. But lean years did come upon the land and the dressmaker lost her shop and came to Washington to live.

She rented a large comfortable room looking down on Connecticut avenue, and there during the day she plys her trade, working long and earnestly to build up a business. People who go to her once always return. She seems to have a happy knack for fitting clothes to give them a million dollar air. Recently she has made some children's clothes which look like perfect models for a fashion parade. She gives a couturier's cut to tailored coat suits, or evening gowns.

She said the other day that she was planning to make simple spring and summer dresses for $2. Frocks befrilled and bepleated naturally cost more. Her prices, though, are astonishingly reasonable, and in view of the quality of her work, unbelievable.

New and Striking Uses of Long-Haired Furs Will Render Milady's Easter Coat Distinctive Fox With Decided Blue or Gold Look Featured in Latest Mode.

By Amos Parrish.

New York, Feb. 28.—Along about Easter you'll rub your eyes and say, "Am I seeing things?" And you will be. Seeing one of the newest things in fox-trimmed coats . . . a coat trimmed with fox with a decided bluish or decided goldish look.

Closer consideration will reveal that the blue fox is really beige with a bluish cast. And that the gold one is actually beige or brown with enough gold in it to make you think "gold fox" instead of brown.

Occasionally you may even see a real navy blue fox. Not many of them . . . since it's more or less of a fashion trick. Interesting though, if you like things radically different. Because it shows how far fur dyeing has progressed and suggests what may happen in the future.

A "Different" Look.

Foxes dyed in interesting shades are one thing which make this spring's coats, which are trimmed with long-haired furs, look decidedly new and different from those of other springs.

These furs are being used in ways new to spring coats, too. (Though the good old favorites have not been neglected by any manner of means. You'll still see those dropped shawl collars with fox borders round the edge.)

Monastic Hoods.

Just about the newest way to use fox . . . or furs of the fox type . . . is shown in the sketch. A detachable fur-trimmed cape is draped on the coat so the fur comes close to the throat in front and hangs deeply down the back in the new monastic hood effect.

It results in that "blown-to-the-back" look which so many new spring fashions have.

Last spring, this coat would have had a fox scarf hung half down the front and half down the back. Or it might have had a plain, undraped cape bordered with fox.

Of course, this kind of hoodback detachable cape can be worn in other ways . . . pulled further down the front so the fur doesn't chuck you under the chin on warmer days, for instance. And it can come off altogether, for the coat without the cape is simple but very 1934 looking in its slightly fulled front.

Fur on Some Sleeves.

You may have fur on your sleeves if you like, and this sort of trimming makes a spring coat look very luxurious indeed. It's put on high up in a simple banding much in the way it was used on some smart winter coats.

But fluffy furs are being cut narrower this spring so they can be manipulated and applied in flatter, less wintry looking ways. And you need not worry that a sleeve-trimmed spring coat will look as though it had been designed for zero temperatures.

Tomorrow—Closed-front Chesterfield most distinctive topcoat.

Spring coats of the types described are available in Washington in all the better shops and department stores.

Dessert Should Be Hot or Cold, According to Weight of Other Courses; Susan Mills Tells How Several Varieties May Be Prepared.

By Susan Mills.

Just before the dessert course of a formal dinner there comes a vague doubt in the diner's mind. Will it be a large dessert?—he cannot refuse, and yet——. He sighs, lights a cigarette and waits.

But if the hostess is clever and careful, there need not be trepidation in the minds of any of her guests. Her dessert is well-chosen, planned to fit into the rest of the menu, and prepared in a way that will bring her dinner to a delightful climax.

During this season of freezing temperature, hot desserts are in order. They are, however, a bit heavier than the cold variety, so care must be taken in planning the rest of the menu. A heavy dessert should be served after a light meal, a light cold dessert is welcomed when the appetite has been dulled with other things.

Here is a hot dessert that is inexpensive and easy to prepare:

Baked Bananas.

Peel four large bananas and cut lengthwise. Put in baking dish in layers with a mixture of ¼ cup sugar, ⅛ teaspoon salt, two tablespoons lemon juice, one tablespoon melted butter. Bake half an hour, cover with a meringue of two-egg whites and sugar, and sprinkle with powdered macaroons. Brown slightly in oven and serve.

A heavy but cold dessert is a fig compote. Stuff large figs with chopped nuts and grated orange peel, and serve with a whipped cream sauce.

Whipped Cream Sauce.

One-half cup whipped cream, whipped stiff; ½ cup powdered sugar, 1 egg-white, whipped stiff; 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1 teaspoon almond extract.

Mix together carefully and serve very cold. A tablespoon of a strong cordial may substitute the vanilla and almond flavoring.

A charlotte russe is a versatile dessert. It can be flavored with almost anything that happens to present itself from the pantry shelf. The basic recipe consists of a pint of cream whipped very stiff, ½ cup of powdered sugar, and the whites of 3 eggs beaten very stiff. One can flavor this with a tablespoon of brandy, a teaspoon each of sherry and vanilla; or by using caramel, or brown or maple sugar instead of powdered sugar one has another dessert. Almost any fruit can be used—pineapple, strawberries, candied cherries, candied orange peel, and many others.

This dessert can be served in a mold lined with lady fingers, or in the little paper cups made for the purpose.

It seems amazing that the chestnut can lend itself to so many delightful preparations; soup, stuffing for fowl, as a vegetable, in a salad and now as a dessert.

Chestnuts With Coffee Sauce.

One quart chestnuts, blanched; ½ cup sugar; one cup water; stick cinnamon; ¼ cup strong black, hot coffee; two beaten eggs.

Cook water, chestnuts, sugar and cinnamon until tender, and coffee which has been poured over the eggs. Chill and serve.

What Today Means

"Pisces."

If March 1 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7:30 to 8:30 a. m., from 1:30 to 2:30 p. m. and from 6:30 to 7:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 9 to 10 a. m., from 3 to 4 p. m. and from 10 to 11 p. m.

If you were born on March 1, you have been gifted with the power of self-expression. It would appear if you would seriously apply yourself to the study of elocution and the drama, success could be attained. There is a possibility that a career as an elocutionist or actor does not appeal to you, but the preparatory work taught in the study of elocution will always prove of value, and it may prove very beneficial in some other line of endeavor in which you are interested. One should show their appreciation of every gift nature has bestowed, by making use of them.

The child born on March 1, as it grows into its teens, will display a number of very contradictory characteristics and tendencies. A careful study will readily determine which should be encouraged and developed, and the undesirable ones which must be suppressed or controlled. As children born on this date respond readily to suggestions and direction, there is no trouble to guide them in the proper direction. Their alert mentality makes them excellent students. Their personality assures their popularity.

The man born on March 1 should confine himself to a very definite line of action, and will prove wise not to try and have his business interests diversified. He will succeed best if he concentrates all his efforts in making a success in one thing.

Beggars All

By Katharine Newlin Burt

The Story Thus Far.

Rafe Courvoisier, last member of an impoverished Southern family, is released from a secret outlaw rendezvous by Madrone, its ruler, when he promises to obey Madrone's instructions, to be written to him in a unique green ink. Returning to Candle Island, his family home in Chetteraw, he finds that it has been bought by Hortense Kendall, a beautiful girl from the North He takes service as Miss Kendall's boatman. His family lawyer gives him a letter from Harmon Jay, Miss Kendall's guardian. It is written in Madrone's green ink, and instructs him to live at Candle Island. Rafe is caught in a storm with Hortense, and they run to his boatman's house for shelter. Suddenly she is in his arms. Rafe puts her away from him and flees the house.

Chapter X.

Rafe ran back through the crashing rain all the way to his own cabin; there he stripped off the saturated canvas clothes that seemed to scald him, dressed, sleeked down his hair, and began to pace his two rooms, smoking and talking to himself.

He did not stop this panther walk until he was startled by silence. The rain ceased as suddenly as that. He went out and stood at his door on the sand. It was already night. He threw away his last cigarette and soberly returned along the beach through the wet woods up the shallow terraces until he saw the lights of Hortense Kendall's house.

He stood for a few minutes on the columned porch rehearsing sentences; then, without knock or ring, he let himself in and turned into the drawing room at the left.

From the threshold he saw now that Hortense was there alone, lying face down on one of the brocaded sofas, weeping like a beaten child.

She did not hear him until he spoke. "Hortense Kendall."

She started, caught her breath and lay still, her face hidden on her bare golden arm. She had not changed her dress and he felt sure that she, too, had gone without her dinner. He knew that her pride must burn her now that he should find her so, in tears.

He knelt down on the floor beside her and touched her hair. "Hortense, stop crying. You've nothing in the world to cry for, honey. Don't you know that? You . . . just silly, that's all."

Lifts Lips From Cushion.

She said, lifting her lips away from the cushion, not turning toward him: "I thought you loved me. I thought that if you took me in your arms—you loved me."

"You just don't know a thing in the world about loving, child. You lost your head a little, being alone and scared by the lightning storm. I understand it perfectly. I lost my own head first, didn't I? Will you listen to me?

"This is what I want to ask you and I've a good reason for asking it. Will you please explain to me why you—so young and pretty and rich—are sent away off here to live by yourself?"

"If I knew why"—Hortense murmured—"if I knew why . . . all that, then I wouldn't be so lonely and so angry and so . . . scared.

She sat up suddenly and he rose from his knees and stood before her until she invited him to sit down. She lifted her eyes to him with a pitiful difficulty. His heart began to move unevenly.

"I want you to tell me your history, if you will, and I want, if I can, to tell you something about part of mine."

She smiled faintly. "I can't tell you much," she sighed, remembering; puzzling. "That's the only queer thing about me, that's what makes me lonely and different. Mr. Jay has always answered my questions, and—this is queer, too, I think—I haven't got anything out of his answers.

"My father was a New Englander, interested in mines. My mother was French. He died when I was very little; and my mother, a few months after I was born. I was brought up on a farm in the mountains of Italy. Maddalena brought me up. Then I was sent to a convent school and then Maddalena brought me to America, and Mr. Jay put me into a New England School. But in the summers I was always taken back to the farm in Italy.

"I was very happy on that farm. But I was not happy at school, Mr. Courvoisier. It was as if I were inclosed in a block of ice which I wasn't able to melt myself and which nobody else would melt for me. I tried to make friends. I thought sometimes that I had friends. . . . but I don't know whether the schoolmistress had orders not to let me visit or whether she warned people not to ask me to visit their daughters."

"Warned people?"

"I Can't Explain."

"I can't explain. It's just what I felt. You see, it's all vague and bewildering. And I've always, way down inside my heart, been afraid, as though I were in somebody's power . . . an invisible somebody. I can't describe the feeling . . . walking about apparently quite free, but with an invisible chain."

"You don't have to describe that feeling."

"You've had it, too? I knew I was very rich. But I wanted most—friends—friends . . . people to love, to love me. And when you don't get that, it makes you proud. I learned to keep myself cold and strong that way. I did ask some of the girls down here to visit me. You see, I thought maybe if I had a home it would make a difference, but it was always the same, a lot of vague excuses. Something's missing, something's wrong. Rafe, I must tell you that you are the first American boy I've ever really talked to."

Rafe laughed. "I don't wonder you wanted me to kiss you!"

She said with disconcerting gravity! "But I don't think I did. I never imagined it . . . that you would, I mean. Only when I felt your arms . . . everything inside me went to pieces. That was when I began to love you."

"You mustn't even play as loving me," he said. "I'm not a free man. No, that doesn't mean I'm married or engaged or in love with some other girl. It means that I'm a beggar and a sort of . . . slave." He took a deep breath. He would tell her, if they killed him for it!

"Hortense, I must have your promise for entire secrecy. You must even promise to avoid the mention of any word that I tell. It might mean death. . . I'm talking truth, Hortense!"

"I promise, then. Of course. You may trust me. I am not inclined to tell things to people."

He rose and began to walk about. He talked in a low voice which she seemed to hear with her eyes, they changed so with his words.

He told her of his strange entry into that outlaw city, of his months of waiting there and of his final release under oath to execute a secret order.

"Don't Suggest Police."

"We can let that nightmare alone," he said. "Don't suggest police. I could do less than nothing with the police. That way is just a short cut to a very messy end, besides being treacherous. I do, in an insane sort of way, owe that man something. He let me out of my small trap into a big one. All I want you to understand is that I am not the casual sort of gentleman-beggar you might think me. And I wanted to earn the right to give you some advice. May I? Please, ma'am."

"Yes."

"You must let Mr. Jenkyns send a woman out here—a lovely young woman who will be your friend. She'll get you into touch with life, with reality. Bettine Dare, this girl—she's my cousin and a darling—will love you, if I know her. She'll introduce you to these people I grew up with in Chetteraw and you'll go to parties, dinners, dances, and with your looks and all the rest of it—your island—you can soon be the Queen of Chetteraw. And you'll be saving her life, too, which ought to soothe your sense of isolation and of magnificence."

"You won't leave me?"

"If I can be sure that I'm not too dangerous a servant . . . no. But, please believe me, ma'am, you may trust me for this . . . from now on I'll keep my place . . . not so much as your employe, but as his . . . Madrone's . . . you must forget that name! Good night."

She stood still and let him kiss her hand . . . As he went out the front door she murmured something, but he did not hear.

". . . will keep your place . . . in my heart," she said to herself.

The next day being a Sunday and a boatman's holiday, Rafe prepared for a visit to Chetteraw. As he went down to the landing for his boat, he found Hortense Kendall waiting.

Hortense Perfectly Composed.

She was perfectly composed this morning and had a new expression in her eyes. "I wanted you to know, Rafe, that I am quite willing to engage Miss Dare as my chaperone, if we like each other. Can you bring her out with you this afternoon?"

He discarded his plans for holiday. "Yes. I reckon I can."

"Then I'll be ready to receive her when she comes. I want to see her alone, please. I can tell better what I think, and what she thinks. She may not like me.

"I wanted to tell you so that you would know, too, that we should not have to submit our plan for Mr. Jay's approval, that the letter which annoyed me—it's really odd, as it's turned out—was to suggest that I find an older lady from Chetteraw who might introduce me to the right people there. And there's an enclosure for you, because he says you might be willing to give me your advice. Here it is!"

He was hardly surprised this time to see that it was written in green ink.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Some Views About Eyes.

A recent issue of the Sight Saving Review had an unusual number of articles of interest to the public as distinguished from physicians and eye specialists. One dealt with contact glasses. These are a variety of glasses that fit on the front of the eyeball and are held in position by the eyelids. In a sense they are a kind of spectacles in which no frames are needed. They can be worn for several hours, say 12 to 18, continuously, and it is not very difficult for a person to insert and remove them after he has been taught the art.

This article says there is a small field for the use of these glasses, but in that field they are valuable. The great majority of the people wearing glasses had better stick to what they have. Actresses and few other groups will find it desirable to wear contact glasses in spite of the irritation they are likely to cause, the high price at which they sell, and a few other drawbacks.

In some eye conditions their superiority to ordinary glasses is very marked. Among these are conical cornea, great irregularity in shape of the eyeball, marked difference between the two eyes, some kinds of astigmatism, and after some types of cataract operations.

Another article gives good advice as to the use of home remedies in the eyes. Very much the best eyewash is tears. No ordinary antiseptic equals tears as a wash cleanser, and germ killer. Washing the eyes with a boric acid solution may do no harm, but it does no good. Boric acid solution ranks far below tears as an eyewash. Physicians dissolve eye remedies in a watery solution of boric acid to prevent molds and bacteria from growing in them and spoiling them. This measure, used to protect the solution, has been taken by the public to mean that boric acid is good for the eyes. For that there is not much foundation. As a rule a home medicine cabinet should not contain any sort of eye drops or eye medicines.

It may be that none of the medicines used to prevent or to slow up cataract are of any service. Just now certain vitamins and diets are being tried, but it is too early to say they have any value.

The removal of foreign bodies from the eye, as practiced in workshops and in homes, causes some infection and blindness. This applies especially to picking them out with knife blades. If a body can be removed by turning the lid out and using a clean camel's hair brush, a clean piece of absorbent cotton, or the corner of a clean handkerchief, that is justified and usually succeeds, but going further is dangerous. Pulling the upper lid over the lower and having the tears and the lashes remove the foreign body is an excellent plan that often works.

The use of dyes on the lashes is a dangerous procedure.

Country Tweeds Come to Town in This Tailored Suit With Its Own Topcoat

By JANE STUART

Ladies, you've got the fashion designers all wrong. You ofttimes complain that clothes are not practical. Well, maybe sometimes you are right—but here is a new three-piece tailored suit, of that swanky Harris tweed, that is just about the most practical thing we have ever seen.

Judge ye not, too hurriedly—let us tell you about it. First of all it has a name, "The First Round-Up," we suppose, because it is one of the first really big hits of the dawning season. Or it might be because it "rounds up" a complete suit and wardrobe. The skirt, for instance, may be worn indoors now with a smart blouse, and outdoors with its higher-cut, buttoned-up jacket, and then you can wear all three garments simultaneously, or the loose-drapy wind-blown topcoat with most any outfit. Now, if that isn't practicality—maybe the Greeks will have a name for it!

This suit was brought out by Lansburgh's two weeks ago . . . it was a complete sell-out. Rushed orders have been completed and this store can supply your size, more than likely, for they have them for the missy type who wears sizes 12 to 20 and for women who wear sizes 36 to 42.

Mind you, it is tailored of Harris tweed in brown, misty blue and gray—and both coats are silk lined throughout.

Shop-hounding is a lot of fun these days—and again, Washington is a swell place to live in, if you just know where to go. It is a cosmopolitan city, full of life and laughter. But, if you want to know more about "The First Round-Up," and can't go down town to shop—call me on DIstrict 7575, and we'll tell you all about it—you'll be amazed at its price—all three pieces for only $25.00.

Nursery School Worth Dispute Waxes Violent

Member of Congress and Defender of System Cross Swords.

The battle between conservatives and progressives has switched to the field of the nursery school.

"The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world, and the world's best cradle rockers are mothers," declared Representative James P. Buchanan. Mr. Buchanan is chairman of the Appropriations Committee, which is considering the matter of appropriating CWA funds to run nursery schools in the District.

"Rocking is bad for all children and cradles have little to do with ruling the world," retorts Miss Ann Shumaker, of the Progressive Education Association.

The nursery center project faces an adverse precedent, the District appropriations act withholding District funds from the education of children under 5 years. And Mr. Buchanan is of the opinion that the act is justified.

A big cigar glowing in his mouth, his eyes gleaming with the zeal of the protector of the American home, the white-haired Texas representa- yesterday stoutly declared himself an "old timer," and took a firm stand against such ridiculous innovation as nursery schools.

"Nature Trains Mothers."

"No young teacher who has never had a child can care for children as well as their own mothers can," he said. "Nature trains mothers and she trains them better than normal schools train young girls. Besides, little children under 5 don't need teaching. What they need is love and kindness and cuddling."

The Congress member's eyes took on a gentle look as he voiced this noble sentiment.

"And I don't believe in punishing little children, either," he continued. "Poor little things. They're too young to know what they're being punished for.

"And it's not right to shove little children out into the world and make them go to school so young. It teaches them to be independent of their parents. It destroys the integrity of the American home. And when our homes die, our Nation dies."

Nursery School Defended.

"The nursery school does not attempt to take the place of the home," said Miss Shumaker. "On the contrary, it endeavors to bring about a better understanding between parents and children. The greatest advantage of the nursery school is that it teaches the child through association with other children his own age. Often, too, the best educated mother does not have the time to tackle each problem as it developes and solve it in such a manner that the emotional and mental welfare of the child will be bettered. The director of the nursery school does have the time and the proper training to do this."

Mr. Buchanan considers these ideas much too theoretical. He can't see that public schools have improved much since he was a boy in Texas. He insists that he learned more about loyalty at home than he possibly could have learned in any nursery school. And he considers the lessons he received from McGuffey's Reader and Blue Back spelling book better than any new fangled ideas about education.

"From those books I learned the principles of honor and integrity, and I can't see that the modern school has anything better than that to offer," he concluded.

Farm and Garden Committees Dine

Frau Schultze-Fysche Is Luncheon Guest.

Mrs. Charles L. McNary and Miss Grace Frysinger were hostesses at a luncheon-meeting yesterday of the International Cooperation and Hospitality committee of the National Capital Division of the Women's National Farm and Garden Association, in the clubhouse of the A. A. U. W. on I street.

The guest of honor was Frau Anna Schultze-Fysche, president of the Deutsche Willkommen Gesellschaft in Berlin.

The other guests included Mrs. Otto L. Veerhoff, Baroness von Lowenfeldt, Dr. Edith Allen, Mrs. Charles J. Brand, Mrs. Marwick Brewster, Mrs. Thad Brown, Miss Harlean James, Mrs. Arthur Keith, Mrs. John C. Merriam, Mrs. Warner O'Leary, Mrs. Ellis Yost, Mrs. Raymond Pearson, Dean Marie Mount, Mrs. M. A. Long, Miss Eileen Seaman, Mrs. Henry P. Shepherd and Mrs. John L. Whitehurst.

Miss Hutchinson Engaged to Wed

Fiancee of Mr. Henry C. Alexander, New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Ely C. Hutchinson, of San Francisco and New York, who are now making their home in Wilmington, Del., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Janet Hutchinson, to Mr. Henry Clay Alexander, of New York.

Miss Hutchinson attended school in Oakland, Calif., and later was a student at the National Cathedral School here. She was graduated from the University of California in Berkeley.

Mr. Alexander is the son of Mrs. Ellis DeWitt Alexander, of Murfreesboro, Tenn., and the late Mr. Alexander. He was graduated from Vanderilt University and the Yale Law School.

Firemen's Auxiliary to Meet.

Miss Gibbons Plans Bridal

Engagement Is Announced to Prof. A. T. Mason of Princeton.

Dr. and Mrs. Herbert Adams Gibbons, of Princeton, N. J., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Christine Este Gibbons, to Prof. Alpheus Thomas Mason, associate professor of politics at Princeton University.

Miss Gibbons is a direct descendant of three colonial governors. She was born in Turkey and spent most of her childhood in France, where she attended the Ecole Alsacienne. She was graduated from Miss Fine's School in Princeton and for several years has been studying singing in Paris.

Prof. Mason is a descendant of George Mason, of Gunston Hall, who was a prominent figure in the history of Virginia. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert W. Mason, of Snow Hill, Md.

The wedding will take place in June. Later Dr. Mason and his bride will go to Europe, where they will spend the summer.

Party Is Given For Mrs. Town

Mrs. Edward C. Moran, Jr., Entertains House Guest at Tea.

Mrs. Edward C. Moran, jr., wife of Representative Moran of Maine, entertained at tea yesterday afternoon in honor of her house guest, Mrs. Ernest Town, of Berlin, N. H., and Portland, Me., in her apartment in the Highlands.

Among the guests were Mrs. Clarence Lee Miller and the following wives of Representatives: Mrs. John G. Utterback, Mrs. Edward R. Burke, Mrs. Terry Carpenter, Mrs. Richard Duncan, Mrs. John Young Brown, Mrs. Will Rogers, Mrs. Phillip A. Goodwin, Mrs. O. Wearing, Mrs. Lawrence Imhoff, Mrs. E. W. Marland and Mrs. William B. Umstead.

Mr. Howard L. Roth Weds Miss Horton

Emory Church, Brightwood, Scene of Ceremony.

The wedding of Miss Lucille Marian Horton, daughter of Mrs. Smith, wife of Capt. Milton D. Smith, to Mr. Howard Lewis Roth took place last evening at 7 o'clock in the Emory Methodist Church in Brightwood. The Rev. John J. Rives performed the ceremony.

The bride wore a gown of ivory satin made on princess lines, with a medium length, fan-shaped train and long fitted sleeves. Her voluminous veil of tulle was caught in a cap of lace, which was trimmed with sprays of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

The maid of honor was Miss Kathryn Logan, and she wore a gown of soft blue brocaded satin, which was trimmed with a large bow of pink taffeta in the back. On her head there was a dainty spray of pink gardenias and she carried Rapture roses and lilies of the valley.

Mr. Arthur Gill served as best man.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of Capt. and Mrs. Smith on Tuckerman street. The bridal couple received, assisted by the bride's mother, who wore a gown of black chiffon, and Capt. Smith.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Roth left for Florida, the latter wearing a frock of gray wool with a matching hat and a caracul coat of the same shade. They will make their home in Washington.

Problems of Office Conduct Suggested Code Would Regulate

Code Queries

Consider the girl office worker—

Should she or should she not:

Smoke in the office?

Renew her make-up while at the typewriter?

Accept luncheon invitations from her employer?

Be frank and tell the boss when he is wrong or be a yes-woman and let him think he is always right?

Wear dark, severe clothes or dress in fashionable attire that would be suitable for an afternoon tea?

Divorce her personal life from her office life?

Have social relations after business hours with men who work in her office?

Be friendly with persons who call upon her employer?

Accept attentions from the boss's son?

Maintain a dignified, aloof mien in the office or be gay and amusing?

Permit an executive, a married man, to drive her home?

Goodwin Post Staff Photos.

Whether a girl office worker's desk in a well-regulated establishment may harbor an ash tray, as above, is a question upon which personnel directors of the Capital are divided, as they are also on the propriety of the young woman in the circle accepting the luncheon invitation her employer is propounding.

Office Etiquette Code Admittedly Is Needed But Difficulty Is Found

Should Girls Smoke in Office, Apply Cosmetics at Her Desk or Accept Boss' Invitation to Luncheon Are Questions Upon Which Personal Directors Are Unable to Agree.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

When the boss asks his pretty secretary to lunch with him she is afraid to say no, and yet hesitates to say yes.

The boss, meanwhile, grits his teeth every time his secretary yanks out her compact and powders her nose in the office.

These problems, only two of many that crop up in offices almost daily, demand an Emily Post to formulate a code of etiquette for women office employes. There are plenty of books that tell the right way to move a soup spoon, but when it comes to the best method for dealing with the whims of her employer, the poor business girl has only Heaven to guide her.

What, for instance, should she do when the boss' collegiate son casts speculative glances in her direction? What should be her attitude when her employer's wife descends upon the office? What should she say when an executive of the firm, a married man, asks permission to drive her home?

This problem of office etiquette has become so omnipresent that the magazine, Independent Woman, has undertaken the compiling of a sample code.

Employers Don't Agree.

Is such a code possible? That it would simplify matters, everyone agrees. The difficulty lies in getting employers to agree on what constitutes the perfect secretary. Some prefer a cheerful disposition to cold efficiency. Others want good breeding rather than good looks. The employes, on the other hand, have a single idea, to wit: To get along amicably with their bosses so they can hold their jobs.

Granted the necessity of an office code, what are the chief points to be considered? Undoubtely smoking in offices. Next, perhaps, luncheon invitations from executives. Then, whether a secretary should touch up her cupid's bow while sitting at the typewriter. And inevitably, the old question, "Should I be a yes-woman or should I tell the boss when he is wrong?"

Many offices in Washington seem to have floundered through already to an unofficial code on smoking. A survey yesterday revealed that the girl who works in a small office can usually hold a cigarette in one hand and jot down shorthand with the other. In the larger offices it is usually necessary for the girls to take "time out" in the dressing room when they want to smoke.

Divided on Office Smoking.

Varying opinions on smoking regulations were expressed yesterday by a personnel director, a head of an employment bureau, and a director of a secretarial school.

"Our women office employes," said Miss Marie L. Tedrow, personnel director of Lansburgh & Bro., department store, "are not permitted to smoke, except in their recreation room. We want our office to have a business-like appearance."

Mrs. A. C. Beaver, director of the Washington School for Secretaries, deplored smoking in the office. "It shows lack of taste," she declared. "I always advise girls leaving the school for positions, to forego cigarettes in the office even if their employers have no objections to smoking."

More tolerant on this subject was Evans Rogers, head statistician of the United States Employment Bureau, Department of Labor. Young Mr. Rodgers thought it was all right for the girls to smoke unless they worked in reception offices.

"In the next ten years I don't suppose it will annoy anyone if smoking is done in the reception room," said Mr. Rodgers. "But now there are some persons who become riled if they walk into an office and are greeted by a young woman with a cigarette between her fingers."

Invitation to Luncheon.

The statistician had a liberal attitude toward all the questions. He thought the secretary should be more flattered than alarmed when the boss asked her to lunch with him; said he had found that the business day went more pleasantly if the executive was surrounded by employes who had something in common with him; and where this situation existed the luncheon was more noteworthy for brittle conversation than for flirtation.

Mrs. Beaver got neatly around the luncheon question by saying that it was all right for the secretary to accept if the boss' invitation were a matter of courtesy; all wrong if the invitation were personal.

Miss Tedrow explained that there was an unwritten rule among the department stores' executives that they should not be on familiar terms with the persons who work for them.

"But if an executive met his secretary outside the building and took her to lunch, I don't see how we would know about it, do you?" she asked.

Painting the lily in offices brought divergent opinions.

Use of Make-Up in Office.

"I don't mind the girls using make-up—in fact I advise them to improve upon nature when they can—but they should do their improving in private," said Mrs. Beaver. "I consider it disillusioning as well as indelicate for a young woman to repair her complexion in the presence of her employer and other men in her office."

"Our girls are supposed to go to the dressing room when they want to put on make-up," commented Miss Tedrow. "I suppose some of them do powder their noses at their desks while no one is looking."

Mr. Rodgers claims to be undisturbed by lips in the process of being carmined and by cheeks that are receiving an extra dab of rouge.

"I've found that those things take care of themselves if well-bred cultured young women are employed," he declared. "That holds good for office clothes, too. The well-bred secretary will naturally know how to dress with distinction and yet not look like a chorus girl."

Putting the Boss Right.

Less easy to solve was this problem: If the employer believes that he is right about something and his secretary knows that he is wrong, should she let him go on thinking he is right or should she point out his mistake?

"She should tell him that he is wrong," Miss Tedrow stated with determination. "She should tell him in a diplomatic way, but she should certainly tell him. I hate yes-women."

Mr. Rodgers believed that the secretary should go very slowly in pointing out her superior's mistakes. He thought that she should make a study of his temperament so that she would know just how much she could disagree with him without receiving her notice.

Mrs. Beaver agreed with Mr. Rodgers.

The same thought was expressed in fewer words by a debutante who has gone into business.

"Be a yes-woman for the first three weeks. After that you know your man," was her advice.

Rickenbacker Plane Example Of Aerial Interior Decoration

Record-Making Ship Strikes New Note in Luxury; Problems Mastered.

By Jo Ellen Maxson.

Interior decoration, like everything else in this modern age, has taken to the air. If you own an airplane, it is not enough to be master of its motor and controls. You must know whether the upholstery will tone in with the cloud effects above the Rockies and whether the floor covering will be restful when you are riding a gale.

The new air liner in which Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker recently made his record-breaking flight from Los Angeles to New York, incorporates the newest ideas in airplane interior decoration. The color scheme is soft gray and horizon blue, one admirably designed to fit in with any kind of atmospheric surroundings.

The sides and coved ceilings are of grayish blue composition leather. The windows, which are almost square, are draped in heavy gray silk. These are fastened securely along the outside edges with snaps so that they will not flap while the plane is in motion.

The chairs, created by modern designers, combine beauty with utility and comfort. They are upholstered in gray broadcloth, which has an indistinct striping of lighter gray. The chairs are hung on frames of steel tubing so that they may be adjusted to reclining positions.

The floor covering is of jasper linoleum with carpeting down the center aisle. These are in the same tones of blue and gray as the walls.

The enthusiasm for travel by plane has given new impetus to interior decoration, but plane furnishing and decoration present peculiar problems. How may a plane be decorated so that it will be in harmony with its ever changing surroundings? How can a sense of space be achieved in a small interior?

While new ideas in colors and fabrics for the interiors of planes have caught the imagination of European designers, particularly German, for some time, Capt. Rickenbacker's plane represents the first outstanding attempt at plane interior decoration in the United States.

Fabric houses are making experiments in new materials especially adapted for use in airplanes. These are of rough nobby texture which catches the light and shadow and gives an effect of spaciousness.

Line is even more important than color in the decoration of airplanes. The strong, vivid note of the streamlined exterior must be maintained inside the plane, and for that reason professional skill is more necessary in decorating a plane than in decorating a house.

A business telegram signed "Husband" sent to a young woman office associate by W. W. Husband, Second Assistant Secretary of Labor, was the cause of brief embarrassment to the recipient. She is unmarried and the message was looked askance by an older woman friend who did not understand the executive's signature. All misunderstanding has been cleared up, however, with entertainment for all concerned as the only result.

Novarro Is Perfect Host As He Pours for Friends At Party in Press Club

Novarro has been away from his country for 17 years, but seems to have the warmth of feeling for his own land so characteristic of Mexicans.

Novarro made himself at home, mixing drinks and serving the enticing highly seasoned foods with informality that charmed the guests.

Mrs. C. S. Hamlin Reelected Head of Democratic Women

Secretary of Labor Perkins Becomes 28th Life Member of Club.

Mrs. Charles S. Hamlin was reelected president, and Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, introduced as the newest life member of the Woman's National Democratic Club at the club's eleventh annual meeting yesterday.

Miss Perkins is the twenty-eighth life member to be taken into the club. Among the other life members are Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mrs. John W. Davis, Daniel C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce, Bernard M. Baruch and Gov. Herbert Lehman of New York.

The club, which has 58 affiliated clubs throughout the Nation and which numbers hundreds of women, includes in its membership about half a dozen men, all of whom pay their dues regularly and occasionally use the lounge especially furnished for them at the clubhouse, 1526 New Hampshire avenue.

Activities yesterday began with the annual pilgrimage to the Washington Cathedral where a wreath was placed on the tomb of Woodrow Wilson. Mrs. Edward B. Meigs was chairman of the committee in charge.

A business meeting was held in the afternoon at which reports of committeees and of the board of governors were heard and officers elected.

The annual dinner last night was attended by about 150 guests. Representative Isabella Greenway, of Arizona, was the principal speaker Mrs. Hamlin presided. Others at the speakers' table were Mrs. George M. Eckels, Mrs. James J. Forrester and Miss Elizabeth Howry. Other guests included:

Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, Miss Grace Roper, Dr. and Mrs. Edward B. Meigs, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Keating, Mrs. James G. Field, Mrs. Benjamin Smith, Mrs. John A. Wells, Mr. and Mrs. C. I. Hendrickson, Mrs. Eugene Barrett, Miss Helen McCormick, Miss Helen J. Neville, Mrs. E. C. Brink, Miss B. Snyder.

Miss F. Coyle, Mrs. William L. Beale, Mrs. C. F. Taylor, Mrs. W. Kiblinger, Mrs. Winifred Artaud, Miss M. Williams, Miss S. Stewart, Mrs. A. M. Chichester, Mrs. E. W. Justice Adkins' Father Victim Of Cold at 85

Milton Tate Adkins, News Writer and Artist, Was Ardent Hiker.

Milton Tate Adkins, 85, father of Justice Jesse C. Adkins of the District Supreme Court, and for 40 years an employe of the Treasury Department, died yesterday at his residence, 1408 Manchester lane northwest. Mr. Adkins, noted for the landscapes he painted in oil, had been ill for two weeks.

Born in Eastern Tennessee in 1849, Mr. Adkins as a youth witnessed the Civil War although too young to enlist. His father served in the Union Army. After his preliminary education, Mr. Adkins began to read law in Eastern Tennessee, and devoted much time to adjusting claims for Confederate veterans.

While engaged in this work he met Miss Sarah Elizabeth Walker, daughter of a wealthy wholesale merchant. They were married in 1874.

About 1883 Mr. Adkins and his family moved to Washington, where he entered the Treasury. Previously he had partially supported himself by his oil paintings, most of which were skillfully executed landscapes. He continued to paint almost to the time of his death, although he never had taken a lesson.

Mr. Adkins was retired from the Treasury ten years ago, and then devoted his time to newspaper work, an interest which he acquired when first he came to Washington. For years he was special correspondent for Tennessee newspapers.

Despite his advanced years, Mr. Adkins retained an almost youthful vigor. He was a familiar figure to his neighbors, striding sturdily on hikes in all sorts of weather. The subzero temperatures and snowfalls last month failed to keep him indoors, and during a hike two weeks ago he contracted a bad cold, which weakened him and led to his death.

Mr. Adkins is survived by two other sons in addition to Justice Adkins—William S. Adkins, chief clerk, criminal division, of the District Supreme Court, and James C. Adkins, of Alexandria. He also leaves a daughter with whom he lived, Mrs. G. Tinsley Creech, wife of a prominent Washington physician; three grandsons, three granddaughters and two great-grandchildren.

Friends Five Defeats Landon With Rally

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Launching an attack in the second half after trailing for three periods, Friends School basket ball team eked out a 23-to-20 decision over the Landon High School's quintet, of Washington, for the eleventh victory of the season at the former's gymnasium today.

With its offense failing to click in the first two frames, the Capital five pecked away at the basket to gain a 5-to-1 advantage in the first quarter. Becker, Landon center, tallied two field goals at the outset, and from then on the visiting five never was headed until the final period when Friends put on a spurt that annexed the victory.

Dartmouth Appoints Donchess End Coach

Hanover, N. H., Feb. 28 (AP).—Dr. Joseph C. Donchess, former All-American end at Pittsburgh University and now a member of the staff at the Deaconess Hospital, Boston, today was named end coach of the Dartmouth varsity football team.

Announcement of the selection of Donchess was made by Harry R. Heneage, supervisor of athletics. Donchess will work under Dartmouth's new head coach, Earl Blaik. He was end coach at Pitt from the conclusion of his playing career in 1929 until last spring, and is the second Pitt coach to join the Blaik staff. The other was Andrew F. Gustafson, who was chosen as the new back field coach.

Bill Has National Aim, Says Whitney

Whitney Calls Securities Bill Surrender to U. S. Control

Thomas B. Gay, a Richmond lawyer. Whitney had discussed only one specific objection when adjournment was taken until today. He will be further cross-examined by Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel.

Pecora, as he did in a brief way yesterday, intends to confront Whitney with some of the alleged evils and abuses uncovered by the Senate committee in its long inquiry into stock market practices. One of the committee's investigating staff described yesterday's questioning of the stock exchange head as "only an exploratory incision."

The specific objection raised by Whitney to the bill was directed to the section compelling brokers and dealers in securities to require in marginal accounts 80 per cent of the lowest price at which the security has sold in the preceding three years, or 40 per cent of the market price, whichever is higher.

He argued that was "not a marginal requirement at all, because it requires margin equal to 150 per cent and would eliminate all speculative transactions from the security markets, with the result that the security would cease to exist."

"If that is the desire in the social interest or philosophy, as has been asserted here, that end will be accomplished by this provision," he added.

No Curb on Speculation.

Pecora read to the witness from a speech of his predecessor as president of the exchange, Edward H. H. Simmons, to the effect that during the first six months of 1929, the marginal requirements of members of the exchange averaged 40 per cent on the market price or 65 per cent against debit accounts. Simmons termed these requirements "the highest in history," Pecora said.

"Yet these marginal requirements did not have the effect of breaking the 1929 speculative movement," Pecora asserted, and Whitney agreed that was so, adding, however, that elimination of speculation would not end booms and panics.

Several times during Whitney's narrative of how the exchange authorities had undertaken to correct abuses and stop efforts to "unfairly influence the market," he was hard-pressed to answer questions put to him by Pecora and Senator Edward P. Costigan (Democrat), Colorado.

Whitney several times met questions with the reply that "well, that is a difficult question to answer," or "I don't think I could answer that." He urged that specific incidents be cited to him when asked what he would regard as actions "to unfairly influence market prices"—a phrase he used in his statement.

He contended that each "case must rest on its own bottom." Senator Costigan asked whether this meant that restrictive rules could not be made in advance to cover unethical practices. Whitney said he had in mind something like the development of the English common law.

"Is it your opinion that the formulation of such rules must await as long as it took for the development of English common law?" asked Senator Costigan.

"No, not nearly that long," was the reply.

Profit Rule Draws Interest.

The committee showed an interest in a rule of the exchange barring its members from profiting in or financing "manipulative operations" on the market. This was promulgated on February 13, five days after the introduction of the pending securities bill, and on the eve of the Senate's inquiry into pools in alcohol stocks last spring and summer.

Whitney said that was a coincidence. He said the rule had been under consideration for a long time. This was not unusual, he added, since some rules were considered years before they were promulgated.

"What arguments were made against this rule directed at manipulative operations?" asked Senator Robert Bulkley (Democrat), Ohio.

"I do not recall that any were," replied Whitney.

"It took so long to decide to enforce the rule that I thought there must have been opposition to it," dryly observed the Ohioan.

Pecora questioned Whitney at some length about the committee's findings regarding a pool in the alcoholic stocks. After the questioning had gone on for a few minutes, Whitney protested he had not come prepared to discuss that specific instance, but to give his views regarding the bill.

During that part of the questioning, however, Pecora brought out that the auditing staff of the stock exchange, after investigating the alcohol stock operations, had reported in two letters to him that it could not find any evidence of "material deliberative improprieties," and that no pool existed.

"I do not wish to reflect on the good faith or the ability of your examiners," Pecora asserted, "but they failed to reveal facts found by the examiners for this committee in less time and with fewer facilities at their disposal."

Compared to Prohibition.

Whitney compared the proposed securities act with the National prohibition law. His argument was that the bill was "a full brother" to the prohibition act, that human nature could not change, that abuses could not be eliminated by passing laws and that adoption of the bill would send those who wished to speculate to "bootleggers, or, as we call them, bucket shops." He said there had been a recent increase in the number of the latter.

In his formal statement, Whitney contended that the pending bill would give to the Federal Trade Commission power "not only to regulate, but actually to administer" the business of security exchanges. Moreover, he added, it would vest in the commission "control of corporations regardless of whether or not they are engaged in interstate commerce."

Regulation of security markets by statute and in minute detail was characterized by the witness as "impossible of accomplishment." In assuming the duty of regulating and managing the exchanges, Whitney continued, the Federal Government would be responsible for their operation.

He contended that giving authority to the trade commission to deal with credit "is in conflict with the control already vested in the Federal Reserve System and its member banks." The proposal, he said, did "violence to the principle on which our banking system is founded."

Whitney insisted that the marginal provisions would have the immediate effect of forcing liquidation of a substantial part of debit balances, and asserted "there is no assurance that markets subject to the restrictions contained in the bill could absorb the volume of this liquidation."

"No good that can be anticipated from these provisions," he added, "will compensate for the harm they are certain to cause."

He suggested a National incorporation law applicable to all companies engaging in interstate commerce as the remedy to cure corporate abuses and lack of uniformity in accounting practices, instead of being dealt with indirectly by a delegation of power to an administrative commission.

Given Absolute Power.

Whitney argued that "under the guise of establishing sound corporate practices, the Federal Trade Commission will be vested with absolute power to take over the management of all corporations whose shares are listed on exchange." This he termed a nationalization of business and industry.

In conclusion, he recited again the stock exchange's proposal for seven-man regulatory board constituted by Federal law to control and regulate the exchanges. Such a body as he suggested, he said, would result in coordination between banking and the security business.

Earlier in the day, E. Burd Grubb, president of the New York Curb Exchange, urged before the House committee adoption of the Whitney proposal of regulation. Gay, in arguing to the Senate committee that the pending bill was unconstitutional, said he believed the Whitney proposal was likewise. Pecora chided both Gay and Whitney for proposing an unconstitutional measure to Congress. Whitney said the exchange would in good faith support its own plan if adopted.

St. John's Defeats Silver Spring, 22-19

McHugh's Basket Clinches in Seesaw Game.

St. John's Prep took a 22-to-19 thriller from the Silver Spring tossers yesterday on the former's court.

It was a seesaw battle throughout, the first quarter found the score tied 6-6 after the Springers had forged to a 4-1 lead. The eventual winners led by 10-9 at half time and 16-12 at the end of the third period. The Johnnies were pressed in the final period when Wolfe put the Takomans within a point of tying the score but McHugh's basket in the dying moments clinched the game.

Whitty and Koepnick divided scoring honors for the winners, while Wolfe was most aggressive for the visitors.

EuropeansPlan Buffalo Chase

Continent's Last Wild Herd in Ukraine to Be Rounded Up.

Paris (U.P.).—Steps are to be taken to round up the last wild herd of European buffalo.

The average Continental schoolboy would be as surprised as the average American to know that wild bison actually roam the plains of Europe. Likewise, it is not well known that these animals once ran free in great numbers west of the Urals.

The last wild herd is in the Ukraine, according to a survey published recently. These animals are survivors of a great herd which as late as 1913 inhabited the Lithuanian forests of Bielovege.

In addition to the Ukranian herd, whose numbers are estimated at between 70 and 125, there are as many, or more, bison in captivity. There are 27 on a ducal estate in Poland, 12 in the park of Count Arnin in Prussia; as many in the Prussian government preserve, Hanover; 75 or more on the lands of the Prince of Plessis, Upper Silesia, and four or five in private parks in Sweden.

The European bison is smaller than its American cousin and has thinner, shorter hair and a more rounded head. It is as well armed with horns, however, and was regarded by the peoples of the Middle Ages as particularly vicious.

Sea Menacing German Island

Heligoland Is Slowly Being Washed Away by Ocean.

Hamburg, (U.P.).—The island of Heligoland is crumbling constantly.

Almost every year, during the stormy season, thousands of cubic meters of rock fall into the sea which incessantly is gnawink away at the soft standstone strata of the island.

The latest large slide occurred early in December, when, following a heavy gale, 6,000 cubic meters of rock dropped into the sea. Since 1925, approximately 30,000 cubic meters thus have been eaten away.

Heligoland which guards the entrance into the Elbe River, came back under German sovereignty in 1890. Then the Kaiser's government obtained the island from the British by way of barter for the island of Zanzibar in East Africa.

Immediately after reobtaining Heligoland, the Germans started to construct heavy concrete ramparts to protect the island against the corrosion by sea. These works have cost the Prussion state treasury a fortune.

Nevertheless even these elaborate fortifications proved ineffective to check the corrosion. Now the Heligolanders demand that their home rock should be strengthened further. They have suggested that this be done in the scope of the government's program for the procuring of work for the jobless.

Congressmen Resent Modern Office Gadgets

Elevator Inquiry Gets All Tangled Up With Complaints.

Members of Congress prefer the good old-fashioned ways of living to the modern new-fangled gadgets with which the new House Office Building is equipped, they revealed yesterday at a hearing before the House Rules Committee.

Although the hearing had been called on the Kramer resolution to authorize a Congressional investigation of the ultramodern elevator system in the new House Office Building, it soon broadened its scope.

Electric clocks were denounced because their hands jumped just before the hour as they are being set and the composition floors were attacked on the ground that they peel.

The Rules Committee finally became so confused that it postponed action on the elevator inquiry until today.

Experts from the Bureau of Standards insisted that the elevator equipment is perfectly safe and said recent accidents probably were due to faulty operation.

Edward Brown, superintendent of the building, admitted, however, that three accidents had been called to his attention, the most recent one being the fall of a cab with Miss Reba Doughton, daughter of Representative Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, aboard.

Mr. Brown said his engineers had made an inspection following the latter accident, but had been unable find out what had happened.

There has been considerable complaint, he said, against the elevators, which are operated by buttons, because they do not level at floor stops properly.

While he was on the stand members of Congress began criticizing other new devices in the building, but Brown refused to become involved.

Dr. James C. Lloyd, chief of the safety standards division at the Bureau of Standards, and W. H. Seaquist, formerly connected with the elevator research division of the bureau, insisted that the new elevators are adequately protected against serious accidents.

Bank Bandits' $4,730 Loot Found Here

Proves Mellins Planned Robberies in D. C., Police Assert.

Hamilton National Box Yields Cash; 1 of Pair Asked Job There.

A large share of the loot in the Needham, Mass., bank hold-up in which two policemen were slain was recovered yesterday with finding of $4,730 in a safety deposit box at the Hamilton National Bank here.

Police said this clinched their belief that Irving Mellin and his brother Mertin, alleged to have staged the Massachusetts robbery, had planned to operate in Washington. It was learned that one of the brothers had even sought a job as messenger in the Hamilton National Bank.

After finding the loot here, police pointed to the finding of a veritable arsenal at Union Station Sunday as the result of a baggage check being found on one of the Mellin brothers, who were captured by New York and Boston police after a gun battle in a New York hotel.

$500 Bills Identified.

Bringing a slip with the number of the deposit box scrawled on it, along with the names of "Mert Nelson" and "Brudge Nelson," Lieut. John F. Stokes, Boston police official, arrived here yesterday. The slip had been found on one of the Mellin brothers.

United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage granted permission for opening of the deposit box. Accompanied by Assistant United States Attorney John W. Fihelly and Detective Sergts. Floyd Truscott and Richard Cox, Lieut. Stokes went to the Hamilton Bank.

Two $500 bills were immediately identified by Lieut. Stokes as being part of the money taken from the Needham bank. Numerous marks made by bank employes as well as serial numbers aided in the identification. Serial numbers of the rest of the currency were sent to Boston for checking.

Sixteenth Street Room Visited.

Shortly after the deposit box was opened, Washington police with Lieut. Stokes, obtained entry to a room at 2008 Sixteenth street, northwest, where it was learned Mellins stayed several days beginning February 18.

Two suit cases containing a lavish outfit of young woman's clothing were found, including seven pairs of fashionable shoes, several ensembles, dresses and a quantity of "slave" bracelets and other inexpensive jewelry.

A letter was found in the room, addressed to a New York woman. Written in a feminine hand, it appeared to be a request for a book on "Charm and Poise."

Detective Sergt. A. D. Mansfield said he learned the Mellins had lived at a downtown hotel here at least several days prior to their taking the Sixteenth street room.

Bandits Knew Jiu-Jitsu.

W. J. Waller, vice president and cashier of the Hamilton Bank, yesterday told police, after being shown pictures of the Mellin brothers, that one of the men had asked him for a job as a messenger or truck driver for the bank.

"I thought the man had been drinking," said Waller, "until I noticed there was no odor of alcohol on his breath. I then decided he was a narcotic addict."

Lieut. Stokes yesterday said the Mellin brothers, with Abraham Faber, Boston radio repair man, would be charged with the slaying of the two policemen at the Needham bank.

The Boston officer said the men were "amateurs" with unlimited nerve. They were absolutely fearless, he said, and possessed unusual physical prowess. Both are jiu jitsu experts, he declared.

Blamed for Series of Crimes.

Police recalled last night that a sub-machine gun, two sawed-off shotguns, five pistols, tear gas bombs and masks, and plenty of ammunition were found in the two satchels checked at Union Station.

Captured in New York with the Mellins was pretty Norma Mellin, wife of Merton and the daughter of a Nadick, Mass., clergyman. I wtas she, police said, who told of the arms cache at Union Station here.

Numerous other crimes are laid to the brothers by New England police, Lieut. Stokes said, including a $2,600 mail robbery at South Station, Boston; the $35,000 holdup of the Brookline Trust Co., Brookline, Mass., and several slayings.

Headache Holds Up Lorton Graft Inquiry

Swanson to Attend Session of Cabinet

Early Return to Duties Is Foreseen.

Early return of Secretary of the Navy Swanson to active direction of the Navy Department was indicated yesterday when it was learned that the Secretary plans to attend his first Cabinet meeting in two months Friday.

Rumors of Secretary Swanson's retirement have continued despite denials by him and Navy Department officials insisting that the Secretary's condition was steadily responding to treatment in Naval Hospital. Observers have gone so far as to mention Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, former physician to President Wilson, as his probable successor.

The Secretary has been taking daily motor trips about the Capital and has been conducting Navy Department business during the last few weeks from his hospital bed, Navy Department officials reported.

District Has Coldest February And Snow'll Bow March In

After compiling figures which made February the coldest on record here, the Weather Bureau capped the climax yesterday by predicting possible snow for the District today.

Here's how February broke all-time cold records here:

The mean temperature for the month at Washington was 24.6 degrees, surpassing the low of 26.2 degrees recorded in 1895.

Yesterday was the latest date in any year (on record) on which below-zero temperature has occurred in Washington. The former record was February 24.

The month was the coldest February, in mean temperature, for the District, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Delaware, New Jersey, New York and the New England States, with possible exception of a few scattered localities.

Below Zero Twice.

Twice the mercury dipped below zero—on the 9th to 6½ degrees, and yesterday to 1 degree.

The reason for the unprecedented record, as given by the Weather Bureau, is that the surges of cold air from the North come down "fresh" upon the East.

This cold air, instead of following the normal course into the Dakotas and Montana and then drifting East, losing its severity en route, dropped straight down upon the East with full severity from the Hudson Bay region.

There was little cheer in the Weather Bureau's forecast for today. Although a mass of warm air is advancing from the South, it may mean more snow, the forecaster said.

This warm air will arrive this afternoon and when it meets the cold air here there will be snow at this point of contact.

However, the weather man holds some hope that the precipitation will be rain instead of snow if the rising temperature of the morning goes sufficiently far above freezing.

But whether it be snow or rain, today will be a blustery advent for March, despite the fact that the temperature will probably rise several degrees above zero.

14 Above this Morning.

The coldest to be recorded this morning will be 14 degrees, 15 degrees above yesterday's reading, which thickened the ice which sheets the Potomac as far as Chesapeake Bay, the Weather Bureau believes.

Approximately 3,500 men, including 2,500 CWA workers, continued the attack on the snow in downtown streets. District officials estimated that Sunday's snow removal would cost $50,000.

Although the Weather Bureau's official reading was 1 degree below zero yesterday morning, suburban thermometers went several degrees below. At Hagerstown, Md., a minus 20 degrees was recorded.

Laws Will Retire From Navy Today

'Frisco Commander Ends 47-Year Service.

Retirement for age will close 47 years of active Naval service for Rear Admiral George W. Laws, commandant of the Twelfth Naval District, San Francisco, today.

Admiral Laws maintained a Washington residence for several years while serving in the office of Naval Operations and as a member of the Naval Examining Board in 1921.

He was in command of the Michigan during the World War and was awarded the Navy Cross for his service. He also saw service in the Spanish American War, serving on the Justin operating in Cuban and South Atlantic waters.

Admiral Laws was promoted to his present rank in June, 1925. He will be succeeded by Rear Admiral Thomas J. Senn, commander of the base force.

Relief Bodies Deny Six Left WithoutFood

Aid Promised for Family on Outskirts of City Reported Starving.

Merchant Says He Tried for Months to Get Help for Group.

Reports that a family of six is starving because its members have been refused food by the Board of Welfare's emergency relief division were stoutly denied last night when the case was brought to the division's attention by The Post.

The family, consisting of a middle-aged couple and their four grown sons, lives in a ramshackle house about half a mile north of American University. Three of the sons said they registered for CWA jobs two months ago, but have received no work.

At the same time they applied for jobs a request was made for coal and food from the relief division according to a hardware merchant who has interested himself in the case. When there was no response, meals had to be cut down to one a day. Fuel was obtained cutting down trees.

Last Saturday no food remained, except for a few chickens which the family was raising, and a neighborhood grocer with whom the family has dealt for years donated enough bread and meat to last over the week-end.

No Action for Month.

The hardware storekeeper, who asked that his identity not be divulged, said that after a month had passed without the family receiving either food, coal or employment, he tried several times without success to reach Leroy A. Halbert, emergency relief administrator, by telephone.

Finally, after five weeks' effort, a case worker was sent out and gave the family an $8 food order. She promised, according to the family, to pay the rent, provide fuel and continue with the food orders.

Asked for her side of the story last night, the relief worker declared she told them they would be properly taken care of if a member of the family came to headquarters at John Marshall place and C street and filled out necessary vouchers. This has not been done, she said.

Halbert did not deny that this and other needy families eligible for Federal relief may not be getting the attention to which they are entitled, explaining that his office is behind in its work, although staff members are working overtime to serve 16,000 indigent families.

He said steps would be taken immediately to look into this particular case. The worker who contacted them previously will visit the family again today, she asserted.

In contrast to the plight of the six Tenleytown residents is the relatively comfortable position of the father's brother. He is receiving $1.10 an hour as a CWA carpenter, the merchant stated, and at the same time receiving food regularly from the emergency relief division.

Halbert admitted that approximately 4,000 civil works employes are getting coal and food doles. Many of them may work only one or two days a week, he said, so that their small and irregular wages are not sufficient to take them off relief rolls.

Gambling Case Halted Pending Fugitive Arrest

Police Seek Man Alleged to Be Partner in Raided Resort.

The District's drive against organized gambling in Washington was further intensified in Police Court yesterday when the trial of Victor Juliano, 24, of 2105 Fourth street northeast, charged with setting up a gaming resort, was continued until March 15 because, according to officials, police are seeking "another principal" in the case.

Juliano appeared with 30 witnesses, arrested in a raid on an establishment at 915 Ninth street northwest late Tuesday, before Judge John P. McMahon.

His bond of $2,000 was continued, as were the bonds of $100 each, set for the witnesses, all of whom were present. Juliano was a Government witness in the shooting of Joseph Nalley, alleged "bad actor" and "small-time gambler," in the Wunder Bar Club last November.

Harry Whelan is the attorney representing Juliano. The identity of the other man sought was not divulged, but it is understood a warrant had been obtained for his arrest. He is alleged to have been Juliano's partner in the operation of the Ninth street resort.

When Lieut. Little's vice squad swooped down on the establishment Tuesday, the patrons fled over a back roof into a nearby Chinese laundry, where they were captured by detectives.

A three-section racing result blackboard and other gaming paraphenalia were confiscated before waiting patrol wagons whisked the prisoners to headquarters.

Baltimore Rotary At Meeting Here

Joint Session Held by Service Clubs.

Traveling by special train, a group of Baltimore Rotarians came to Washington yesterday to join the Rotary Club here in a luncheon meeting at the Willard Hotel.

The meeting was called to order by Harrison Howe, president of the Washington club, who turned the chair over to James Bernay, president of Baltimore. The guest speaker was Capt. John Logan, of Baltimore.

The importance of fellowship and good will in business recovery was stressed by Howe in his address. Among special guests were Ignatius Bjorlee, past governor of the thirty-fourth Rotary district; Edward Johnson, past vice president of the district; William Schneidereith, vice president, and Thomas Hanck, secretary, of the Baltimore club.

Blackfriars to Aid Ladies of Charity

Aiding a campaign by the Ladies of Charity for funds to buy shoes for the children of Washington needy, the Blackfriars' Guild will give a repeat performance of "Catherine the Valiant" in St. Dominic's Auditorium, Sixth and F streets southwest, Monday night.

The play is based on the life of Catherine of Siena, the Joan of Arc of Italy of the fourteenth century, and was written by the Rev. Urban Nagle, a Washington Dominican priest. Requests for shoes far beyond the 315 pairs distributed by the Ladies of Charity last year have been received, necessitating a large fund. The campaign is in charge of Mrs. Chester J. McGuire.

D. C. Relief Need Is Put At 9 Million

$1,300,000 Figure in Estimate to Congress Hit by Allen.

Cites Growing Demands as CWA Reduction Is Ordered.

The District will require $9,000,000 for relief work in the fiscal year 1935, and the figure of $1,300,000 in the estimates sent to Congress is totally inadequate, Commissioner George E. Allen announced last night. At the same time he declared that families are being added to relief rolls at the rate of 800 a week.

His estimate is based on a study of relief problems he has made in the past few days. His announcement came a few hours after he received instructions from Federal CWA headquarters to reduce the number of civil works employes from 13,000 to 9,000 during March. This is expected to add more families to the direct relief list.

From July 1 to February 1, Allen said, the District spent $5,844,222 for various forms of relief, exclusive of PWA, and it is estimated that from March 1 to June 30 another $3,980,000 will have been spent, making a total of $9,824,222 for the fiscal year 1934. On February 21 there were 16,835 cases on direct relief and 11,878 cases which had been transferred from direct relief to CWA pay rolls.

The expenditures include money spent on civil works and civil works service projects, which were paid from District funds; Federal grants to the District for emergency relief, the District appropriation of $1,300,000 for emergency relief and Federal grants for road improvements.

Plans Speeded.

Plans for handling the unemployment situation when the CWA is ended are being formulated by Commissioner Allen, Leroy A. Halbert, director of emergency relief; David Ruml, director of the public employment center; Capt. Howard F. Clark, executive officer of the District CWA; and Arch Mandell, field investigator for the Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

This group plans to erect a new building to house the emergency relief headquarters. The present headquarters at John Marshall place and C street northwest has been found inadequate. Brick for the new center is to be made at Occoquan and the construction work will be done by CWA workers.

House Door Man, 91, Suffers Heart Attack

Walt Mason, Himself

The Bad Die Young.

That cynic is mistaken who said, "The good die young." The truth he had forsaken when he employed his tongue; the good man walks serenely on virtue's shining path; he lives devoutly, cleanly, and often takes a bath. He's known by all the peelers as being good and true, distinguished from the heelers who knock the law askew. And as he daily trudges to buy meat for his pup, he's known by all the judges as being right side up. He always is a stranger to vice and racketeers, involving death and danger, untimely shrouds and biers. He is not known to gamble, "for marbles or for kale, at night he does not ramble along the night club trail. He spends his evenings sanely with wife and children five, while rounders, wildly, vainly, pretend they are alive. Meanwhile, the vicious voters, the hoodlum's boast and pride, are gathered up in motors, and taken for a ride. They die before they're knowing the chill of age's grip; they die, and at their going, we say, "Well, let them skip. We liked not the demeanor of all such vicious groups; the world is so much cleaner since they have looped the loops." The good man wisely dodges the haunts of vice and sin, the den where evil lodges, and all the snares therein; and so he eats his dinners and travels with the just, when all the wretched sinners are dead and gone to dust.

McGraw Laid To Rest in Baltimore

Diamond Leader's Body Is Placed in Vault; Services Brief.

Oriole Teammates Are Among Pallbearers; Terry Is Present.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 28 (AP).—John Joseph McGraw was laid to rest in Baltimore late today, brought back by relatives and friends to the city where the "Little Napoleon" of many a baseball war started his major league career more than two score years ago.

The body of the great diamond leader, who died Sunday in a New Rochelle, N. Y., hospital, was placed in a vault in the New Cathedral Cemetery for burial in the spring. A brief service was held at the cemetery.

Two hundred admirers, headed by a delegation of Elks, met the body at the railroad station following funeral services in New York, and escorted it through mushy streets and subfreezing temperature to the cemetery.

Thirty in Party.

A party of 30, including Mrs. McGraw, William H. Terry, who succeeded the "Little Napoleon" as manager of the New York Giants; Charles A. Stoneham, owner of the Giants; Judge Emil Fuchs, owner of the Boston Braves, and Christy Mathewson, jr., accompanied the body to Baltimore.

Six members of the Baltimore Elks Lodge, of which McGraw was a member, acted as pallbearers. Tey were Ned Hanlon, who managed the Baltimore Orioles when McGraw played with them in the 90's; Joe Kelly, a former Oriole teammate and roommate; John Nixon, John T. Leach, Dan Sullivan and Pat O'Malley.

The services at the cemetery were read by the Rev. Timothy B. Kenney, pastor of All-Saints Catholic Church. The Rev. Father Kenney was a friend of the former Giants' manager and was assistant pastor of St. Anne's Catholic Church where he was married.

New York Pays Its Final Tribute

NEW YORK, Feb. 28 (AP).—New Yorkers, to whom his name and baseball were synonymous, today crowded St. Patrick's Cathedral to its doors to pay final tribute to John J. McGraw, manager of the New York Giants for 30 years, who died Sunday after a week's illness.

From all walks of life they came through the snow and the cold to listen to the calm, sonorous Catholic ritual for the dead, and stand bareheaded in near-zero weather, while a hearse bore his body toward a train for Baltimore and final interment there.

Men who had fought with and against him during turbulent career as player, manager and magnate of baseball, personages of the stage, screen, the bar and official city life made common cause with bleacher fans to do him final honors.

Hundreds Stand in Cold.

The great stone church on Fifth avenue was filled and hundreds more stood in the cold outside at 10 a. m., when the funeral cortege, under motorcycle escort, arrived from suburban Pelham Manor, where his body had lain in state in the home to which he retired two years ago to live out his days removed from the strife of the diamond.

Banked on either side of the entryway as the big front doors swung open to let in the funeral party were the honorary pallbearers—William H. Terry, to whom McGraw turned over the management of the Giants in 1932 when his health first began to fail; George M. Cohan, DeWolff Hopper and Sam Harris of the theater; John McCormack, representatives of all the National League clubs, Hans Lobert, old Giant player; newspapermen who had covered many a Giant training camp, former Police Commissioner Edward P. Mulrooney, and a half a hundred others.

Color Guard Leads Way.

A color guard from American Legion Post 307 preceded the casket into the church, and following it the mourners. Mrs. McGraw, her face veiled, was supported by her brother, Frank Sindall, and her nephew, Sindall Schuyler. Directly behind were McGraw's two sisters and only surviving close relatives, Mrs. Frank Gray, of New Canaan, Conn., and Mrs. James F. Donnelly, of Camillus, N. Y. Mrs. Christy Mathewson, widow of McGraw's greatest pitcher and a close family friend for over 30 years, was a member of the party, as were Charles A. Stoneham, president, and Edward T. Brannick, assistant secretary, of the Giants.

The Mass concluded, the Rev. Henry Hammer, assistant rector of the Cathedral, delivered a eulogy in which he said:

"John McGraw, probably more than any other man, taught the youth of this land to play well. Truly, he is one of baseball's immortals."

Father Mulry blessed the body, the organ again softly boomed through the great, vaulted church and the casket was carried out the door into the brilliant noonday sunshine and swiftly borne away.

Helen Jacobs Wins Jamaica Net Final

Defeats Dorothy Round, 64-61, Before 6,000.

Kingston, Jamaica, Feb. 28 (U.P.). Helen Jacobs, United States women's champion, today defeated Dorothy Round, England's No. 1 player, 6—4, 6—1, in the final of the Jamaica tennis championships. A crowd of 6,000 watched the match.

This victory augured well for America's chances this year in Wightman Cup play against England. Last year Miss Jacobs and the English girl met three times. Miss Round won at Wimbledon, but the California player won in the Wightman Cup matches and in the National Championships at Forest Hills.

St. Petersburg Open Is Won By Runyan

Puts Together 69 and 72 to Lead Mehlhorn by 3 Strokes.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Feb. 28 (AP).—Paul Runyan, diminutive professional from Westchester, N. Y., won the St. Petersburg Open Golf championship today with a par-blistering card of 141, putting together two 18-hole cards of 69 and 72.

He won by 3 strokes from "Wild Bill" Mehlhorn, veteran professional from Louisville, Ky., who equaled par with two rounds of 72. Bracketed in third place behind Mehlhorn were five professionals, Walter Hagen, of Detroit, 74—71—145; Johnny Revolta, of Milwaukee, 69—76—145, Bob Shave, of St. Petersburg and Cleveland, 72—73—145; Ky Lafoon, of Denver, Colo., 74—71—145, and Harry Cooper, of Chicago, 70—75—145.

Mrs. Haynes Is Defeated in Florida

Capital Star Loses Opening Match to Mrs. Hill by 5 and 4 Margin.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Mrs. J. Marvin Haynes, of Washington, D. C., failed to survive the first round of match play in the annual Florida East Coast Women's Golf championship on St. Augustine links today. She succumbed to Mrs. Opal S. Hill, of Kansas City, Mo., medalist by 5 up and 4 to play. Mrs. Haynes was completely outplayed by her Missouri rival on the first half, and she turned with a 4-hole disadvantage.

The Washington woman played well on the return journey, but Mrs. Hill's wide margin was too much for her to overcome. All favorites came through successfully in the title division. Miss Helen Hicks, former National champion, trounced Mrs. Charles R. Harbaugh, of Cleveland, by 7 up and 5 to play.

Miss Maureen Orcutt, of Englewood, N. J., runner-up for the American crown in 1927, disposed of Mrs. L. K. Zech, of Niles, Ill., by 5 and 4. Miss Orcutt is out to gain permanent possession of the Mrs. W. R. Keenan, Jr., Cup, emblematic of the Florida East Coast championship. She previously won the title in 1931 and 1932.

Miss Kathleen Garnham, of England, holder of the French title, and defending champion in the current competition, put out Miss Mary Rogers, of Jacksonville, Fla., by 3 and 1.

Boy Scouts Conquer Alexandria Flashes

Alexandria, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.). Boy Scout Troop 137 defeated the Alexander Flashes at the Armory Hall here today, 32 to 20. The Flashes were no match for the well-drilled Scout team, which was leading, 24 to 6, at the half.

The stars for the Scouts were Hemmersly, Robinson and Mudd. Gorman, of the Flashes, played best for the losers.

Covington High Wins.

Covington, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Smarting under the defeat suffered at the hands of an underrated Clifton Forge team last week, the Covington High School basket ball quintet gained ample revenge here last night, defeating their old rivals by a score of 26 to 12 in one of the roughest games seen here in many seasons.

Conference Court Play To Open

Raleigh Is Host at 13th Annual Tournament Starting Today.

Maryland Faces W. & L. in First Encounter; Big Crowds Due.

RALEIGH, Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Raleigh paused for breath tonight before the opening of the thirteenth annual Southern Conference basket ball tournament here tomorrow.

For weeks local officials have worked to lay plans for what they believe will be the most successful tournament in tournament history, and today they cleared the decks for the fireworks the remainder of the week.

Arrival of the out of State entries this afternoon made Raleigh take on a pre-tournament air. The three Virginia teams—Washington and Lee, V. M. I. and Virginia—arrived by bus, and South Carolina and Maryland pulled in by train.

All of the teams will be quartered in the Sir Walter Raleigh Hotel.

Duke, Carolina to Arrive.

Duke and Carolina, two of North Carolina's three entries, will arrive around noon tomorrow. State, host ot the tournament, has no transportation worries. The Memorial Auditorium—scene of the games—is only a couple of miles from its own gymnasium.

Odds are still heavily in favor of the South Carolina Gamecocks, defending champions, despite reports that Dana Henderson, center, will be unable to play. Henderson was stricken with mumps last week, but is expected to be in the starting line-up tomorrow night.

South Carolina will meet North Carolina State's Red Terrors in the final of tomorrow's first-round games. The tilt will begin at 8:15 and is expected to draw the largest crowd of the first day of play.

Terps Oppose W. and L.

The first of tomorrow's four games will begin at 3 o'clock in the afternoon with Maryland meeting Washington and Lee. Duke and V. M. I. will take the floor immediately afterward.

The first of the two night games will pit North Carolina with Virginia at 7 o'clock. State will attempt to check the Gamecocks in the nightcap feature.

Semifinal games will be played Friday night, beginning at 8 o'clock. The championship game is to begin at 8:30 Saturday night.

Advance ticket sales were reported fine today and capacity crowds of approximately 4,000 are expected to view each of the four sessions.

LaSalle Five Downs Beall High, 42 to 21

Frostburg, Md., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Beall High School's court team battled LaSalle Institute, of Cumberland, on even terms for 20 minutes, but was unable to keep up the pace, and the Cumberland cagers chalked up a 42-to-21 victory in a Western Maryland Interscholastic League contest.

The banishment of Sittig and Llewellyn on personal fouls weakened Beall in the third period, and when the quarter ended LaSalle held the long end of a 33-to-20 score.

Joe Kelley, with 11 points, and Jimmie Garlitz, with 9, were LaSalle's leading scorers, while Warner accounted for eight of Beall's points.

4 Boxing Bouts Slated At Danville Tomorrow

Danville, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Four boxing bouts will be offered here in the armory by the American Legion on Friday.

Rex King, of Wilmington, Del., is scheduled to go ten rounds with Jack Lockhart, of Henry County. Joe Litton, of Cleveland, is matched with Lonnie Blackwelder, of Salisbury, for ten rounds and Joe Britt, of Richmond, will meet Tony the Greek, of Uniontown, Pa., in a six-round go. Kid Cristic is matched with Jimmy Pattisal as the opening event of six rounds.

Cambridge Beats Oxford.

Cambridge, Feb. 28 (AP).—Cambridge scored its first victory over Oxford in lacrosse in 23 years today, winning by the margin of one goal, 7—6. Oxford previously won the annual game without interruption from 1911 through 1933.

Londos Is Back On D. C. Mat Tonight

Seeks to Revive Interest in Facing Malcewicz at Auditorium.

WHENEVER the local rassling game gets wobbly on its feet, becomes emaciated, and seems to lose its "it" with the cash customers, Promoter Joe Turner calls in "Doctor" James Londos, the great Greek physician, whose mere appearance seems to make the patient robust and immediately to restore his box office appeal.

"Doc" Londos usually has to be called in about eight times a year and he makes his second 1934 visit at the Auditorium tonight. And, if the prescription he doles out does not do the work, the mat game is just the same as dead, for Londos draws Joe Malcewicz as his consultant and this pair should do one of the best jobs ever seen here.

They also will be aided and abetted in their efforts by "Kernal" Jimmy Lake, who will keep the fans advised of the progress of the Carnera-Loughran title fight at Miami.

Malcewicz Giant Killer.

Londos is recognized as world champion in about one-fifth of the United States, while Malcewicz is recognized as a giant killer throughout the entire length and breadth of this great land. For 19 years, Malcewicz has specialized as a dope-upsetter in the rassle world, and he promises to do one of his best jobs tonight.

It would be one of those "when Greek meets Greek" affairs but for the fact that Malcewicz is a Pole, but it should be a great bout anyway. Both are fast, clever, rough and colorful and the dope points to Malcewicz as being the best foe Londos has been asked to meet here, not even excepting Ray Steele.

Sammy Stein, the reformed movie actor, who held Jumping Joe Savoldi to a draw in New York Tuesday night, battles Rude Rudy Dusek in the semifinal and this fracas, too, looms as anything but a Sunday school picnic.

Stein on Upgrade.

Stein is coming up and Rudy is going down in the game's ranking list and a pleasant 45 minutes—if the battle goes the limit—should be enjoyed by all.

Paul Boesch, one of the favorite sons here, takes on Jack Spellman in the curtain-raiser; Dan McDonald meets big Buck Weaver (not the Black Sox ball player) in another, while the main preliminary will see Hans Steinke pitting his strength against weeping Jim Clinstock's knees. Women fans will be assessed half-price for this show.

Tourney Dates Set.

Bristol, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Dates for the Appalachian Independent Basket Ball Tournament to be held at the Bristol Y. M. C. A. were set for the week of March 12 at a meeting last night. Deadline for team entries was set for midnight Friday, March 9.

Virginia Team Is Ready for Tank Meet

Primed to Retain Crown in Tourney Opening Tomorrow.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Virginia's swimmers are winding up their preparations for the annual Southern Conference championship meet to be held here Friday and Saturday, in which they hope to retain the title they won last year.

In the tank tourney a season ago the Cavaliers pulled a surprise when they piled up 40 points to win first honors. Duke came second, with 35 points, and Washington and Lee third, with 27, while North Carolina State and Maryland brought up the rear.

The 1933 meet was not decided until the last event, the 300-yard medley relay, in which Virginia led Duke to the finish by 3 feet to win the championship. The Cavalier swimmers were Charles Prince, backstroke; Carl Blumenthal, breaststroke, and Edwin O. Morse as anchor man in the final free style.

Prince Entered Again.

Prince, who also won the 150-yard backstroke event, is competing this year, but Blumenthal and Morse are not with the team. Dick Graveley, who won the fancy diving and the 50-yard dash for the Cavaliers, will be in the meet again.

Duke and Washington and Lee are again expected to be strong contestants for the title. Honors favor the Blue Devils, who tied the Cavaliers in a dual meet which was awarded to them when they won the relay event. Carolina State and Clemson are sending entries, and other conference members probably will be on hand when the preliminaries begin Friday afternoon.

Because the 1933 meet was the first since the conference split into two sections a new set of records were established. They are as follows:

400-yard relay, won by Washington and Lee (Rivers, Moreland, Williams and McDavid); time, 3 minutes 59.1 seconds.

200-yard breast stroke, won by McAnaly, of Duke; time, 2 minutes 45.8 seconds.

150-yard back stroke, won by Prince, of Virginia; time, 1 minute 52 seconds.

440-yard free style, won by Carter, of Duke; time, 5 minutes 28.4 seconds.

50-yard free style, won by Graveley, of Virginia; time, 23.3 seconds.

100-yard free style, won by T. Losee, of Duke; time, 59.6 seconds.

220-yard free style, won by McDavid, Washington and Lee; time, 2 minutes 30 seconds.

300-yard medley relay, won by Virginia (Prince, Blumenthal and Morse); time, 3 minutes 23.5 seconds.

Louisville Bankrupt.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 28 (U.P.).—Directors of the Louisville Baseball Club, of the American Association, today voted to file a petition in bankruptcy. The petition will be filed Friday.

Don't Overlook Giants

By Paul Gallico.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Feb. 28.—Outside the palm trees bent their feather head-dresses to the miniature hurricane, black clouds scudded from land out to the green Gulf Stream and the rain poured down in slanting silver torrents. Inside in the tiny locker room a group of athletes was crowded on the benches, or sitting on the floor, their backs up against the lockers. They all wore baseball pants, and hose and spikes.

Some had the shirts, too, with "Giants" lettered across the breast. Old Dolf Luque, the Cuban with the graying hair and the gnarled pan, wore a shiny black leather coat. Fat Fred Fitzsimmons wore something that looked like the top of long winter undies. Parmalee wore a sweat shirt, and Hal Schumacher was naked from the waist up, his torso and magnificent shoulders clean and brown.

William Watson Clarke, the left-hander who used to pitch for Brooklyn, was leaning up against a locker and telling funny stories of former Giant-Brooklyn encounters on the diamond, the lickings he used to take from his present team mates.

How familiar was that scene in the locker room. With the wide-eyed respectful and silent rookies sitting off in corners, or standing up, their mouths a little open, and the regulars, the veterans, the "old men" of the team doing the talking and the laughing and the reminiscing. The rookies have no tales to tell, no wars to live over. They have nothing but hopes, dear hopes to be some day sitting where the regulars sit and exchanging gay tales with their equals while a fresh crop of newcomers looks on as respectfully and as silent. It was the old gap between freshmen and sophomores, regulars and scrubs, all over again. No one who has never been in competition can realie how wide this gap can be and how one longs to bridge it.

Clad in full baseball uniform with the number "11" lettered on his back sat a slim fellow with lean jaws and fine steady eyes. He straddled the bench and talked and laughed occasionally. The newcomers and strangers in the room watched every move he made and never took their eyes off him.

Last fall he was the Nation's hero. His name was, of course, Carl Hubbell, and he has already been made secure of his seat in the Valhalla where great baseball pitchers go.

What dreams must have centered for those rookies in the figure of that slim, quiet man. He was as they, before their eyes, two arms, two legs, eyes, nose and mouth and yet he was different. He was a success, a glorious one. Glory and headlines and money had fallen to his lot. Had it been luck, or skill, or training? Or a combination of all? Did the man have some inner fire that made him great? I could see them searching themselves to see whether they had it. Did it come all of a sudden, or develop slowly? Was there some talisman needed for success? What was it? How could it be acquired? The room was electric with thought.

The little locker room was full of pictures and talk and laughter. They talked of this game and that, men who had been teammates, who had played against one another. They talked baseball. Baseball. Games won by a single run, games lost in an avalanche of runs. They talked of great hitters, and they told stories on themselves.

It was like any crowd of college kids gathered in the gym waiting for the rain to stop. There was only one curious thing about the proceedings. Not once, not at any time while I was there and the rain swished off the tile roof, and the wind kept the palms bowing like butlers, not once did anyone mention the name of John J. McGraw. McGraw the great baseball man, McGraw the developer of pitchers, McGraw, whose name had become one with the Giants over the span of years, McGraw the dead man. He had died the day before.

The next day I watched the practice. The squad was as frisky as a stable of young colts. Fitz was clowning in the infield, Luque was playing straight for him. The hitters were in the batting cage getting their eyes used to the swift flight of the white ball, and the fielders were biting their spikes into the soft earth and for the most part throwing their gloves or waving their hands in tender greeting to the ball as it went whizzing past them.

The training period is yet too young and muscles too tender to risk sudden wrenches and strains and pulls. Sometimes one sees two and three gloves all flying after the same ball. Make no mistake about your Giants this year, amigos. There is a great ball club. The spirit is still there.

I have never seen such an atmosphere about any group of professional athletes since I have been watching sport, not even the old championship Yankee teams. The world's title hasn't gone to their heads one iota. On the contrary, it seems to have spurred them on. Instead of making them cocky and confident and slowing them up, every regular is on hand a week before his time. The boys simply can't wait to get out on the diamond and play ball. You wouldn't pick against a group like that, would you?

Catfish Smith Named To Coach Georgia Nine

Athens, Ga., Feb. 28 (AP).—Vernon (Catfish) Smith today was named coach of the University of Georgia baseball team for 1934, succeeding William P. (Bill) White.

The announcement was made by H. J. Stegeman, director of athletics. White, who coached baseball here for 13 years is now a scout for the Atlanta Crackers. Smith, an all-American end in 1931, has been on the Georgia coaching staff as end coach since he closed his athletic career in 1932.

Outboard Trials Delayed.

New Smyrna, Fla., Feb. 28 (AP). Rain caused postponement today of outboard motorboat trials in which a field of 17 American drivers will seek four positions on a team to compete Saturday and Sunday against six foreign drivers in an international regatta.

Second Delay Seen Aiding Carnera

Garden Stadium Soaked; Outlook on Receipts Up to $60,000.

Let-Down by Loughran Feared; Champ Now in His Stride.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 28 (AP).—As if the situation wasn't bad enough on its own behalf, gusty blasts of rain forced postponement today of Primo Carnera's 15-round heavyweight title defense against Tommy Loughran and threatened to keep putting it off for some time to come.

Technically, the match is set now for tomorrow night, delayed only 24 hours, but the weather reports offered so little encouragement that the Madison Square Garden promoters considered the possibility of another postponement until Monday night.

The weather man said it was rainy and blowy, which one look at the skies confirmed, and he explained that fresh easterly winds, blowing at a velocity of 22 miles an hour, would continue through tomorrow at least. Rain was predicted through the night and, if the winds continue, there was little prospect the showers wouldn't.

Is Thoroughly Soaked.

The situation was particularly bad inasumch as the Madison Square Garden Stadium, where the match is scheduled, is a wide open wooden arena and now is thoroughly soaked by the rains of the past three days.

It is frankly no place to take the sports-clothed fandom of a pleasure center until at least one full day of boiling sun has dried it out.

The postponement came early enough today to prevent Tommy Loughran, the 185-pound challenger, from motoring down here from his training camp at West Palm Beach to weigh in with the 260-pound champion. Carnera promptly hustled into a gymnasium and did enough shadow boxing, bag punching and calisthenics to keep him in hpysical edge while Loughran did the same at his camp.

May Help Gate.

Strangely enough, the sale of tickets, which so far has set a new low record for modern heavyweight title matches, might be helped rather than hindered by the postponement if the weather eventually turns fair. The box offices reported that very few tickets had been redeemed by people who could wait here no longer, and that there was a possibility the gate would go to $60,000.

Previous expert guesses had been $50,000, with the most optimistic predictions going as high as $80,000. In cash money and reservations that are iron-clad, the Garden already has taken in approximately $20,000.

The effect of the postponement on the gladiators was argued freely today as the experts had nothing better to do than sit and watch it rain. The opinion seems to be that Loughran's chances have been hurt more than Carnera's by the delay and the champion is a 3 to 1 favorite to win.

Begins to Hit Stride.

Carnera trained at a slower pace than the former king of the light-heavyweights and only began to hit his best stride late last week. Despite a previous postponement of six days, because a horse show and dance provided competition here the promoters feared couldn't be met, Loughran has worked daily at top speed.

The more facetious among the experts found more reasons than the rain and winds for the postponement. The horseshoe and charity ball have ended, but a flower show starts tomorrow, runs through the week-end, and from the way things have been going financially even that looks like something to worry about.

Inter-State League Will Open on May 7

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 28 (Spl.). At a meeting of the Inter-State Baseball League here it was decided to start the season on Saturday, May 7, with seven teams, and that each team shall play a schedule of 24 contests or 12 in each half of the split schedule.

The decision to continue with seven teams was made when no other applications for franchises were received. The teams enrolled for the championship race are F. O. Eagle, Frostburg Demons, Celanese A. A., American Legion, Potomac Edison, Cumberland B. & O., and Corringansville.

It was decided that the first half of the split schedule shall end the first week in July, while the regular season will be concluded on September 2.

Ponzi Beats Rudolph In Series' Fifth Block

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—Andrew Ponzi, of Philadelphia, took the fifth block of his six-block 750-point challenge match for the world's pocket billiard title from Erwin Rudolph, Cleveland, defending champion, here this afternoon by the score of 122 to 87 in 13 innings.

Ponzi now leads his opponent at the end of 46 innings (unfinished), 625 to 409. Ponzi's high run for the afternoon was 97, the Philadelphian having added 70 more to his unfinished run of 27 last night.

Spicson, 25-1 Shot, Comes From Far Behind to Win by Half Length at Hialeah

Quel Jeu 2d, Beating Out Happy Go

Workman Is Suspended After Patchpocket Is Disqualified.

Crazy Jane Triumphs; Cash Surrender Is Victor at $7.10.

HIALEAH Park, Feb. 28 (AP).—L. M. Severson's Spicson, a colt making his first start since finishing sixth as a field horse in the Kentucky Derby last May, provided one of the major upsets of the local season when he won the Winter Park Purse of 6 furlongs from a field of classy sprinters here this afternoon. Fnding the slow going exactly to his liking, the aptly named son of Spic and Span came from far back with a cyclonic rush on the inside and got up to score by a half length at odds of $52.50 for a $2 ticket.

The Arden Farms' Quel Jeu was second in the blanket finish, a half length before J. R. Buchanan's Happy Go. Eddie Litzenberger, tiny apprentice from Calgary, Canada, completed a double on the winner, which ran the distance in the excellent time of 1:12 3-5.

Open Range Last.

Open Range, the slight favorite, was fractious at the barrier, tossing Don Meade prior to the start. He never could get up and pulled up last in the field of seven. Happy Go, a very speedy colt, set the early pace, well out in front, while Golden Fate, Gift of Roses and Open Range followed.

Spicson and his diminutive rider were next to last until they came to the stretch run. There Litzenberger shot Spicson through on the inside and the few who had tickets on the lucky combination let out a whoop as their selection slowly but surely tore up on the leaders. The Severson representative made the grade in the last few jumps under strong handling. Quel Jeu also closed with a rush to beat the laboring Happy Go.

Xerseise Triumphs.

Sonny Workman booted home Xerseise in the curtain raiser to give favorite players a flying start. The son of The Porter led the Bailiff to the wire by nearly two lengths to return $3.40. Bert Lahr was third, an additional three spans away.

Lee Humphries, sandy-haired jockey who is slated to ride Norman Church's Gallant Star in the Agua Caliente Handicap March 27, gave the lightly regarded Dander a powerful ride to win the dash for maiden juveniles. The young gelding, sired by The Porter, as was Xerseise, first-race winner, worked his way to the front approaching the final furlong and held on gamely in a duel with Tutticurio to win by a head. Aperitif came from well back to land the show, another head away. The winner paid $41.

Patchpocket Disqualified.

Patchpocket, the favorite, finished first in the third race only to be disqualified after lengthy deliberation by the stewards. This gave the purse to Erebus, with Grayback second and Piety third. Sonny Workman, astride Patchpocket, was endeavoring to win both ends of the daily double, which would have paid a short price. Patchpocket was on the outside of Erebus as the pair battled it out on close terms from the start, and Workman appeared to ride his rival close through the stretch. Erebus was beaten a neck. Grayback was a length behind Erebus and a nose before Piety. The winner paid $9.20.

Workman was suspended 10 days by the stewards for rough riding astride Patchpocket.

Crazy Jane Victor.

Crazy Jane, a J. E. Widener cast-off now flying the silks of former Jockey Paul Ratti, and which was a beaten-off in better company last out, made a runaway affair of the fourth race at odds of better than 7 to 1. The Daughter of Haste rushed into a lead of ten lengths before the others knew which way she had gone. At the end, the filly had four lengths to spare over the long shot, Pat C., while My Purchase lost the place by a head.

Frederick High Boys Take County Crown

Frederick, Md., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—The Frederick High boys team, pennant winners in the Northern Division of the county high school league, defeated Emmitsburg, title holders of the Southern Division, before a large crowd at the State Armory, 30 to 26. Emmitsburg girls, champions of the Southern Division, nosed out the Frederick lassies, winners of the Southern Division, 20 to 24.

The victory entitles Frederick boys to meet Annapolis High School, winners of the Anne Arundel County pennant, at the State Armory Monday in the first round of the State-wide Public Athletic League tournament. No decision will be made until Friday regarding a State-wide tournament for girls this year.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

Ben Jonson, early seventeenth century English dramatist, was buried in a standing position in Westminster Abbey. His marker is inscribed "O Rare Ben Jonson." Just why he was buried in that position is a point on which scholars fail to agree, and even his epitaph has been the cause of some controversy. It is the contention of some that the "O Rare" is a mistake, and that it should have been one word "Orare" which is Latin for "pray for."

In Jonson's most famous play, "Every Man in His Humor," the greatest dramatist of all time, William Shakespeare, played a part.

The bed, as a symbol of eternal rest, is used by Indians in their cemetery at Fort Washakie, on the Shoshone Reservation in Wyoming. Although the use of a piece of furniture as a grave marker seems weird to the average person, the Indians reason that their marker is more fitting than merely a cold block of granite.

A moth ball in a glass of soda water will bounce up and down in the water until the water has lost its charge—sometimes for an hour or more. The moth ball, which is just a little heavier than water, will sink to the bottom where bubbles will collect on it, buoying it up to the top. When it reaches the top the bubbles break away, letting it sink again.

Dear Al: Hialeah Race Track, Feb. 28.

There once was a surgeon who was operating on a man's head and laid the brains out on the table. Just then a fire engine went by and the surgeon ran to the window to see the apparatus. He returned to his task, sewing up the subject's head but forgetting to put in the brains. About a year later, the surgeon met his former patient on the street and suddenly remembered that he had failed to put this man's brains back. "And how are you, my good man?" asked the surgeon. "Fine," said the man. So the surgeon decided to question him further. "What are you doing for a living now?" asked the surgeon. "Oh, I'm picking race horses for a newspaper," was his reply. Enough said.

BILL.

First race—Prize Package gets in this opener with 93 pounds which will be in the form of little Litzenberger, and this combination is going to be hard to beat. Portmanteau is reserved for track such as will be encountered tomorrow and will be ready to take it all if the top one makes mistakes. Southard for the show end.

Second race—Johnny Gilbert, the leading 2-year-old rider, akes Ogle postward tomorrow and should bring this one home in front. This pair turned in an encouraging effort the other day. Idle Victory and Alaric figure to take care of the others.

Third race—Seventeen pigs go to market in this sprint and I believe they will run home in this order: Whoop, Scythe and Shuffle Off. You are entitled to your own guess, however.

Fourth race—Any way I figure this race I arrive at the same answer. It's Monel. Jockey Burke, provided he gets away winging, should have little trouble holding the lead. The muddy track will move up Chatmoss. Clotho for a money appearance and a possible upset.

Fifth race—I'm going to take the Labrot entry of Steelhead and Round Table to account for the major end of this purse. Both have worked well on off tracks and I'm told they are going for the heavy dough tomorrow. Jens Son deserves a place call off that last effort. Disaster's recent win indicates another good race.

Sixth race—Eurydice, with Porter to do the booting, gets the Bennings stamp of approval here. Davoc and Flying Gypsy to do the chief chasing.

Seventh race—I'm going to try to make Zembla run a real race for Litzenberger in the final. This baby eats mud. Has light weight here and may surprise by leading Stone Martin and Royal Durbar to the finish line.

Woodward Preps Cop.

Woodward Prep defeated the Friends School quintet, 19 to 15, yesterday on the latter's court. The winners held a 10-5 lead at the half.

Chart of Hialeah Park Races

Associated Press, Wednesday, February 28, 1934.

WEATHER, SHOWERY. TRACK, SLOW.

FIRST RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $800; claiming price, $2,000. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 2:17. Off at 2:20. Winner, Mrs. E. Yost's b. c. (3), by The Porter—Bar Le Duc. Trained by T. R. Queen. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:41 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—XERSEISE, $3.40, $2.70, $2.40; THE BAILIFF, $4.80, $4.20; BERT LAHR, $4.50.

XERSEISE, under good strong handling, was kept close to the pace, moved into lead in stretch, drew away easily in final sixteenth. THE BAILIFF liked the going, showed good speed, but weakened fast. BERT LAHR broke slow and trailed far back for half a mile, came to inside and finished gamely. CABOCHAN ran his race. DAVID W was never a factor.

SECOND RACE—Three furlongs (straightaway), nursery course. Purse, $700; claiming price, $2,500. The Helpful. For 2-year-old maidens. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:45. Off at 2:48. Winner, Brandywine Stable's ch. f. (2), by The Porter—Marmolada. Trained by W. Mulholland. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:35 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DANDER, $41.00, $21.60, $13.50; TUTTOCURIO, $8.30, $6.00; APERITIF, $5.20.

DANDER liked the soft going, broke well, showed good speed, and held on gamely in drive. TUTTICURIO got away fast, showed good speed on the outside, and was wearing the winner down. APERITIF came from far back to annex the show. DEADEYE DICK broke slow, ran straight, and closed a big gap. MICKEY'S MAN and MERRY BUD both ran good races. EARLE MAXWELL never was a contender.

THIRD RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $800; claiming price, $2,000. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:17. Off at 3:19. Winner, J. C. Clark's b. g. (3), by Canter—Dark Goddess. Trained by W. E. Martin. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:40 3-5.

†Disqualified.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EREBUS, $9.20, $4.80, $4.00; GRAYBACK, $8.30, $6.80; PIETY, $7.20.

PATCHPOCKET well ridden. He broke good, but was rated off the early pace, came with a rush in stretch and took lead, but went over, impeding EREBUS, for which he was disqualified for foul. EREBUS displayed good speed. He was kept in on the inside all the way by PATCHPOCKET and held on gamely. GRAYBACK, well up from the start, had no mishap. PIETY ran a much better race and finished fast. PLAYFUL MARTHA moved up fast around turn, but stopped badly in stretch. CABOUSE had speed for six furlongs.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming prices, $2,000 to $1,500. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start poor. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:52. Off at 3:56. Winner, P. Ratti's b. f. (4), by Haste—Nadia. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:13.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CRAZY JANE, $16.30, 12.20, $5.40; PAT C, $19.80, $7.20; MY PURCHASE, $3.20.

CRAZY JANE, showing remarkable improvement over recent race, opened a long lead in first quarter mile, tired at end of five furlongs, but easily held race safe. PAT C got away well, was kept out in the best going, and had no excuse. MY PURCHASE moved up fast after getting away poorly and ran a good race. DROMBO was away last, but closed a big gap. ENERGETIC BOY tired chasing the pace. WEDDING RING did not like the going.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming price, $2,500. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:22. Off at 4:24½. Winner, A. A. Baroni's b. c. (3), by Spic and Span—Sis Garry. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:13 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CASH SURRENDER, $7.10, $3.80, $3.00; CHRYSMUTE, $4.40, $3.60; BARTERING KATE, $3.80.

CASH SURRENDER, at home in the soft going, ran into lead in stretch, drew away, and won nicely in hand. CHRYSMUTE broke a bit slow, but quickly moved up and made a game effort. BARTERING KATE showed good speed for five furlongs, then tired. MACADAM dropped back around turn and could not make up the lost ground. DISTRIBUTE finished with a rush and is about ready to win.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. The Winter Park. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:49½. Off at 4:55½. Winner, L. M. Severson's ch. c. (4), by Spic and Span—Jenny Dear. Trained by F. Rector. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:12 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPICSON, $52.50, $14.40, $6.10; QUEL JEU, $4.90, $3.60; HAPPY GO, $4.50.

SPICSON, making his first start here, showed a decided liking for the going, came through on turn, closed with a rush, and was going away at end. QUEL JEU, on the outside all the way, finished very fast. HAPPY GO, rushed into lead early, displayed good speed, was taken out in the best going, but tired badly. GOLDEN FATE showed good speed early. GIFT OF ROSES showed flash of speed. SABULA was never a factor. OPEN RANGE did not like the going.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles (on the turf). Purse, $800; claiming price, $2,500. For 3-year-olds and upward.

Stocks Driven Lower Under Selling Flurry

Dull Trading Marks Session as Sales Total Drops to 1,317,150 Shares.

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—A late selling flurry chipped away earlier gains in a dull stock market today. Trading was somewhat more active on the short-lived decline than during the slow advance, but transactions for the session totaled only 1,317,150 shares.

At best, numerous leaders were up fractions to around a couple of points, with metals and amusements doing the leading. Steels responded mildly for a time to news on their operations, aircrafts pointed higher and a miscellaneous collection of stocks firmed slowly.

The last hour witnessed a sudden increase of offerings which put the ticker a few minutes behind, and although selling quickly subsided it left the averages with a small net loss for the day.

Interest in Metals.

Speculative interest in the metals appeared to have been stimulated by strength of silver and certain developments affecting that metal. Among them were ratification of the London agreement by China following similar action by the Canadian House of Commons, and proposals for financing sale of silver to Cuba.

Silver production in January rose nearly 30 per cent above December output, reflecting the higher price.

The market's cautious advance through the morning and early afternoon may have been influenced in part by further suggestions for modifying the security regulation act, although a basis for optimism was also offered by the midweek trade statistics. However, the rise in prices was very leisurely and this lack of enthusiasm no doubt had something to do with the later decision to sell.

On List of Favorites.

Occasional favorites of the day included Pathe Exchange "A," Snider Packing, Warner Bros., Paramount, Douglas and United Aircrafts, Armour of Illinois preferred and U. S. Smelting.

American Telephone was fairly firm, but New York Central dragged and a number of prominent industrials, including U. S. Steel, finished fractions to about a point lower.

February closed with a record that sharply contrasted with the same month last year when the banking crisis had virtually paralyzed business. The past four weeks have witnessed a continuation of the recovery movement which started early in December, embracing the heavy industries as well as lighter lines and assuring large percentage gains over 1933.

Outlook for Spring.

How much spring will add to what has already been achieved remains to be seen; some are suggesting that as comparisons are made with the strong rebound of nearly a year ago the rate of improvement will be found to have slackened.

Iron Age reports steel operations at 47 per cent of capacity against 44½ a week ago and says the rise is gaining momentum as miscellaneous consumers come into the market, supplementing automobile takings.

Electric power output last week showed the best gain over a year ago since August, weather conditions having contributed to the showing. Storms also had the effect of curtailing down freight traffic, although last week contained a holiday.

Goods Markets.

New York, Feb. 28 (A.P.).—Cotton goods were firm and moderately active today in the combed goods division of gray cloths. Flannels are very well sold ahead and are scarce for quick delivery. Deliveries are still delayed by storm conditions. Buying interest is increasing in heavy woolens for fall. Rayon sales in the acetate division have increased since price revisions were made. Burlaps were firm and quiet. Cutters show a disposition to turn to silk goods for spring due to slow deliveries of cotton lines.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Various Straws in the Wind Indicate the Probable Effect of Passage of Security Exchange Bill Without an Extensive Overhauling.

By Ralph West Robey.

Sometimes the clearest way to present the significance of a given action is by a recitation of developments that in themselves are relatively unimportant. It is quite possible that such is the case in connection with the security exchange bill. Instead of discussing specific provisions in the measure as it now stands, therefore, I should like to refer to three developments that directly reflect the possible effects of this measure in combination with the "truth in securities" act that already is on our books.

The first of these is the statement on the annual balance sheet and report to stockholders of the Trico Products Corporation of Buffalo, N. Y. The circular is dated February 19, 1934. It contains the customary balance sheet together with a statement of profit and loss and then a memorandum to the stockholders in which is given certain pertinent information about the financial record of the corporation. All of this is valuable data for one interested in making an investment and presumably it is the type of information which the two legislative measures in question have sought to encourage.

Officers Have Added A Disclaimer Notice.

Instead of these acts being an impetus for the presentation of complete details, however, apparently in this case they have served to make the officers reticent. This is indicated by the note which is added after the President's signature. This note reads as follows: "The within report is transmitted at request of addressee and solely for statistical information of the latter. This report is not a representation, prospectus or circular in respect to any statement of the corporation and is not transmitted for any sale or offer to buy any stock or security now or hereafter to be issued or with any preliminary negotiation for such sale."

It seems to me it is fairly obvious that when the officers of a corporation—and needless to say I do not mean this as any reflection on the Trico Products Corporation—feel it necessary to place such a disclaimer upon their statements the public interest is not being served.

The second case concerns the withdrawal by corporations of their securities from listing on the New York Stock Exchange. In the case of two companies of which I happen to know, the boards of directors already have given authority to the proper officials to take such action should the security exchange bill be passed. It perhaps is reasonable to assume that there have been various others that either have or are prepared to take similar action. It no longer is not an academic question, then, of whether passage of the security exchange bill may cause a withdrawal of listings but rather is a fact that the mere discussion of the bill already has started steps in this direction.

Individuals Moving Their Securities to Other Countries.

Finally, and here the information is even more difficult to obtain, is the movement by private individuals of their securities out of the country. This means that they are taking up their accounts on the stock exchange and physically transferring their stock certificates to some other jurisdiction. It is doubtful if there has been any appreciable movement of this kind as yet, but I know positively of one case. The reason for such transfers is the investors fear the consequences of such a measure as the security exchange bill upon the marketability and trading facilities within this country.

As I said above, each of these in itself is insignificant. They simply are straws indicating the way the wind is blowing.

Wool Market.

Boston, Feb. 28 (A.P.).—(U. S. Department of Agriculture.)—Trading generally was very quiet in the wool market. A few inquiries were received and occasionally a sale was closed on a small quantity of wool. Most interest was shown in 64s and finer original bag lines of territory wool and 48s, 50s, 56s blood fleeces. Other lines had a limited call. A small quantity of strictly combing 58s, 60s, ½ blood Ohio and similar fleece wool sold at 36@36½ cents in the grease.

Early Rally In Bonds Cut To Light Gain

President's Relief Plan Aid Business; Trading Totals $13,970,000.

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—Bonds started up with a flourish in the early market proceedings today, but turned back when stocks exhibited reactionary tendencies.

The activity was a little ahead of yesterday, transfers totaling $13,970,000, par value. The average for 60 domestic corporate issues managed to emerge with a gain of two-tenths of a point.

There was nothing especially depressing to bonds in the news. Steel and electric power outputs recorded substantial increases and car loadings, despite weather conditions, apparently were more than holding their own.

New Relief Plan.

The President's new relief plans, which will supersede the CWA activities, were viewed as helpful to the business picture.

February established a record for bond activity in that month with a total turnover of around $400,000,000, par value. With the exception of December 27, 1919, this month also had the heaviest two-hour session on Saturday, February 3, with a volume of $17,426,000. The average gain for the month, however, was only 1.9 points.

Although rail liens yielded much of their advance in today's transactions, they still finished well ahead of the other groups. General gains in this season ranged from fractions to a point or more. Among the best of the carrier issues were some of Baltimore & Ohio, Canadian Pacific, St. Paul, Chicago & Northwestern, Colorado & Southern, Louisville & Arkansas, Denver & Rio Grande, Pennsylvania, Wabash, Western Maryland and Western Pacific.

Utilities Finished Better.

The utilities finished little better than even, but among the industrial advances were retained by loans of Warner Bros., U. S. Rubber, United Drug, Studebaker, Richfield Oil, Pure Oil, Pathe Exchange, Paramount, Hudson Coal, Houston Oil, Dodge Bros., McKesson and National Steel.

U. S. Government securities were quiet and moderately lower. Not much vitality was shown by foreign obligations, although some bonds of France, Bavaria, Japan, Argentina and Finland improved. The Australians, Austrians and Belgians eased.

Coca Cola Net Increases to $10,838,993

Electric Bond & Share Income Declines to $10,735,268.

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—The Coca Cola Co. reports net profit of $10,838,993 for 1933 after expenses, Federal taxes and reserves, equal, after dividends on the Class A stock, to $8.82 a share on the common. This compares with $10,712,672, or $8.67 a common share, in 1932.

American Safety Razor Corporation has increased the annual dividend basis of its capital stock to $4 a share from $3 by declaring a quarterly disburseemnt of $1, payable March 31 to holdings of record March 6. The previous quarterly rate was 75 cents.

The pamphlet report of the Crucible Steel Co. for the year 1933 shows net loss of $354,749, compared with net loss of $3,613,615 in 1932. The company's surplus account increased $383,350 during the year, due to an increase in the value of securities on hand and profit realized from sale of securities.

Electric Bond & Share Co. reports 1933 net income of $10,735,268, equivalent after dividends on the preferred stocks to 44 cents a share on the common stock. This compares with 1932 net income of $13,566,666, or 99 cents a common share.

Gross operating revenues, which are derived from its holdings in controlled and associated public utility companies, amounted to $14,720,672 against $18,896,884 in 1932.

Mack Trucks, Inc., reports net loss of $947,909 for 1933 after charges and provision for losses on inventories, accounts and notes receivable. This compares with loss of $1,479,598 in 1932.

The first 56 railroads to report January earnings had net operating income of $20,639,000, compared with $7,110,000 in the same month a year ago, an increase of 190 per cent; in January, 1932, the same roads reported net operating income of only $6,708,000.

In December, 1933, the roads reported $28,972,000, an increase of nearly 19 per cent over the $24,411,000 reported in the same month in 1932.

Montreal, Feb. 28 (AP).—Directors of Canada Northern Power Corporation today declared a dividend of the common stock of 25 cents for the quarter, placing the stock on an annual dividend basis of $1 as against the rate of 80 cents paid previously.

The payment will be made April 25 to shareholders of record March 31.

Silver Market.

New York, Feb. 28 (A.P.).—The silver market was active at higher prices today. Bar metal advanced ⅝ of a cent to 46⅝ cents an ounce, and the more active months in the futures market improved around ¼ of a cent.

Silver brokers were interested in news reports from Washington that the Cuban government would send a representative to Washington to discuss with the administration a proposal to purchase silver.

The American Bureau of metal Statistics reports 29.6 per cent increase in January silver production in the United States, as compared with December. Total output was 2,025,000 fine ounces, the largest total since March of last year, when 2,574,000 ounces were produced. The rise during the month was 463,000 ounces.

World production increased 11.5 per cent to an estimated total of 14,444,000 fine ounces.

Foreign Dollar Bonds.

Figures on the approximate amounts of foreign dollar bonds outstanding at the end of 1932 and 1933 afford some interesting comparisons. The totals have been segregated by countries, represent the face value of the bonds and have been taken from our annual bond books after making certain necessary adjustments.

*Assuming that $15,000,000 par value of Swedish Government 5½s of 1954 were retired through conversion.

The total par value of all such foreign dollar bonds was reduced from about $5,955,330,000 at the end of 1932 to about $5,557,450,000 at the end of 1933, or a reduction of $397,880,000. The largest individual change, $116,266,100, occurred in the case of Great Britain as a result of last summer's conversion offer. Other substantial reductions took place in the case of Germany, Canada, Italy, Japan, Switzerland, Sweden (the last two because of conversion offers), Argentina and Hungary. A remarkable reduction occurred in the case of the Saar Basin, amounting to no less than 39 per cent. It is also interesting to note the comparatively large retirement last year for Hungary, one of the many countries with foreign debt service restrictions.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—With the revival of activity, a more cheerful tone was registered on the stock exchange today. Industrials strengthened. Courtauld shares leading on the favorable annual report, and gilt-edged securities, gold-mining shares and transatlantic issues also improved. The market closed steady.

Paris—Uncertainty regarding future developments weighed heavily on the bourse, and counteracted more favorable reports from other markets. The closing was weak.

Berlin—Mining, electricity and dye shares were especially active on the boerse today. Prices advanced slightly and closed firm.

Tobacco Market.

Abingdon, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Tobacco prices averaged about $1 higher per hundredweight on the local market yesterday, the warehouse selling 150,264 pounds for $17,461.14, an average of $11.62. Season's sales amount to 14,416,272 pounds for $1,509,831.94, an average of $10.47 per hundredweight. Sales will continue through Friday.

Curb Market Is Irregular; Slight Decline

Oils Suffer Losses as Transfers Increase to 282,000 Shares.

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—Last hour selling caused slight irregularity in final prices on the curb exchange today. The market rallied quietly in the earlier hours for gains of fractions to more than a point, but improvement did not hold entirely and some shares slipped under previous closing quotations.

Losses predominated among the oils. Utilities ended about unchanged, while metals and alcohols finished higher. Some specialties advanced.

Fisk Rubber gained nearly a point in active dealings, while the preferred rose 2½. Bower Roller Bearing gained 2⅜ and Hiram Walker nearly 2. Newmont, Humble Oil, National Sugar, Pie Bakeries and Wright Hargre finished major fractions to a point higher.

Among the power shares Columbia Gas & Electric preferred gained 3, while Consolidated Gas of Baltimore fell back nearly as much. Electric Bond & Share and American Gas & Electric canceled advances of around a point.

Parker Rust Proof sagged 3¼ points. Gulf Oil yielded 2, and Standard Oil of Indiana reacted 1⅜.

Transfers approximated 282,000 shares, compared with 247,000 for yesterday.

Early Cotton Advance Cut In Late Trading

March Closes at 11.86 as Market Is Unchanged to 9 Points Up.

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—A further rise in cotton met increased offerings above the 12-cent level for May contracts today, and was followed by reactions.

After selling up to 12.11, or 15 points net higher, during the early afternoon, May dropped to 11.93 in the late trading, but met a little more trade buying at the decline and closed at 11.98. The general market finished steady, net unchanged to 9 points higher.

Initial prices were up 10@14 points on overnight buying orders and a scattering demand inspired by the relatively steady showing of Liverpool. This was supplied by selling through houses with Japanese connections combined with some liquidation or realizing.

Prices Move Higher.

Prices worked gradually higher during the middle of the day. March sold up to 11.99 and October to 12.37 at the best, or about 14 to 20 points net higher and from 28 to 35 points above yesterday's low level.

More selling developed at the 12¼-cent mark for July, and the market broke rather sharply during the last hour under realizing combined with some New Orleans and Wall street selling, probably promoted by the action of the wheat and stock markets. March eased off to 11.83 and July to 12.08 with the close showing rallies of 3 to 5 points from the lowest.

Exports today 45,551, making 5,601,968 so far this season. Port receipts, 10,188. U. S. port stocks, 3,405,920.

Merchant Ship Tonnage Cut In Germany

Idle tonnage of Germany's merchant marine decreased substantially during 1933 as compared with 1932, according to a report from Consul L. D. Yates, Hamburg, made public by the Commerce Department.

On December 31, 1933, the report shows, the German merchant fleet numbered 1,204 ships, with a total tonnage of 3,475,671. On this date idle ships numbered 149, with an aggregate tonnage of 522,833, or 15 per cent of total tonnage. The number of German merchant ships laid up on December 31, 1932, was 303, whose total tonnage was 917,818, or 26½ per cent of the tonnage of the country's merchant fleet.

During 1932 the idle German merchant fleet amounted to one-third of the total German merchant marine, whereas at that time but 18 per cent of the total merchant marine of the world was idle. Today, as a result of Government aid, the percentage of idle German tonnage is on the same level as that of the rest of the world's merchant marine.

Approximately 400,000 tons of German merchant shipping was scrapped or ordered scrapped under the government program during the last calendar year, while a further 110,000 tons were sold to foreign countries, the report shows.

Rolling Mill Production in Germany Gains

German rolling mill production during 1933 increased by about 29 per cent compared with the preceding year, according to a report from Vice Consul J. H. Wright, Cologne, made public by the Commerce Department.

Total sales of finished products during 1933 amounted to 5,463,233 metric tons, while semimanufactures for sale, amounting to 543,138 metric tons, brought the year's total to 6,006,371 metric tons. The aggregate total in 1932 was 4,552,848 metric tons.

With the exception of slight decreases in the production of universal iron and medium plate, all principal groups of production registered increases in 1933, compared with 1932, the report points out.

German rolling mill production in December, 1933, was 47 per cent higher than that for December, 1932. Output of finished and semimanufactured products during December, 1933, totaled 576,485 metric tons compared with 390,355 metric tons in December, 1932.

Outstanding increases in rolling mill production during 1933, the report shows, occurred in the case of "railway superstructure material," "shapes over 80 millimeters in height and universal iron," "rods and small shapes," "hoop iron," "rolled wire," and "tubes."

Steel Operations Steady.

Chicago, Feb. 28 (AP).—Steel operations in the Chicago district are holding steadily this week at approximately 45 per cent of capacity, the same as last week, and compared to about 20 per cent capacity in the like 1933 week, Dow, Jones & Co. reported.

Daily Oil Yield Is Reduced by 63,100 Barrels

Week's Output Averages 2,226,050 Units; Cut in Imports.

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—Daily average gross crude oil production in the United States decreased 63,100 barrels in the week ended February 24, totaling 2,226,050 barrels, the American Petroleum Institute's weekly summary indicates. Daily average production east of California decreased 43,500 barrels to 1,785,550 barrels.

Refineries representing 92.4 per cent of estimated total capacity, operated at 88.4 per cent of their capacity, reported daily average runs of crude oil to stills as 2,287,000 barrels. Daily average the previous week for refineries representing 92.4 per cent of total, operated at 66.5 per cent of capacity, was 2,224,000 barrels.

Motor fuel stocks totaled 55,976,000 barrels against 55,049,000 barrels.

Daily average cracked gasoline refineries representing 95.1 per cent of total charging capacity was 428,000 barrels. Daily average the previous week by refineries representing 95.1 per cent of total was 433,000 barrels.

Imports of crude and refined oils at principal United States ports totaled 858,000 barrels, a daily average of 122,571 barrels, against 922,000 barrels, a daily average of 131,714 barrels for the previous week.

Portugal Seen As Market for U.S. Potatoes

That Portugal may offer an outlet for American potatoes is indicated in a report from Vice Consul D. V. Anderson, Lisbon, made public by the Commerce Department.

Unfavorable weather conditions in several sections of the country, it is pointed out, have led local dealers to predict that the white potato crop will be below normal and that considerable quantities will have to be imported.

In the event of such development, the report states, it would seem that Portugal may offer an outlet for a share of the business, especially in view of the depreciation of the dollar and the fact that Portugal's principal potato suppliers are countries with gold currencies which have not recently been revalued.

Imports of white potatoes in Portugal have declined from nearly 68,000 metric tons in 1930 to less than 10,000 tons in 1933. While in the former year, a large percentage of the potatoes imported were for consumption, it is estimated that in 1933 about 90 per cent of the imports were for seed, the report states.

Trade Trends.

(Associated Press.)

Blankets—Manufacturers of cotton and part wool blankets in their new price schedules have shortened discounts on 1934 lines, it is reported in the trade. A number of mills are quoting levels which represent advances ranging from 2½ to 5 per cent.

Canned Foods—Fresh blizzard conditions over much of the Eastern territory has brought heavy buying in the canned goods market for replenishing supplies in retail quarters.

Floor Covering—This week's buying has shown some trend toward the active volume which marked the first week of the month. Mills are reported working on full schedules to fill orders on their books.

Car Owners to Spend 3 Billion.

Chicago, Feb. 28 (AP).—The Chicago Motor Club today estimated that American car owners will spend approximately $3,500,000,000 touring in this country this summer.

Home Owners' Loan.

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—Home owners' loans 4s, '51, 8,000—95⅛, 94¾, 95⅛.

Trade Outlook Of Peru in '34 Is Improving

Raw Cotton Industry Leads Way; Construction Activity Rises.

The business outlook in Peru for the current year appears to be distinctly favorable, according to a report to the Commerce Department from Commercial Attache J. D. Smith, Lima.

The optimistic tone which is evident, the report states, is largely the reflection of the very favorable conditions now existing in the raw cotton production industry, which constitutes the best single index of the economic situation of the country.

An increase in construction activity in Peru during 1934 is also indicated, the report states. A $500,000 contract for the completion of the Callao port works was signed on January 17. Work is being started immediately and will require from six to eight months to complete.

Government and municipal plans call for considerable construction activity with "pro-employed" funds in celebration, early in 1933, of the 400th anniversary of the founding of Lima. Lumber, electrical wiring device and hardware dealers all look for an improved demand for their products as a result of the increased construction, and are enlarging orders now in anticipation.

The future continuance of the present feeling of optimism and of the uptrend in business activity which inspires it, the report declares, naturally is dependent to a great extent upon the internal political situation.

If weather conditions continue normal, the cotton crop of the crop year—April, 1934, to March, 1935—should be one of the largest ever produced in Peru. Increased acreage under cotton cultivation is reported from all parts of the country. Although no figures are available, the consensus of opinion in the cotton trade is that this year's crop will approximate 275,000 bales, or 10 per cent more than the figure for 1933-34.

Tobacco Men Agree to Curb Burley Output

Richmond, Va., Feb. 28 (AP).—Approximately 95 per cent of Virginia's burley tobacco growers have agreed to curtail 1934 production under agricultural adjustment contracts, the United States Department of Agriculture at Washington announced today.

The report was made on the basis of the first compilation of results of the sign-up campaign, which was closed officially February 17.

Between 90 and 95 per cent of the burley growers in the Nation at large have agreed to cut production.

The reduction assured by the contracts will limit the 1934 crop to approximately 250,000,000 pounds, J. B. Hutson, chief of the tobacco section, reported. Growers, under the contract, may reduce either one-third or one-half from their base.

Total benefits, including rental and adjustment payments, which will be distributed to participating growers, will approximate $15,000,000. These benefits are to be derived from processing taxes on tobacco of this type.

The percentage of sign-ups in the various States, as estimated from the first tabulations of the extension directors, are as follows: Kentucky, 92 per cent; Tennessee, 90 per cent; Ohio, 91 per cent; North Carolina, 95 per cent; West Virginia, 50 to 60 per cent; Virginia, 95 per cent; Indiana, 75 per cent, and Missouri, 86 per cent.

Investment Men to Vote On Fair Code March 5

Chicago, Feb. 28.—Investment bankers throughout the United States will vote on the fair practice rules for the investment banking code at a meeting to be held in Washington March 5. Notice of the meeting was sent by the Investment Bankers code committee to all investment bankers eligible to vote on the rules, following extended meetings of the committee in Washington. With the announcement the committee also submitted to investment bankers its revised draft of the fair practice rules.

The preliminary draft of the rules was previously submitted on February 19 to regional meetings of investment bankers in 26 cities. All of these 26 meetings reported their deliberations to the code committee in Washington and changes that the committee has made in the rules are said to be mainly based upon the reports from the regional meetings. Excepting certain changes relating to municipal securities, the committee revisions are said to be mainly of a technical nature.

World's Use Of Tin Rises to 127,400 Tons

Most Important Increases Recorded in U. S., France, England, Germany.

New York, Feb. 28.—Substantial increases in tin consumption by the world's leading industrial countries during 1933 are analyzed in a survey just completed by the Hague statistical office of the International Tin Research & Development Council.

World tin consumption for 1933 is officially reported at 127,400 tons, compared with 99,986 tons for 1932.

The most important increases, the report shows, occurred in the United States, the United Kingdom, France and Germany.

Consumption in the United States increased by 23,533 tons to a total of 58,793 tons; in the United Kingdom by 1,455 tons to a total of 19,964 tons; in France by 1,289 tons (preliminary) to 9,965 tons, and in Germany by 1,215 tons to 10,227 tons.

A 38 per cent increase in the world's automobile output during 1933 contributed largely to the greater demand for tin.

The use of tin in manufacture in the United States increased from 40,600 tons in 1932 to 60,910 tons in 1933, a gain of 50 per cent. Consumption of tin by the tinplate industry accounted for the greater part of this considerable increase.

The tinplate manufacturers used 28,380 tons, compared with 16,100 tons in the preceding year, a gain of 76 per cent.

Increases in consumption ranging from 26 to 36 per cent were reported by industries manufacturing babbit metal, solders, collapsible tubes, tinfoil and bronze.

U. S. Exports Of Farm Tools Rise Sharply

Exports of agricultural implements from the United States during January registered an increase of 81 per cent over the corresponding month of 1933, according to figures compiled in the Commerce Department's machinery and agricultural implements division.

The value of January, 1934, exports was $1,102,932 against $609,243 in January, 1933, and $1,450,989 in December, 1933.

The gain in January exports, it is pointed out, was largely accounted for by increased shipments of tractors. Exports of wheel tractors during the month totaled 285, valued at $184,413, compared with 49, valued at $36,512, on January, 1933.

In the tracklaying tractor group, January shipments amounted to 127, valued at $253,721 compared with 32, valued at $47,107, in the corresponding month of 1933. January, 1933, exports of parts and accessories for tractors recorded a moderate gain.

In the harvesting machinery group, increases of which contributed to the general rise, grain harvesters and binders were outstanding, 133 units being exported in January of the current year compared with none in January, 1933. Important increases were also noted in exports of cream separators, spraying equipment, plows, harrows and other cultivation implements, and in feed grinders.

N.&W. Freight Revenue Up $400,000 in January

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 28 (Spl.).—Freight revenue of the Norfolk & Western Railway Co. gained $400,000 in January, with smaller increases in mail, passenger, express and other items, according to a statement issued at the general offices here.

The first month revealed $500,000 gain in operating revenue, but net income of $1,250,872 was below the period of last year.

Radio Waves and Ripples

COLUMBIA'S statistics department got around to counting again the number of times President Roosevelt has used the network in his first year of office. The total is 25.

A finished broadcaster, the President has used radio more widely and with greater effect than any of his predecessors. For a time he threatened to discard entirely the time-honored mouthpiece of Presidents—the press—for the more direct personal-appeal method of his now famous fireside chats.

A Nation heard him at his inauguration and took hope. A Nation listened in as he addressed the opening of Congress last January and had hope confirmed.

It has always seemed to this department that had not the unseen compulsion of circumstances made Mr. Roosevelt an able statesman and administrator, politically shrewd, he would have made an excellent actor. Few men in public life possess such an effective understanding of suspense, climax and denouement.

WRC is installing broadcasting equipment in a room at the Willard Hotel so that Secretary of the Interior Ickes will not have to remain too long away from the White House correspondents' dinner to the President Saturday night in order to start at 10:30 p. m. a series of programs designed to make the Nation park conscious.

The Secretary may remain at the table until a few minutes after 10:30 if he likes, dash to the temporary studio, speak for 20 minutes or so and get right back with the boys.

By park conscious we understand the department to mean consciousness of parks as places in which to do something besides sleep.

That fashion show and tea our Junior League is giving to help the Willard open its new cocktail room today will be broadcast by WRC from 4:30 to 5 p. m. John Slaughter's orchestra is playing.

WMAL'S announcers are still working over details of their special broadcast of another version of Uncle Tom's Cabin. They've just about decided to use costumes. There's nothing like a couple of good stiff costumes to put one in the proper frame of mind for a broadcast.

National's review of the Roosevelt year was a little hard on its continuity staff. Before it was through, it had consulted 112 magazines, 50 newspapers and 13 cross-indexed reference guides as well as its own files. The whole thing was boiled down to about 12,000 words.

Elisabeth Poe as "The Counselor" does a Voice of Experience on the Post program from WJSV this morning. Lora Kelly brings news of clubs to the same broadcast.

Sam Robbins and his Hotel McAlpin orchestra have been added to Columbia's roster of dance bands with a Monday, Tuesday and Friday assignment. Vocal numbers will be handled by June Joy and Del Casino, a tenor.

The Washington Chamber of Commerce and the U. S. Employment Service have supplied continuity writers for Myrt and Marge with material for a tribute to the Capital to be included in the next Wednesday night broadcast.

WJSV is putting Prince Iyesato Tokugawa, head of the Japanese House of Peers, on the Student Federation program at 3:30 p. m. today.

The Jump Overcall.

There is a type of Defensive Overcall known as the Jump Overcall. This is purely a defensive weapon. The Jump Overcall is what its name implies—a bid of one or more tricks more than necessary to overcall an adverse Opening bid. Thus if opponents open the bidding with one club and you overcall with two spades, this is a Jump Overcall. The bid is not a strength-showing bid, but is made with the same purpose as that governing the Simple Overcall, only with the Jump Overcall the distribution of the hand and possible lack of honor strength appear to make imperative more drastic action. The same safety rule is followed in making a Jump Overcall as in making a Simple Overcall. When you make this bid your partner and both adversaries will appreciate the fact that it is not a showing of great strength, but of defensive weakness. Even with full knowledge of this your adversaries can not regain the lost rounds of bidding which you have taken away from them. Your partner infers from this bid that you have a sound, playable suit, probably of great length, at which quite probably a paying sacrifice may be taken. The added protection necessary to make a Jump Overcall safe is usually found in the trump suit itself. Basically Jump Overcalls belong to the same category of bids as Opening Pre-emptive bids, but ordinarily are not as strong in playing strength as, for instance, opening three- or four-bids, because made at a lower level and because the exigencies of the situation, after opponents have opened the bidding, may suggest the wisdom of more drastic action.

An example of a sound Jump Overcall made in tournament play occurred in the recent United States Bridge Association tournament in New York in the team-of-four match.

South, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

	♠ A 10 8 2 ♡ 10 6 3 ◇ J 10 6 3 ♣ 7 4
♠ 6 ♡ K Q J 7 4 2 ◇ A 8 7 4 ♣ Q 10	N W E S	♠ Q J 5 ♡ A 9 8 ◇ K 9 5 2 ♣ J 6 3
	♠ K 9 7 4 3 ♡ 5 ◇ Q ♣ A K 9 8 5 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♣	3♡	Pass	Pass
Pass

The result of the Jump Overcall in this instance was that North and South, being vulnerable, did not reach the game in spades which they could make. Effectually used, the Jump Overcall is the most important weapon in the hands of the Contract player.

Tomorrow's Hand.

If North is playing the contract of four spades and West has won the first trick with the club Ace, what card should he return, and why?

South, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ A Q J 8 3 ♡ J 10 2 ◇ K 10 4 ♣ 10 8

	♠ K 7 6 2 ♡ Q 9 6 3 ◇ A J 7 2 ♣ K

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

EQUAL PAY must be given for equal work, E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes reiterates in appealing to Director of the Budget Lewis Douglas for assistance in repealing a section of the independent offices appropriation bill.

BAKER.

The appeal followed an order in which Mr. Douglas quoted the President: "* * * the President has requested me to inform you that it is his desire that no contacts or negotiations be made by officers or employes of one department or agency with employes of another department or agency, with a view to securing the services of such employes before approval is given for such contacts and negotiations by the heads of the organizations concerned."

"This proves," Mr. Babcock points out, "the same work is paid different amounts of money in different establishments. It is indicative of retrogression toward the old log-rolling statuatory provision for the payment of salaries. It is the avowal of the death of the principle that equal pay must be given for equal work.

"There is only one solution to this and it is the return to the classification principle, which is that equal pay shall be given for equal work, wherever performed.

"During the years that the classification act was in effect, no such ridiculous restrictions were necessary. Now that it has been nullified for two years, these restrictions which prevent employes from seeking better paid work are apparently about to be restored," the labor leader continued.

The order means that employes may not seek betterment because officers may not even talk to them about transfers, Mr. Babcock further pointed out.

Illustrated Lecture Tonight.

"Mountaineering in the Sierra Nevada" will be the subject of an address in the auditorium at Interior Building, at 8 p. m. today, by Ansel F. Hall, chief of Education and Forestry Division, National Parks, Buildings and Reservations.

The lecture will be illustrated with slides and motion pictures of the high Sierra country. The public is invited by the Potomac Trail Club, under whose auspices the program is presented.

George H. M. Dahl (*), Government Printing Office, has patented a machine for making printers leads and rules of exceptionally light weight.

Student Nurses Needed.

Dearth of applicants for student nurse examinations at St. Elizabeths Hospital is reported by Civil Service Commission. There are 25 vacancies and more are expected later. Only 11 applications have been filed. The tests will remain open until March 6.

The course of training extends for three years, one year of which is spent in an affiliated general hospital. Those who complete the course and who are graduated will be eligible for promotion to the grade of nurse at $1,620 a year. A small salary with quarters, subsistence, laundry, and medical attention is offered during the training period.

Acceptable applicants must have been graduated from a standard four-year high school course or have completed at least 15 units of high school work acceptable for college entrance. A further requirement is that applicants must have reached their eighteenth, but not their thirtieth birthday on March 6. These age limits, however, do not apply to persons granted preference because of military or naval service.

Additional information is available at Civil Service Commission, Seventh and F streets northwest.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF your name in this column is followed by (*), call in person on the Federal Diary Editor between 4:30 and 6 p. m. You will receive tickets to Loew's Fox (stage, three vaudeville acts; screen, Ramon Navarro in "The Cat and the Fiddle"), or to Loew's Palace (Greta Garbo and John Gilbert in "Qpeen Christina"), or to Loew's Columbia (Jackie Cooper in "The Lone Cowboy"). Persons whose names appear on holidays, call the next day.

First thing in the morning
She chewed with much aplomb,
And as she ate her luncheon,
One side she chewed her gum.
As it approached four-thirty,
Her jaws were getting numb,
But she bravely made a street car,
Caught a strap, and rolled her gum.

Athletic Association Planned

Formation of an athletic association for Government workers under auspices of the National Federation of Federal Employes, is being planned by J. Earle Moser, manager, of the Federal Unionist baseball team in the Departmental League.

The association would support representative teams in baseball, basket ball, bowling, tennis, swimming and other sports.

Miss N. Gwendolyn Rusk (*), Coast and Geodetic Survey, went on leave recently and returned to work this week as Mrs. John M. Riecks. As evidence of her popularity, her many friends at the office gave her a big bunch of roses and an electrical percolator set. Dr. Riecks is a teacher at the Alice Deal Junior High School. They were married in the parsonage of the Waugh M. E. Church, February 21, and spent the honeymoon in Atlantic City.

Regain Jobs.

employment list last week while 17 were added, only one of the additions being in Washington, the commission reported yesterday. Total remaining on the register for the week ending Saturday night is 2,802.

In addition, five persons were reported as given temporary employment. Total number of eligibles on reemployment list now holding temporary positions is 327.

Federal employes are invited to attend a lecture tonight by Elmer Rice, famous author of "Street Scene" and "Counsellor at Law," at the Jewish Community Center. The program will begin at 8:15.

Postettes.

C. W. Knox, Animal Husbandry Division, Agriculture, is in Chicago attending the American Institute of Poultry Industries conference this week.

Jack Walton (*), Ordnance, Navy, is celebrating the second promotion in a year. His increased duties have caused his withdrawal from George Washington University Night School, but he will resume his course there next fall.

Mrs. Etta Lou Brenner, RFC, visited friends in Norfolk and Richmond recently.

Miss Eunice Bratton, General Files, RFC, will leave today for a three weeks' visit in St. Petersburg, Fla.

Miss Peggy James, Accounting, RFC, is spending a few days at her home in Laceyville, Pa.

Harold Durkin, Identification Unit, Justice, is in New York this week on business.

Mrs. Blanche Beckwith, Loans and Currency, Treasury, entertained a group of friends of Numbering Section, Bureau of Engraving and Printing, recently.

C. H. Spencer, Engineering Section, ICC, is back at his desk after an illness.

J. B. Cunningham, Accounting Section, ICC, has returned to work after being ill three weeks.

James F. Kirwin, Accounting Section, ICC, and Mrs. Kirwin are visiting in Miami, Fla.

Mrs. M. R. Lucas, Estate Tax, Internal Revenue, enjoyed a trip to Florence, S. C.

Mrs. Kitty B. Suwall, (*), Disbursing Division, Treasury, was entertained by friends in Baltimore recently.
